'PAST CRISIS'; CERMAK RESTS

Senate Submits Dry Repeal 63 to 23

LEADERS SEE O. K. BY HOUSE NEXT MONDAY

State Conventions Will Follow.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Rejuvenated wet congressional leadership today moved swiftly to blast federal prohibition out of the constitution by submitting the question of repeal direct to the states.

The senate, by the surprising majority of 63 to 23, reversed its thirteen year dry stand and approved the revamped Blaine resolution submitting repeal of the eighteenth amendment to constitutional conventions in each of the forty-eight states. As adopted at a dramatic session, the resolution provided for outright repeal, except for federal protection for dry states against liquor importations.

House to Act Monday.

Immediately after the senate move, Speaker John N. Garner announced the house will take up the senate repealer Monday under suspension of the rules. He predicted, after a canvass of Republican and Democratic vots, that the resolution would be approved unchanged. As only house approval is needed to make it effective, favorable action on Monday would place the repeal resolution before the states for ratification that same day or on Tuesday at the latest.

The main prohibition battlefield would thus be shifted from the capitol to the forty-eight states. Approval of thirty-six, or three-fourths of the total forty-eight, is necessary to purge the constitution of the eighteenth amendment. White House approval is not required.

Size of Vote Surprise.

The size of the winning vote, five more than the two-thirds needed, was a stunning surprise to the wets as well as to professional drys who watched from crowded galleries as the skids were placed under the "noble experiment," and the first major legislative move taken to erase the eighteenth amendment from the constitution. The decisive victory marked one of the most spectacular overturns in the history of American politics for only six months ago the senate had been able to muster only twenty-two wet votes.

Whether the senate will follow up its victory by voting beer before President Elect Roosevelt is inaugurated was doubtful tonight. Senate leaders expressed doubt as to whether they could get the Collier-Blaine 3.05 beer bill up. The decision tonight was to give appropriation bills the right of way for the present despite the clamor for quick beer.

Blaine Resolution Discussed.

The Blaine resolution, as it crashed through senate dry ranks today to write new prohibition history, approaches but does not quite reach the goal of "naked repeal" set by Democratic leaders. As approved, it carries no ban against the saloon, but it does provide for the protection of dry states against the inflow of liquor. Ratifications are to be through specially called state constitutional conventions rather than legislatures. With more than half the state legislatures now in session, repeal parade among the states may be well on the way by the early weeks of the Roosevelt administration.

Approval by the states of the senate repealer, as now written, would end thirteen years of national prohibition and domination by the Anti-Saloon league. The vote doing that was five more than the needed majority and followed the mandate of the presidential election.

The announcement by Vice President Curtis that the repealer had carried climaxed three days and two nights of slashing attack and counter attack on the part of wets and drys.

Victory for Robinson.

It also marked a major victory for the Democratic leadership of Senator Joseph T. Robinson [Dem., Ark.], and may have clinched his claim to the majority leadership in the new senate.

The huge majority piled up for the substitute for the 18th amendment was made up of thirty-three Democrats, twenty-nine Republicans, and one Farmer-Laborite. Voting against the amendment were 14 Republicans and 9 Democrats, a total of 23.

Two days ago the chances for dry repeal were believed so slight that certain of the wets were really to give

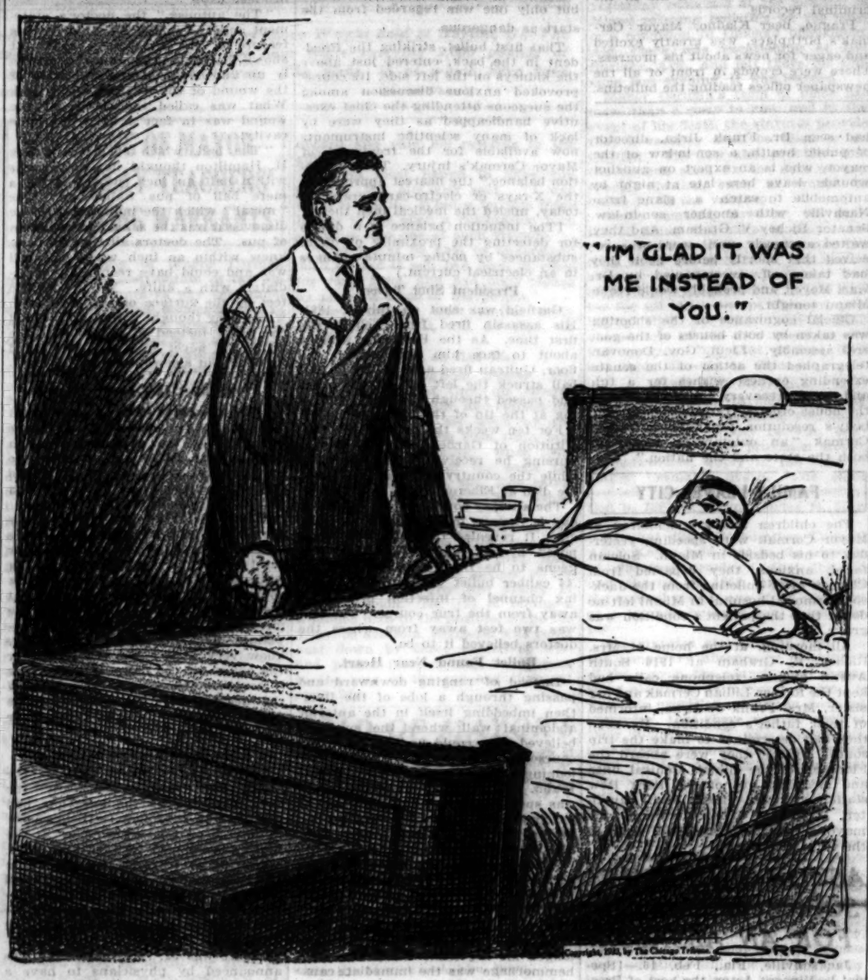
THE VOICE OF A PATRIOT



GUY ACQUITTED IN WANDERWELL MURDER TRIAL

Long Beach, Cal., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—A jury in the court of Superior Judge Robert Kenny tonight found William J. [Curly] Guy not guilty of the murder of Capt. Walter Wanderwell, Polish adventurer who was shot to death on the yacht Carma last Dec. 5 as the craft was outfitting for a South sea cruise. The jury deliberated five hours.

The testimony against Guy, a 23 year old native of Wales, was of a circumstantial nature. It was testified that Guy and his bride had been put ashore from a vessel on one of Wanderwell's previous expeditions at Panama.

Guy appeared in Los Angeles some time after Wanderwell had put him ashore and was identified by three prosecution witnesses—two of them attractive young girls who had agreed to join Wanderwell's unusual crew on the Carma—as a mysterious man whose face showed through a porthole of the Carma.

MISSILE TOSSED INTO HOME OF DAIRY OWNER

Terrorists last night tossed a large piece of concrete through a second floor window of the home of Howard A. Wanzer, president of the Sidney Wanzer & Sons Dairy company. The Wanzer home, at 6462 Kimbark avenue, has been guarded by police for several weeks since the receipt by Wanzer of letters threatening to bomb it.

Policeman John Gassmere of the Woodlawn station was on duty at the residence last night. He was in the house talking to Mr. Wanzer when the attack occurred. The policeman ran to the street, but saw no one who might have thrown the stone.

YOU SHOULD HAVE BEEN FLOGGED, LADY ASTOR TOLD

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The only break in the monotony of today's debate in the house of commons on idleness came when George Lansbury, leader of the Labor opposition, irritated by interruptions from Viscountess Astor, exclaimed:

"Your mother should have flogged you!"

Lady Astor jumped up, raising a point of order with the question as to whether Mr. Lansbury "really believes in parents flogging children." The speaker ruled Lady Astor out of order on the ground she had been a member of the house long enough to know her question was not a point of order.

Senator Ejects Armed Guard at Long Quiz

New Orleans, La., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Joe Messina, head of Senator Huey P. Long's armed bodyguards, was ejected from the senatorial investigation committee hearying late today after a witness complained of his presence. Messina admitted to Senator Howell that he was armed and ejection order followed.

For several years Messina has been a constant attendant with others on Senator Long at his nearly every public appearance here.

Wheaton Stilson, another of Long's guards, declared he was unarmed and was permitted to remain.

Intimidation Is Charged.

Joseph Boudreaux, a Broussard campaign worker during the primary, complained to S. T. Ansell, senate counsel, that he and other witnesses were being intimidated by armed men and pointed out Messina and Stilson. Boudreaux had just shaken his finger in Senator Long's face and said, "You're not going to call me a liar like you've called other people here."

Boudreaux had told about these armed guards calling witnesses liars "You know that there are bodyguards in here carrying guns?" Gen. Ansell asked.

"Yes, I know it, and everybody else in Louisiana knows it," Boudreaux said, and then recited how he had been beaten in the state capitol.

Senator Howell then said: "This is the United States senate. You can't be armed in here."

"You Can't Bluff Me."

Boudreaux, while being cross questioned by Senator Long, shouted at the Kingfish, "You can't bluff me, and you know you can't."

"How many times have you been arrested?" asked Long.

"Once," replied Boudreaux, "when your Black Satchel, Bob Brothers, who carries a satchel with the money you steal in it, and myself had a fight, and I licked the tar out of him. I was fined $5 and the sheriff who arrested me paid the fine. I tell you now you can't bluff me, because if you do, I'll come right down after you. You are a malicious liar."

From Julius T. Long, elder brother of Senator Huey P. Long, came testimony painting the official and political life of the Kingfish in even blacker terms than those used by Earl K. Long, another brother, two days ago. Extracts from Julius Long's testimony are:

"Huey Long accepted a huge roll of bills from Seymour Weiss and Mike Ross, then president of the Union Indemnity company, and then remarked that Thellman Indemnity company would get all the insurance.'

"The Kingfish compelled all jobholders, even those in the board of health and charity hospital, to hustle in distribution of his circulars and in other campaign activities."

"In raising campaign funds the Kingfish gouged contractors and cement men for gifts of $500 or $1,000."

Wounded Detective Friend of Roosevelt Since 1929

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Detective William J. Sinnott, wounded in yesterday's attempted assassination at Miami, has been a friend of President Elect Roosevelt for several years. That was revealed today. Sinnott caused the arrest of Dick Richards, a confidence man with a record that goes back to 1890. The Richards arrest, which first brought Sinnott into contact with Mr. Roosevelt, who was then governor, took place in 1929.

ASSASSIN FACES COURT TODAY; SPURNS LAWYER

Insists He Is Not an Anarchist.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Giuseppe Zangara, the man who tried to kill the next President, wants to face Florida's courts without benefit of counsel.

But Florida authorities insist Zangara—a naturalized American who "hates" governments—must have the "best of counsel" so there'll be no accusations that he was "railroaded."

He will be arraigned at 11 a. m. tomorrow on four charges of assault with intent to kill.

A special grand jury will be convened tomorrow, and while the order did not mention the tragedy, the state's attorney's office let it be known it would be prepared to serve ends of justice quickly in event any of the victims died.

Charges Thus Far Filed.

The charges filed thus far cover the attempt on Mr. Roosevelt's life and the shooting of three of the five persons who were wounded. Pending the outcome of their wounds, the charges do not include the wounding of Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago and Mrs. Joe Gill of Miami, who stopped bullets intended for President Elect Roosevelt.

Under the charges preferred a maximum aggregate of 80 years' imprisonment is possible, but should death result from one of the shots a charge of murder, carrying capital punishment, might be filed.

"I don't want anybody to help me," the assailant said when he appeared before Criminal Court Judge E. C. Collins. "You're the judge and you can do what you want to do."

Insists on Orderliness.

The judge insisted that the orderly arrangement of judicial government be followed and delayed arraignment until tomorrow so counsel could be selected for Zangara. Judge Collins said he wanted to prevent any accusation that the assailant "had been railroaded."

Rumors that an attempt might be made to lynch Zangara caused Sheriff Dan Hardie tonight to bar all persons from the county jail, where the prisoner is lodged. The sheriff ordered a guard stationed at the official elevator, instructed to deny entrance to all persons except policemen.

Zangara was taken back to jail after the hearing—to a steel cell twenty-one stories above the ground. From there he can see Bay Biscayne, fanned by gentle breezes like the seas of his native Italy.

His jailers knew he was awake tonight as they peered into his darkened cell. They said they saw his eyes flicker. His face is dark—rawboned.

His English is somewhat broken.

Not Against Police.

"Why do you want to kill?" he was asked. "Did you want to kill the policemen who caught you?"

"I no care to kill police," he replied. "They work for living."

He said, "I want to kill all presidents. In Italy, ten years ago, I want to kill the king, but I cannot get to him."

"I am not an anarchist," he said. "Sometimes I get big pain in the stomach, too, and then I want to kill these presidents who oppress the workingmen."

He came to Miami two months ago, he said, "Because they tell me it will help these pains in my stomach."

MAYOR SLEEPS, FEVER ABATES; CONDITION O. K.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 17 (Friday).—(AP)—Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago was reported resting quietly at Jackson Memorial hospital at 2:30 a. m. (Chicago time) today.

Hospital attendants said Mrs. Joe H. Gill, also seriously wounded by the assassin, had a sinking spell early today, but was revived by stimulants.

Two nurses were kept constantly with Mayor Cermak and a policeman was on guard outside his door.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The last official bulletin issued by physicians tonight on the condition of Mayor Cermak of Chicago, suffering from a bullet wound in the Jackson Memorial hospital, was:

"Mayor Cermak's rest continued to be broken only for short intervals. His pulse is 96 and of satisfactory quality; temperature, 99.6; respiration, 20; blood pressure has recovered to normal level and the patient is requiring much less sedative."

The significant statement that the general condition of the mayor is "very satisfactory and that his fever has abated" was added at midnight. At that time all lights on his private hospital floor were out and he was said to be sleeping quietly.

SQUADRON OF 5 STATE PLANES FLIES TO MIAMI

Five Illinois National Guard planes left the Chicago airport yesterday for Miami, Fla., carrying Floyd Kenlay and two Chicago policemen to the bedside of Mayor Cermak. Kenlay is the mayor's son-in-law. The planes were led by Major Merrill D. Mann, who commands the National Guard aviation unit. They were expected to reach Miami some time this morning.

The policemen who accompanied Kenlay are John Sherping and Michael J. Abern, both former bodyguards for Mayor Cermak. Other pilots besides Maj. Mann are Capt. C. A. McElvain and Lieuts. W. V. Newhall, R. R. Burley, and L. M. Marriner, the heavyweight boxer. Clarence Kenlay, brother of Floyd, and Master Sergeant E. T. Abern of the Guard aviation unit, also made the trip.

Inquiries made last night as to who had authorized the flight brought word from Springfield that Adj. Gen. Carlos E. Black of the National Guard knew nothing of the flight. Later it was disclosed at the Chicago airport that an order had been posted in the National Guard hangar which stated that the planes were to proceed to Miami by "verbal order of Roy D. Keehn," who is major general of militia.

The five planes landed at Evansville, Ind., at 5:59 p. m. to refuel.

Washington Letter Sells for $3,750 at Auction

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—A letter by George Washington, in which he laid down the maxim "Founded on the universal experience of mankind, that no nation is to be trusted farther than it is bound by its interest, and no prudent statesman or politician will venture to depart from it," brought $3,750 tonight at the American Art association, Anderson Galleries, Inc. It was offered at the auction of rare Americana from the library of Levi Z. Leiter, wealthy Chicago merchant, who died in 1904. The buyer was Gabriel Wells.

DOCTORS DECIDE NOT TO OPERATE TO GET BULLET

Patient Is Cheerful; Daughter Arrives.

BY FRANK HINMAN.

(Pictures on Back Page.)

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16.—A message more optimistic than any coming from the bedside of Mayor Cermak of Chicago since he was wounded last evening by a bullet fired at President Elect Roosevelt was delivered late tonight by Dr. J. W. Snyder, attending physician.

"The mayor's condition," he said, "has definitely changed for the better. The immediate crisis due to shock has been passed and he is apparently growing stronger. His chances for recovery improve hourly."

Mayor Sleeps Well.

Another physician, Dr. E. Sterling Nichol, emphasized that Mayor Cermak has no fever; that his pulse is good; that he slept well through the afternoon and evening without heavy opiates, and that he is in a courageous and even cheerful frame of mind.

With a third physician, Dr. T. W. Hutson, concurring, announcement was made that no operation would be attempted to remove the bullet, as this would be more likely to cause death than to aid in recovery. The mayor, it is probable, will carry the would-be assassin's bullet near his spine the rest of his life.

Zangara Is Arraigned.

The events of last night and their aftermath of developments today furnished all absorbing topics of conversation on the beaches and in the hotels and streets of Miami, now crowded with winter visitors from the snowbound north. Among these developments were:

1. The arraignment of Giuseppe Zangara, the seemingly crazed brick-maker-cigar maker who fired at Mr. Roosevelt in crowded Bay Front park, on charges of assault with intent to kill.

2. Announcement that all of the six victims struck by his bullets were recovering except Mrs. Joseph H. Gill of Miami, who is in a serious condition.

Roosevelt Visits Cermak.

3. A visit by President Elect Roosevelt to all the wounded shortly before he departed on a northbound train.

4. Visits paid to the Jackson Memorial hospital, where the mayor is fighting his battle for life, by a number of distinguished Chicagoans and the receipt of 2,500 telegrams of condolence from his friends all over the country.

The only possibilities of acute danger to Mayor Cermak, according to the physicians, lie in pneumonia or a weakened heart. Some of the heart fibers, it was indicated, are paralyzed from causes not connected with the bullet.

Bullet Near Backbone.

In nontechnical language this bullet lies exactly in the midline of the body at the upper margin of the eleventh dorsal vertebra—at the backbone. It entered the body on the right side at the level of the ninth rib and coursed slightly downward as it passed toward the back. There is no evidence, the physicians said, that it fractured the rib at the point of entry. They added:

"The bullet has produced little fracture of this (eleventh) vertebra. In fact, no displaced fragments of bone are noted by the X-ray in this area.

"In estimating the course of this bullet it is evident that the spinal cord would escape injury. It (the course) lies too high to have affected the right kidney, but it is possible that it passed through the posterior margin of the liver."

Pneumonia Possible.

The physicians declared that the hemorrhage had been slight and that this was a definitely favorable sign. Unless pneumonia or infection sets in within the next three or four days, or the heart of the mayor fails to maintain its strength—an unlooked for contingency—they hazarded the opinion that he would almost surely recover. His chances to recover, in any event, are looked upon as better than even.

At intervals during the day Mayor Cermak spoke to his nurses and physicians. The tenor of his remarks was hopeful.

"I know that all Chicago is puling for me, and I will pull through for Chicago," he said.

The promise was made to Ald. James B. Bowler, who stood beside the mayor when the gunman's bullet struck him and who called to President Elect Roosevelt to take his wounded chief to the hospital. The alderman was the only friend allowed in the sickroom during the day.

Chicagoans Pay Respects.

Among those who called to pay their respects were John Hertz, Charles McCulloch, and A. D. Lasker, all well known Chicagoans who are here for winter vacations.

This evening Mrs. Helen Kenlay, daughter of the mayor, arrived in Miami and went at once to the hospital. Told that her father was sleeping and should not be disturbed, she went to the Miami home of her sister, Mrs. Frank Jirka, for the night. She had hastened here by plane and train from Chattanooga, Tenn., after she was informed of the tragedy.

Hastening here to render whatever aid the Chicago chief executive may need were his sons-in-law, Dr. Frank Jirka and Richie V. Graham, and Dr. Karl Meyer, medical warden of the Cook county hospital in Chicago. They attempted to reach Miami by plane, but were forced down at Jacksonville and will not get here until tomorrow morning. Dr. Meyer is noted as a specialist in gunshot wounds.

Gov. Horner on Way.

Gov. Horner of Illinois also was reported on his way here. His personal physician, Dr. Walter Hamburger of Chicago, was here today and was called into consultation by the physicians in charge of the case.

Aside from the mayor only Mrs. Gill of the five shooting victims was regarded as in a serious condition. Her improvement in condition, it was said, began after the President elect had called on her after his visit to Mayor Cermak. She was struck in the abdomen and a blood transfusion was resorted to. The physicians announced that a second transfusion was not needed now and that if another was decided on it would not be undertaken for three or four days.

Five Others Injured.

Mrs. Gill is the wife of the president of the Florida Power and Light company. The others hurt were Russell Caldwell of Cocoanut Grove, Fla.; William Sinnott, New York City policeman; Miss Margaret Kruis of Newark, N. J., and Robert Clark, a member of the Roosevelt bodyguard. Sinnott and Caldwell, as well as Miss Kruis, have slight wounds in the head. Clark was barely grazed by one of Zangara's bullets.

It was learned here tonight that Dr. Hugh H. Young, member of the surgical staff of Johns Hopkins university, had credited President Elect Roosevelt with saving the life of Mayor Cermak. After hearing that the President Elect had held the mayor's pulse and spoken words of encouragement to him as they proceeded together to the hospital, Dr. Young said:

Shows Presence of Mind.

"Mr. Roosevelt displayed an accurate knowledge of anatomy and great presence of mind. He did the very things that often will save a man who is near death from shock. I consider it quite likely that he saved the life of Mayor Cermak."

[The arraignment of Zangara and his statements and the visit of President Elect Roosevelt to the hospital are told in other columns of this issue.]

HAWAII MAY BAR THE HULA GIRL AS LURE FOR TOURIST

HONOLULU, Feb. 16. — (AP) — Hula girls and half clad bathers would be erased from the outsider's picture of Hawaii in favor of such things as industry, education, and government, under recommendations made to the legislature today by the Hawaii legislative commission. Thrusting at methods of advertising Hawaii to tourists, the commission reported:

"In appealing to the tired business man of the mainland, this advertising has so emphasized the lure of Hawaii as a tropical resort as to give an entirely one-sided, misleading picture of life. Its population has been illustrated in various forms of nudity calculated to convey the impression that it is wildly foreign."

HELD ON CHECK CHARGE; SAYS HE HAS 6 DOUBLES

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 16. — [Special.]—Joseph Duberstein, 32, accused of passing a worthless check for $975 on Max Gronik, 1425 West Juneau avenue, today pleaded before Circuit Judge John J. Gregory that he has six doubles, some of whom always are getting him into trouble. His attorney, Charles Swidler, promised to produce them tomorrow.

Duberstein's picture was published last year after he was arrested on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. Grocer Gronik saw it and went to the district attorney, to whom he said, "There is the man who gave me the rubber check."

An affidavit of prejudice was filed against Municipal Judge George A. Shaughnessy and his case was transferred to the Circuit court.

"WE NEED YOU," ROOSEVELT TO MAYOR CERMAK

Hopes 'Tony' Will Be Up Soon.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—A heartfelt wish from President Elect Roosevelt was made to Mayor Anton Cermak this morning. "Tony, I hope you will be up and around soon. We will need you at the inauguration."

Mayor Cermak smiled wanly instead. "I hope so. I hope I will be up for the inauguration, but I feel pretty bad now."

Jackson Memorial hospital, a low rambling building, is located in the northwest section of Miami, amidst a setting of palm trees. To approach it one must wind through lanes of hibiscus, oleanders, jasmine, and crocus bushes. The nurses' home, which resembles a palatial winter home, is set back several hundred feet from the main building. Up this winding lane early yesterday morning, with a motorcycle escort assisting policemen, headed by secret service men, silently came the Roosevelt automobile.

Roosevelt Enters Hospital.

Mr. Roosevelt was assisted out of the automobile, placed in a wheelchair and rolled into the hospital.

A bevy of pretty young nurses—the hospital has a training school—was standing at the entrance and along the walls of the corridor, Mr. Roosevelt was taken to the room of Mayor Cermak.

A few friends, several secret service men and Miami detectives were present when the President elect was ushered into the anteroom.

Mr. Roosevelt, his secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre, and the physicians, Drs. E. S. Nichols and T. W. Hutson, and Ald. James Bowler of Chicago entered the mayor's room.

Mr. Roosevelt also visited the room of Mrs. Mabel Gill, wife of the president of Florida Light and Power company. She was wounded last night and has been unconscious since her arrival at the hospital. She may not recover.

Visits Other Victims.

After visiting the room of the three other wounded persons, whose condition is not so serious, Mr. Roosevelt left the hospital, after being presented with a large bouquet of American Beauty roses by the head of the nurses' staff. As he was assisted into his automobile, he waved his hand smilingly he said, "Good-by, good-by. Thank you all."

Two phone calls were received from London, England, at the hospital this morning.

Before any visitors can reach the anteroom, they must pass through a cordon of questioners, all men detailed to watch for any possible crank that may stray into the hospital. Capt. Joe Goldberg and Policeman John Ptacek of Chicago guard the outer door.

Two Morton Grove Fire Deaths Held Accidental

A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday at the inquest over the bodies of Mrs. Mildred Baron, 30 years old, and her daughter, Joan Dolores, 3½ years old, who were burned to death Wednesday in their living quarters above the Club Walton, a roadhouse in Morton Grove. Chief Frank Boemmel of the Morton Grove volunteer fire department testified the fire started in the chimney on the second floor.

HORNER STARTS FOR BEDSIDE OF MAYOR CERMAK

He Decides to Go Despite Favorable Reports.

BY PARKE BROWN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Henry Horner is speeding southward tonight on a forty-five hour journey to reach the bedside of a beloved friend whom he calls "Tony."

Each has a title of high distinction. Horner is governor of Illinois. His friend "Tony" is mayor of Chicago. But when they meet they will address each other as "Judge" and "Tony." There will be no stilted language, but there may be a hidden tear or two.

Ever since Mayor Cermak was stricken last night at Miami by a bullet intended for Franklin D. Roosevelt, Gov. Horner has been insistent by long distance telephone and otherwise upon the latest information about the patient — the precise facts. The staff of the Jackson Memorial hospital in Miami have learned to know his voice. A medical friend of his was in Miami by chance and he was dispatched to the hospital to make a special report.

Takes 8:15 Train.

The latest reports were cheering to him, brought the smile back to his face. But tonight as he completed the last of the heavy duties of the day and left his office he ordered a reservation made for him on the first train bound for Florida. It was the 8:05 Illinois Central which would make connections bringing him into Miami at 4:30 Saturday afternoon. With a single companion, John Casey, a member of his staff, he made ready to take that train.

There was no announcement of any sort of his departure plans. A telegram to Mayor Cermak earlier in the day had voiced the wish that something might be accomplished by his going to Florida. That message indicated that the hope had been relinquished reluctantly and only an interview late in the afternoon showed that it was still alive.

Thus when newspaper men heard that he might be leaving on the 8:05 train they were ready to believe and went to the station. They found the governor preparing to board the train. He met them as smilingly as ever and sought to avoid injection of any serious tone into the conversation.

Gets No New Message.

"But what led to your decision to go?" he was asked. "Was there any message from the family?"

"No, there was no message. The decision was my own. I'm going because I want to be there."

And that was as close as he could be brought to what is called the "human interest" element by some writers. As he swung aboard the train he was smilingly giving final orders to his secretary, Arthur P. O'Brien.

The telegram he sent to Mayor Cermak earlier in the day read as follows:

"The citizens of Illinois are greatly shocked at the dastardly occurrence of last night and join with me in fervent hope and earnest prayer for your speedy and full recovery.

"Your fine courage throughout the unspeakably sad affair and your noble act, notwithstanding the seriousness of your own injuries, in giving first concern to the safety and welfare of President Elect Roosevelt is typical of the fine courage and consideration you have given for many years to the citizens of Chicago and Cook county.

"I would now be on my way to your bedside if I thought I could add anything whatsoever to your comfort and recovery or that the giving of any portion of my own vitality would help you in the valiant fight you are making.

"Chicago and Illinois need you."

The governor's action came toward the close of a day of tensity for Mayor Cermak's friends at the capital. They had seen Dr. Frank Jirka, director of public health, a son-in-law of the mayor, who is an expert on gunshot wounds, leave here late at night by automobile to catch a plane from Nashville with another son-in-law, Senator Richey V. Graham. And they waited anxiously until word was received that shortly before noon they had taken off, accompanied by Dr. Karl Meyer, and probably would reach Miami tonight.

Official cognizance of the shooting was taken by both houses of the general assembly. Lieut. Gov. Donovan telegraphed the action of the senate extending earnest wishes for a full and speedy recovery. Speaker Roe of the house ordered transmission of that body's resolution pronouncing Mayor Cermak "an outstanding leader in both the state and the nation."

ENTIRE WORLD HEAPS ITS INDIGNATION ON ASSASSIN IN MIAMI

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The indignation of the entire world has been heaped upon Giuseppe Zangara, the man who tried to kill Franklin D. Roosevelt in Miami, Fla., but for the President elect there were messages of congratulation and gratification from the ends of the earth. Newspapers, governments, and the people in every capital echoed the sentiment of President Hoover that "it was a dastardly act."

In London Ambassador Mellon summed up what seemed to be the general opinion when he said: "I can conceive of no crime that would outrage the American people more. I congratulate Mr. Roosevelt with all my heart that no harm has come to him."

In Rome Premier Mussolini learned of the attack soon as he awakened. The police went to work immediately looking up Zangara's record, but although the man told the authorities at Miami that he had attempted to assassinate King Victor Emmanuel in 1912, his name is not on file in the criminal records.

Prague, near Kladno, Mayor Cermak's birthplace, was greatly excited and eager for news about his progress. There were crowds in front of all the newspaper offices reading the bulletins.

FAMILY LEAVES CITY

The children and grandchildren of Mayor Cermak were speeding yesterday to his bedside in Miami. Solemn faced, anxious, they departed from Chicago after bulletins from the Jackson Memorial hospital in Miami left no doubt that the patient's condition was grave.

All morning, at the home of Mrs. Richey V. Graham at 1916 South Austin avenue, telephone calls had kept the former Lillian Cermak and her sister, Mrs. Frank J. Jirka, informed of their father's condition. By noon they had determined to make the trip south. By 2:30 they were aboard the Floridian of the Illinois Central lines and steaming out of the Park Row station with Mrs. Jirka's small daughter, Mariella. Vivian Graham, the mayor's favorite grandchild, boarded the train at Mattoon.

ASTOR THOUGHT SCENE WAS LAID FOR AN ASSASSIN

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Vincent Astor, the host of President Elect Roosevelt on the fishing cruise which ended yesterday at Miami, had a premonition of an attempt to assassinate the President elect while riding from the pier at which his yacht, the Nourmahal, was moored, to Bay Front park, where Mr. Roosevelt spoke.

As the car neared the park Mr. Astor, who was riding with Justice Frederich Kernochan and Prof. Raymond Moley, commented that it would be easy for a crank to shoot Mr. Roosevelt. As they automobiled on to the dense throng, the members of which crowded the roadway and left so narrow a lane that the car could hardly proceed, Mr. Astor again commented on the danger of an attempt at assassination.

DOCTORS RECALL VAIN BATTLE TO SAVE GARFIELD

Scrutiny of press reports and printed diagrams of the wound received by Mayor Anton J. Cermak recalled yesterday to the medical world the wound that caused the death, more than forty years ago, of President James A. Garfield. The early diagnosis of President Garfield's wound was similar to that in the case of Mayor Cermak. Two shots fired at President Garfield at a distance of only 18 inches in the station at Washington by the crazed Chicagoan, Charles J. Guiteau, both took effect, but only one was regarded from the start as dangerous.

That first bullet, striking the President in the back, entered just above the kidneys on the left side. Its course provoked anxious discussion among the surgeons attending the chief executive handicapped as they were by lack of many scientific instruments now available for the treatment of Mayor Cermak's injury. The "induction balance," the nearest approach to the X-rays or electro-cardiograph of today, misled the medical men then.

[The induction balance is a device for detecting the proximity of metal substances by noting minute changes in an electrical current.]

President Shot Twice.

Garfield was shot on July 2, 1881. His assassin fired from behind the first time. As the President whirled about to face him and fell on the floor, Guiteau fired again. The second ball struck the left side of the chest and passed through the body, emerging at the tip of the shoulder blade.

For ten weeks the magnificent constitution of Garfield and the expert nursing he received kept him alive while the country continued to hope. He died at Elberon, N. J., on Sept. 19.

The autopsy conducted the following day is famous in the annals of medicine. It revealed that what was supposed by all the distinguished surgeons to be the course of the first .44 caliber bullet was only a burrowing channel of infection proceeding away from the true course. The ball was two feet away from where the doctors believed it to be.

Bullet Found Near Heart.

Instead of ranging downward and passing through a lobe of the liver then imbedding itself in the anterior abdominal wall where the surgeons believed they could find it, the bullet coursed across the back and upward, lodging behind the heart, where it was found. Three-quarters of an hour was spent by the medical staff in the autopsy, in searching for the fatal ball in that part of the body where they had asserted it was.

When the doctors discovered the actual position of the bullet they realized that the wound had been mortal from the moment it was made, and that only the excellence of the care President Garfield received had prolonged his life those many weeks. A hemmorhage was the immediate cause of death. That and blood poison had been feared all along by the doctors.

A special dispatch to THE TRIBUNE from Long Branch, N. J., after the autopsy was candid in its discussion of the findings, announced by Dr. Williard Bliss, chief of the attending physicians. Dr. Bliss and another Surgeon, Gen. Joseph K. Barnes, had the distinction of having been in attendance on Abraham Lincoln during his last days.

"The autopsy," the doctor's statement reads, "is the most marvelous feature of the President's case. It shows that the surgeons had absolutely no knowledge of the character of the wound or the location of the ball. What was called the course of the wound was in fact a burrowing pus cavity.

"The ball, which even Dr. Frank H. Hamilton thought he could locate within half an inch, proved to be a mere ball of pus walled up. The "metal" which the induction balance discovered was the same accumulation of pus. The doctors all thought they knew within an inch where the ball was and could have reached it immediately with a knife. Yet it was two feet by the surface of the body from where they thought it was, and behind the heart instead of in front of the groin. It never went downward and forward, but sideways across the backbone.

Bullet Deflected by Rib.

"The shattered rib, which was not known to the consulting surgeons until July 23, was the obstacle which deflected the bullet and caused it to locate where no one even suggested that it was, and where it remained, a permanent danger to the heart.

"The case illustrates how great is the skill of good nursing, for it shows that the President was kept alive for eighty days solely by good nursing while he had a mortal wound that was constantly poisoning his system. But the autopsy shows how greatly the most eminent surgeons may err—plainly speaking, that the doctors knew very little about the wound or the course of the ball. It was where it could interfere with the action of the heart, where its presence made death ultimately certain. The liver was untouched."

In Mayor Cermak's Case.

In the case of Mayor Cermak, the bullet took almost identically the same direction as the surgeons had described in President Garfield's case. It entered on the right side at the ninth rib, coursed forward and down, appearing to traverse the diaphragm and the margin of the liver, and lodged in the eleventh dorsal vertebra. Garfield's pulse some hours after the shooting was 150, from which it dropped to 120 and 107, and his temperature was 99. Mayor Cermak was announced by physicians to have a pulse of 88, 70 being normal, and a temperature of 98.6 degrees.

The danger of infection from the 32 caliber bullet with which Mayor Cermak was wounded is mentioned by the doctors just as it was when President Garfield first was stricken.

ROOSEVELT WRITES A MESSAGE OF GOOD CHEER TO EACH VICTIM

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Before departing aboard his special train for the north today, President Elect Roosevelt wrote messages of good cheer to each of the five victims of an assassin's gun that was meant for him.

The messages sent to the victims read:

For Mayor Cermak: "For my old friend, Tony, with my affectionate good wishes. Get well fast and come to see me in Washington."

"For Russell Caldwell, with my regards and best wishes."

All were signed "Franklin D. Roosevelt." And were accompanied by baskets of flowers.

ROOSEVELT ONCE VICTIM OF BOGUS "BOMB" IN MAILS

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Once before, in April, 1929, three months after he had been sworn in as governor, an apparent attempt was made on Franklin D. Roosevelt's life. An infernal machine, first described as a dynamite bomb containing six ounces of explosive, addressed to the executive mansion, was discovered in the parcel post matter in the main postoffice, Eighth avenue and Thirty-third street.

After three days of grilling, a porter who found the package broke down and confessed that he had made and "planted" it in the hope of getting promoted as a hero when he discovered it. He was sent to Bellevue for observation.

Postal inspectors suspected the story of Thomas Callegy, the porter, from the first, but for hours they were unable to shake him. Careful examination showed that if the package had been opened in the ordinary way the fuse would have lighted, but the fuse was unconnected with the explosive, black powder solidly encased in a piece of pipe. Even if the powder had gone off, it would have done little damage, experts found.

U. S. Digs Into the Past Life of Assassin; Find He's Citizen

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Every investigating agency of the federal government joined today in an intensive inquiry into the background of Giuseppe Zangara, Italian anarchist, who attempted the assassination of President Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt and seriously wounded Anton J. Cermak, mayor of Chicago. President Hoover ordered the full force of the federal agencies thrown into the investigation of the would-be assassin.

Tonight Secretary of Labor William N. Doak formally announced that the immigration bureau's investigation has definitely determined that Zangara is a naturalized citizen of the United States and, therefore, not eligible for deportation.

Await Fingerprints.

Meanwhile, however, the United States bureau of investigation in the department of justice was waiting the arrival of Zangara's fingerprints from police in Miami. Expected early tomorrow morning, they will be checked by experts against the three million criminal prints in the bureau's files, to determine if the Italian bricklayer has ever been arrested on a criminal charge in this country.

The United States secret service likewise continued an investigation of Zangara in an effort to learn more about his antecedents and the persons with whom he has been associated in recent years. William H. Moran, chief of the secret service, stated that reports from Miami indicated that the Italian is "just a plain anarchist and individualist opposed to all authority." Nevertheless, Mr. Moran said, operatives of the government will continue their investigation to ascertain whether Zangara was affiliated with any group which might be plotting further attempts upon the life of the President elect or other high government officials.

U. S. Lacks Jurisdiction.

One of President Hoover's first acts on learning of the attempt to kill Mr. Roosevelt last night, according to White House attachés, was to phone Attorney General Mitchell and instruct him to place the forces of the United States department of justice at the disposal of state authorities who will prosecute the anarchist.

Attorney General Mitchell informed Mr. Hoover at a conference at the White House today that there is no federal law under which the government can assume jurisdiction over the prosecution of Zangara. He will be tried by the state of Florida, said Mr. Mitchell, and he recalled that states have always acted promptly in the past to deal with assassins.

Doak's Statement.

Secretary Doak's statement regarding the immigration bureau's investigation of Zangara was as follows:

"We have definitely identified Zangara as having been naturalized by the Common Pleas court of Passaic county at Paterson, N. J., Sept. 11, 1929. Zangara was born in Fergusano, Italy, Sept. 7, 1900; left Naples on the 18th day of August, 1923; arrived at Philadelphia on the 2d day of September, 1923. He made his declaration of intention to become a citizen on May 21, 1924, at Hackensack, N. J., in the Common Pleas court of Bergen county, giving his occupation at the time as that of a mason. Zangara was less than 23 years of age when he entered this country, and we are unable to find that he had any police record in Italy and have been unable to locate any here up to the time of his naturalization."

VISIT TO CHEER CERMAK BARED BY ROOSEVELT

Reaction to Shooting Is Also Described.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

En Route with Roosevelt, Miami to New York City, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The dramatic story of what Franklin D. Roosevelt saw and felt and heard when a wild eyed gunman sought to assassinate him was revealed by the President elect this afternoon.

And then tonight Mr. Roosevelt told of his visit earlier in the day with Mayor Cermak of Chicago, who lies in a Miami hospital, dangerously wounded by one of the bullets intended for the President elect. Try as he did to exclude sentiment from his narrative, Mr. Roosevelt's account revealed that both he and the mayor were rich in that human trait.

Messages expressing thankfulness for Mr. Roosevelt's escape were received at every stop, coming from persons in all walks of life.

This morning, when the President elect left the yacht Nourmahal, his vacation craft to which he had returned for the night after his escape from the would-be assassin, he ordered his car driven swiftly to the hospital in which the mayor lay.

Rides in Open Car.

Mr. Roosevelt rode in an open car, seeming thus to demonstrate at the outset that the tragic occurrence of last night left him no victim to fear, and immediately upon reaching the hospital he asked to be taken to the mayor's room. Sober faced, the President elect walked slowly to the bedside of the man who had stopped a bullet aimed at Mr. Roosevelt, and who had said, "I'm glad it was me instead of you."

Physicians had told the President elect that the mayor was losing ground; that his heart was weakening, a cardiogram revealing this deficiency. If Mr. Cermak was to live, he had a tremendous battle ahead, the President elect learned.

But when he stood before the mayor's bed and watched Mr. Cermak's wan face lighten at the sight of him, Mr. Roosevelt's mien softened and he smiled, and then, despite the adverse reports he had heard, he sought to still any fears under which the mayor might be suffering.

Bit of "White Lying."

It was a bit of "white lying" that followed, according to Mr. Roosevelt's own account, which disclosed the President elect's depth of feeling over the tragedy.

"I told the mayor to get well," Mr. Roosevelt said. "I told him to try to get to the inauguration on March 4, but if he couldn't make it by then, to come and see me at the White House later."

Then the sentimentality shifted to the wounded mayor, whose face clouded a bit as he said: "I wanted to have a talk with you about the school teachers' salaries in Chicago, which have been unpaid so long."

Mr. Roosevelt said that even in his pain Mr. Cermak showed an earnest interest in the plight of the Chicago teachers.

Tells of Teachers' Needs.

"He even explained the situation to me," the President elect revealed. "He told me about the failure to collect taxes in Chicago for two years. The predicament of the teachers seemed to be the one thing that was troubling him."

Mayor Cermak has expressed hope that when the Roosevelt régime opens he will be able to obtain a loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation sufficient to pay the teachers' back salaries.

Fearful of weakening the mayor, the President elect withdrew and then he visited the four other victims of the anarchistic Giuseppe Zangara's revolver. He talked with all of them except Mrs. Joseph Gill, wife of the president of the Florida Power and Light company, who was in a desperate condition, and even at the time of the visit, was undergoing a blood transfusion. Mr. Roosevelt was informed there was slight hope for her recovery.

Guarded by Officers.

After leaving the hospital, in a motorcade, that was heavily guarded by police and secret service men—the latter riding on the running board of Mr. Roosevelt's car, covering him completely—the President elect was driven to the railway station.

As he went up the ramp of his private car, a cheer went up from several thousand Miamians who had gathered on the steps of the adjoining city hall. The President elect stood at the edge of the platform a minute, his form fully exposed to the nearby crowd, and smiling quietly, he waved his hat to the crowd and was rewarded with more cheers for his courage.

The train pulled out in a quarter hour, but before it left Mr. Roosevelt sent the following message to President Hoover, who had requested to be advised concerning the condition of the wounded: "Have just visited hospital and seen the patients. The mayor had a fair night, as did Mrs. Gill. The other three are on rapid road to recovery."

Wounded Woman "Salutes" Him.

While the President elect was receiving newspaper men, Marvin H. McIntyre, Mr. Roosevelt's secretary, interrupted to say that he had seen Mrs. Gill early in the morning and had told her he was going to see Mr. Roosevelt.

"She sent you this message," McIntyre reported. "Tell him that from my stretcher I salute him."

Mr. McIntyre said that another victim of one of Zangara's shots, Miss Margaret Kruis, told him after Mr. Roosevelt's visit: "I told you I wanted to shake hands with the President, but I didn't mean it in this way."

In his own story of what happened at Bay Front park in Miami last night, Mr. Roosevelt told as graphic a tale of the tragic event as any witness had before him.

Roosevelt's Own Story.

His story follows:

"I have tried ever since last night not to confuse what I saw with all that was told me.

"After I had finished speaking somebody from the talking picture people climbed on the back of the car and said I had simply got to turn around and repeat to them what I said. I said I would not do it. He said, 'We have come one thousand miles for this.' I said, 'I am very sorry, but I can't do it.'

"Having said that I slid off the back of the car into my seat. Just then Mayor Cermak came forward and I shook hands and talked with him for nearly a minute. Then he moved off around the back of the car. Bob Clark [one of the secret service men] was standing right beside him to the right. As he moved off a man came forward with a telegram about five or six feet long and started telling me what it contained. While he was talking to me I was leaning forward toward the left side of the car. Just then I heard what I thought was a firecracker, then several more. The man talking with me was pulled back and the chauffeur started the car.

"I looked around and saw Mayor Cermak doubled up and Mrs. Gill collapsing. Mrs. Gill was at the foot of the bandstand steps. As soon as she was hit she must have got up and started down the steps. She was slumped over at the bottom.

"I called to the chauffeur to stop. He did, about fifteen feet from where we started. The secret srvice men shouted to him to get out of the crowd and he started forward again. I stopped him a second time, this time at the corner of the bandstand, about thirty feet farther on.

"I saw Mayor Cermak being carried. I motioned to have him put in the back of the car, which would be the first out. He was alive, but I didn't think he was going to last. I put my left arm around him and my hand on his pulse, but I couldn't find any pulse. He slumped forward. On the left of Cermak and leaning over him was the Miami chief of detectives. He was setting on the rear mudguard.

Fear for Cermak's Life.

"He said after we had gone two blocks: 'I don't think he is going to last.' I said: 'I am afraid he isn't.' After we had gone another block Mayor Cermak straightened up and I got his pulse. It was surprising. For three blocks I believed his heart had stopped. I held him all the way to the hospital and his pulse constantly improved.

"That trip to the hospital seemed thirty miles long. I talked to Mayor Cermak nearly all the way. I remember I said, 'Tony, keep quiet—don't move. It wont hurt you if you keep quiet.'

"They rushed him to the operating room for examination. I remained in the hospital and later talked to Mayor Cermak for four or five minutes. I also saw the others, except Mrs. Gill, who was being operated on. They failed to extract the bullet. I remained at the hospital until about quarter after eleven and then returned to the Nourmahal. I went to bed about 2 o'clock."

Didn't See Man Shooting.

Mr. Roosevelt paused for a moment and then went on to fill the gaps in his narrative of what happened at the park.

"I didn't actually see the man who did the shooting. The second time the car moved forward I saw a melée down on the ground and I assumed he was in that.

"The police did one quick and clever thing. When they got him up from the ground they saw the car in which Kermit, Vincent and Moley were riding, two cars behind mine. It had just started out. They threw the Italian on the trunk rack and three policemen sat on him all the way to the hospital. They had to go to the hospital because inside the car was the fellow who had been hit in the head.

"As we started out there was a great deal of shouting and pressing from every direction. By the time we got to the gate, seventy-five feet away, the crowd there didn't know anything had happened. It was providential that my car went about thirty feet ahead before the crowd closed in. It would have been difficult to get the car out if we had not reached the corner of the bandstand."

While the President elect was revealing this absorbing account, the train stopped at Palm Beach, and John McCooey, boss of Brooklyn, came aboard and paid his respects to the governor.

"I am most happy to have you escape," Mr. McCooey said. "I was there to see it. What a terrible thing it was to see such a celebration turn suddenly into one of such tragedy.

"One might be able to understand such an act if you had been in office for some time, and had done things by pleasing some of the people."

Blames It on Red Tie.

Later, in a lighter humor, Mr. Roosevelt revealed that his colored valet, Irwin MacDuffie, had blamed the tragedy on a red tie worn by the President elect as he rode forth into Miami. This morning, when Mr. Roosevelt reached for the same tie, MacDuffie said, "No, sir. You better wear a blue tie today." Mr. Roosevelt's tie was blue.

One more graphic account of the shooting with some hitherto unrevealed facts was told by Prof. Raymond Moley, economic adviser to the President elect, who was riding in the procession. He told of taking a wounded man to the hospital while the would-be assassin, Zangara, was being held down by three detectives who had placed him on the trunk rack in the rear of the car and then sat upon him.

WOUNDING OF MAYOR MAY DELAY TEACHERS' RECEIVING WARRANTS

The wounding of Mayor Cermak may delay the distribution of tax anticipation warrants as pay for teachers and other school employés, it was revealed yesterday. A proxy must be designated by the mayor to sign more than 92,000 warrants in $50 denominations before they are given in lieu of cash for a month's compensation of $4,723,650.

City hall officials received word from Miami that it was doubtful whether physicians would allow the mayor to examine and authorize any public documents for several days. The documents the mayor is to sign designating his proxy were ready to send by air mail before the shooting, and were taken by City Controller M. S. Szymczak, who left on a trip to Washington.

The school board voted the warrant pay day at its meeting Wednesday. The warrants will be applied to the back pay rolls of 1932, which amount to $21,900,000. They will be taken from the city's aggregate of funds and the city will reinvest in 1932 warrants.

TOLD OF MAYOR'S PLEA, TEACHERS VOTE RESOLUTION

Two hundred teachers adopted a resolution expressing their confidence in Mayor Cermak and hopes for his speedy recovery last night at a meeting at the Auditorium theater. Corporation Counsel Sexton and Supt. William J. Bogan declared that the mayor was pleading with President Elect Roosevelt for aid in paying teachers and municipal employés when the shot struck him down.

"The purpose of Mayor Cermak's trip to the park last night," said Mr. Sexton, "was to discuss plans for paying teachers and other employés."

"Unpaid for months," asserted Agnes B. Clohesy, president of the elementary teachers' union, "the teachers know about tragedy and are appreciative of the tragedy that has befallen our chief executive. This is another burden added to those Chicago has had to bear."

Among other speakers were: C. L. Vestal, president of the men teachers' union; Dorothy Weil, president of the Federation of Women High school Teachers; Aaron Kline, president of the principals' club; Ald. Wiley W Mills [37th]; Frederick Wilhelms, president of the High School Teachers' association, and Margaret Haley, business agent of the Chicago Teachers' federation.

CABINET TO ACT FOR MAYOR WHILE HE IS RECOVERING

Agree Council Action Is Unnecessary.

Aldermen agreed yesterday that it will be unnecessary for the city council to pick one of its own members for mayor pro tem so long as Mayor Cermak continues his fight to recover from the wound inflicted by an assassin Wednesday evening at Miami.

By virtue of his chairmanship of the finance committee, Ald. John S. Clark [30th] is a leading member of the council. Ald. James B. Bowler [15th], chairman of the local transportation committee, wields considerable power because of his long experience in the council.

Clark at Hot Springs.

Ald. Bowler was beside Mayor Cermak when the latter was shot and yesterday remained at the hospital in Miami relaying bulletins on the mayor's condition to Chicago officialdom. Ald. Clark was vacationing at Hot Springs, Ark., and left there for Chicago last evening, it was learned.

Mayor Cermak's term of office has more than a year to run, and in the event of his death the statutes provide that a vacancy shall be filled by an election. The law also provides that the council shall fix the date of any special election, such as would be called to fill the vacancy.

There remains, however, the matter of filling the office of mayor between the date of the vacancy and the time when the winner of the special election qualifies for office. The statutes provide procedure in this matter for all cities except Chicago, providing that the city council shall choose one of its own members for the vacancy, but that statute does not apply directly to Chicago.

Study City Records.

Edward Padden, parliamentarian of the city council, declared yesterday, after a search of city records, however, that the same provision would, by indirection, apply in the case of Mayor Cermak's death. The same problem arose following the assassination in 1893 of Mayor Carter H. Harrison Sr.

At that time Corporation Counsel Adolf Kraus held that in the absence of statutory provision, that the old city charter of 1863, providing that the council choose one of its members as a temporary successor, should apply.

The statutes also provide that "in the temporary absence or disability" of the mayor, the council shall choose some alderman as mayor pro tem. It was this provision, aldermen declared yesterday, that there was no need of their following. It was pointed out that Mayor Cermak had been out of town for ten days already, and that department heads had been able to perform the necessary functions of the city government in his absence.

Requests Cabinet to Act.

Yesterday afternoon Mayor Cermak transmitted to the city hall, through Ald. Bowler, the request that Corporation Counsel Sexton, Commissioner of Public Works Hewitt, City Controller Szymczak, and Ald. Henry Sonnenschein [22d], secretary to the mayor, constitute an informal council to pass upon questions which would ordinarily require the decision of the mayor. A similar group functioned during Mayor Cermak's European trip last summer.

It is an ironic fact that in the period just before Mayor Cermak left for Miami special precautions had been taken to guard him against gunmen in Chicago.

The mayor had had two detectives with him as bodyguards since his election and, as has been the custom for many years, a policeman was assigned to the west side home where he lived with his daughter, Mrs. Floyd Kenlay. Following the shooting of Frank Nitti, gang leader, these precautions were increased.

Increase Personal Guard.

Police guards were assigned for a time to the homes of Mayor Cermak's other daughters, Mrs. Richey V. Graham and Mrs. Frank J. Jirka, but were withdrawn later. The detectives assigned to the mayor's personal attendance were increased to five, and several of them accompanied him wherever he went.

Shortly before he left on his vacation he moved from the Congress hotel, where he had maintained a downtown apartment since his election, to the roof bungalow of the Morrison hotel.

Visitors reported that elaborate precautions were taken there to guard the mayor's privacy. It was necessary first to telephone to the bungalow from the hotel lobby to obtain permission to take the elevator to the roof apartment. There a slot in a door, it is reported, made it possible for the occupants of the apartment to scrutinize visitors before admitting them. These precautions were probably taken to guard the mayor against unwelcome guests who always flock about public officials, but they were also effective in keeping out any dangerous visitors.

Two Chicago detectives, Leo Anderson and William Schoemaker Jr., son of the chief of detectives, were with Mayor Cermak in Miami at the time of the shooting. Two more, John Scherping and Michael Ahern, left for Florida by plane last night.

NEW YORK PLANS RECORD POLICE SQUAD FOR MR. ROOSEVELT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The largest police guard ever provided in this city will protect President Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt on his arrival tomorrow, Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney said today.

A hollow square of uniformed policemen will surround Mr. Roosevelt and his immediate companions when they get off the train at the Pennsylvania station. Mr. Roosevelt and his party will porceed inside this human shield to automobiles.

Scattered throughout the entire station several hundred other policemen will be on duty. There will be twenty-five detectives, under the direction of John Sullivan, assistant chief inspector, asigned to search every suspicious person in the neighborhood.

Forty motorcycle policemen, under command of Inspector Anthony Howe, will flank the President elect's entourage on their trip from the station to his home at East Sixty-Fifth street. The entire block in which Mr. Roosevelt resides will be under guard.

In addition to secret service operatives, agents of other government departments will be on guard and every effort made to persuade Mr. Roosevelt to remain out of public places for a few days, perhaps until inauguration day. Friends long have been concerned over Mr. Roosevelt's dislike for being closely guarded.

Szymczak to Represent Mayor at Capital Parley

City Controller Szymczak left Chicago yesterday for Washington where he will represent Mayor Cermak at a conference of mayors today. The conference was called to discuss a program under which it would be possible for the Reconstruction Finance corporation to make direct loans to municipalities on their refunding bonds or tax anticipation warrants. Corporation Counsel Sexton was to have accompanied the controller, but remained in Chicago to take charge of city affairs in the absence of Mayor Cermak.

DOCTOR BARES PLOT TO SLAY HARDING IN '22

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—According to Dr. Henry A. Cotton, who for 23 years was medical director of the Trenton State hospital and now is its director of research, an attempt to assassinate the late President Harding was made by a man who experienced the same "stomach pains" said to be suffered by the would-be killer of President Elect Roosevelt.

The plot to kill Harding, Dr. Cotton said, has never been revealed. He said the man, later a patient of his, planned to assassinate Harding at Pinehurst, N. C., in 1922, when Harding was vacationing there.

"That man, whose name I am not privileged to reveal," Dr. Cotton said, "was a New Jersey storekeeper and an unsuccessful inventor who because he did not reap a reward became bitter against the government. He went to Pinehurst with two automatics for the purpose of killing Harding. However, having read an article concerning Christianity, he told a minister of his mental conflicts. Secret service men shadowed the man and when he returned to New Jersey he was arrested near Camden."

SECRET SERVICE MAN WOUNDED, ROOSEVELT SAYS

New York, Feb. 16.—(AP)—It took the President elect himself today to pierce the secrecy of the secret service.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his account of the Miami shooting wired from the train that is bringing him to New York, revealed for the first time that one of his bodyguards, Robert Clark of Chicago, was wounded.

"I found that a bullet—the one probably that hit Cermak—grazed the top of Clark's hand," said Mr. Roosevelt. "His hand was all bloody and scratched."

Clark is one of the secret service men who specialize in running down counterfeiters. But he had many other special assignments before he was designated as one of the President elect's guards. He accompanied Queen Marie of Rumania on her tour of the United States. And he helped take "Scarface Al" Capone from Chicago to the federal penitentiary in Atlanta.

West Virginia Legislature Congratulates Roosevelt

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Condemning "radicalism" and saying it "ought to be suppressed," the house of delegates today passed a resolution congratulating President Elect Roosevelt on his escape and "extending deepest sympathy and hope of a speedy recovery" to Mayor Cermak of Chicago, who was gravely injured in the attemptd assassination of the two at Miami last night. The senate concurred in the resolution.

SARGENT EXPRESSES CHICAGO'S HOPES FOR CERMAK'S RECOVERY

Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and North Western railway and head of the Sargent committee on public expenditures, said yesterday that he "hoped fervently for the immediate recovery" of Mayor Cermak.

"Mayor Cermak has been rendering a great service to the city of Chicago," Mr. Sargent said. "He has been courageous and fearless in his efforts to reduce expenditures for the benefit of the taxpayers. He has cooperated wholeheartedly with the committee on public expenditures. Every one most fervently hopes for his immediate recovery."

ROOSEVELT GETS MESSAGE FROM KING OF ENGLAND

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 16.—(AP)—King George of England expressed his regret at the attempt on the life of President Elect Roosevelt and his joy at Mr. Roosevelt's escape in a message received by the President elect here tonight en route to New York.

The message was relayed to the Roosevelt train through Secretary of State Stimson, and said:

"I have received the king's command to express to you his majesty's abhorrence at the outrageous attempt on your life and congratulations at your escape. I beg you to accept at the same time my own congratulations."

The message was signed "Osborne, British embassy."

A message also was received from Prime Minister MacDonald.

'AUTOTRAM' MAY REVOLUTIONIZE RAILWAY TRAVEL

BY HAL FOUST.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Over the rusty rails of a Michigan Central branch line here this afternoon came a fish shaped coach of bright red, resembling the passenger compartment of some large airplane. It was the demonstration model of a vehicle designed to revolutionize main line rail passenger service, a creation by automobile engineers offered to the railroad industry.

The coach stopped with the ease of a modern automobile. A door near the front was opened. Steps were unfolded for an inspection.

Made by Chicago Concern.

An "autotram" it has been named by its manufacturer, the Clark Equipment company. This company, headed by Eugene B. Clark of Chicago, for twenty-one years has been furnishing axles, transmissions, clutches, and such parts to the automobile industry.

"Our idea," said Ezra W. Clark, vice president of the company, "is more important than our expression of this idea in this vehicle. The declining business of the railroads demonstrates that their present service is not popular with the public.

"With this vehicle, light in weight and stream lined, we hope that rail passenger service can be stepped up to 100 miles an hour. We haven't driven faster than eighty-five miles an hour, using 60 per cent of our engine's maximum horsepower, during our experimental work.

Operated in Single Units.

"The light weight gives economy of operation. The autotram has 750 pounds of vehicle per passenger capacity. The railroads, with their present patronage, are carrying between eleven and nineteen tons for each passenger.

"Operated in single units rather than long trains, there could be the convenience of frequent dispatches that the public does not now have."

The autotram is sixty feet long. Its weight, due to all aluminum alloy construction, is 30,000 pounds. It is propelled by a sixteen cylinder automotive type engine driving on all four wheels of the front truck. Brakes, air compression on hydraulic, operate on all eight wheels.

Reach 70 M. P. H.

The front is rounded with an elliptical curve that sweeps backward with a parabola into a vertical tapering tail. According to Alfred C. Williams, chief engineer, this tear drop construction results in a 50 per cent fuel consumption at 70 miles an hour as compared with the operation of a conventional blunt railroad coach.

H. B. Madison, field engineer, and A. F. McCormick, western sales manager for the company, led the way into the coach. The interior was of modern motif with aluminum easy chairs and tables and an upholstered davenport.

He advanced it a few more notches, like the control of a Chicago street car, and the 16 cylinders started the vehicle. Acceleration was rapid, not like the start of a heavy train. A speed of 40 miles an hour was reached in a few seconds. It was an experimental drive for the benefit of engineers testing a new mounting for the rear truck, so the speed was kept below 70 miles an hour.

Rubber Used as Insulator.

"Our big job," said Mr. McCormick, "is to adjust the equipment so that riding qualities will equal those of the superweighted conventional coaches. We have used rubber as an insulator on resilient steel flanged wheels, just inside the steel rims, a new application of rubber. The engine, the gear box and the trucks are rubber mounted."

An insulation is also used between the double walls of the sides, roofs and floors. Double sheets of glass, mounted in rubber, are in the windows. An air conditioner gives a complete change of atmosphere every two and a half minutes. For summer the air will be cooled. "The railroad companies are very much interested in our autotram," said Ezra Clark, "and I feel confident that the public will enjoy something like this in the future, regardless of whether our product is adopted."

U. S. ARRESTS TWO FOR POSSESSION OF POSTAL LOOT

Bonds Taken Here in Daylight Holdup.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Roger Glover, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Rudolph F. Desort.

William Leahy and Robert Bailey, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 20 years each in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Michael Feinberg.

Two pawnbrokers were under arrest in Springfield last night after postoffice inspectors had identified Liberty bonds which the two held as part of the loot taken in the daring $500,000 daylight mail robbery at Adams and Clark streets on Dec. 6 in which a mail carrier and a guard were held up.

The men arrested are Morris Fishman, operator of several pawnshops and sporting goods stores, and his brother Dave. They were arraigned late in the day before United States Commissioner W. R. Ruegg and held in bonds of $6,000 pending a hearing on Feb. 27. Both were charged with possession of, and concealing and receiving securities stolen from the mails.

Investigate Another Captive.

A third man under arrest, but who so far has not been connected with the stolen bonds, is William Golden of Chicago. Inspectors failed to identify a bond in his possession as part of the loot. He is being held by the government on a Mann act charge and is still being investigated in connection with the mail robbery.

The arrest of the Fishmans followed an effort by Morris to cash a $5,000 Liberty bond at the First National bank in Springfield. Bank officials investigated the serial number and, finding that the bond was stolen, notified postal authorities in Chicago.

Cashing of Bond Revealed.

Postoffice Inspectors C. R. Gant and E. F. Lyons went to Springfield and arrested the Fishmans early yesterday. The inspectors found another stolen bond, also for $5,000, in Morris Fishman's possession. Investigation disclosed that Dave Fishman had previously cashed two $1,000 bonds and two $500 bonds at a Springfield bond house. He was arrested when he tried to cash a check given in payment for the securities.

The Fishmans told an involved story of getting possession of the bonds, according to federal agents. One story was that they had been given the bonds in a gambling transaction. It is not believed by officials that either had an active part in the robbery, but that they were merely acting as fences for the actual bandits.

HOODLUMS FURNISH ALIBIS IN CLEANER TERRORISM TRIAL

Louis [The Louse] Clementi and Philip Mangano, west side hoodlums, furnished alibis supported by defense witnesses yesterday in their trial before a jury in the Criminal court of Judge Thomas J. Lynch on charges of conspiracy growing out of terrorism in the cleaning and dyeing industry. The state charged that Mangano and Clementi entered a garage used by the International Cleaners and Dyers, 2810 South State street, and wrecked four trucks on Aug. 11, 1931.

Clementi said that he was playing pinochle in a Greek coffee shop at 1226 West Madison street at the time of the garage attack, and Mangano said that he was enjoying an automobile ride. Clementi, on cross-examination, said that he is a grocer at 909 Sholto street. Mangano admitted that he had not worked for three years, but said he was a professional ball player and general houseworker.

William Limberes, a waiter, and Gus Bouris, a patron of the Greek coffee shop, who were called to substantiate the testimony of Clementi, were seized by state's attorney's police after they left the witness stand. The arrests were made at the noon recess and Defense Attorney Albert Filetti stormed in court at the beginning of the afternoon session and demanded that a mistrial be declared. He held that the jury had been prejudiced and a "fatal error" made. The motion was denied and his demand that the prisoners be released on a writ of habeas corpus ignored on the statement that the prisoners already had been freed.

NEW TRUSTEES APPOINTED FOR TWO ALDIS FUNDS

A friendly litigation to procure court sanction of new trustees for the two trust funds aggregating $500,000 of which Mrs. Marie Madeline Aldis of Paris, is beneficiary, was concluded before Circuit Judge Joseph Burke yesterday.

Mrs. Aldis, who now is visiting in Chicago, is the widow of Owen Franklin Aldis, founder of Aldis & Co., real estate brokers. He died in 1925. The suit was filed by her brother-in-law, Arthur Taylor Aldis of Lake Forest, present head of the real estate concern, who asked to be relieved of his trusteeships.

The two funds, one of $100,000 and the other of $400,000, were created by Owen Aldis soon after his marriage in Paris in 1912. The trustees of the first fund were Sydney R. Tabor of Lake Forest, who died in September, 1930; Arthur Aldis; and Mrs. Aldis' brother, Vicomte Joseph du Mas of Paris. Trustees of the second fund were John Dorr Bradley of Lake Forest, who died in October, 1928; Russell Tyson, also an official of the Aldis real estate concern, and Arthur Aldis.

Attorney Allen G. Mills, who filed the suit, explained to Judge Burke that the original trust agreements made no provision for the appointment of successor trustees.

When attorneys said that they had agreed upon trustees for both funds Judge Burke immediately entered an order substituting Graham Aldis, who also is an official of the real estate company, for his brother, Arthur, as a trustee of both trust funds. Vicomte du Mas also becomes a trustee of both funds, and Mr. Tyson succeeds Mr. Tabor as trustee of the first fund while retaining his trusteeship of the second.

Piece of Coping Falls On 2 Gary Pedestrians

An unidentified man was probably fatally injured and Henrico Ronerez was slightly injured last night when a piece of coping fell from the roof of the Adams hotel in Gary. The two men were walking in front of the hotel. The unidentified man received a skull fracture. Ronerez, a resident of Gary, suffered several broken ribs.

New Default of $326,180 Seen by Sanitary Board

The sanitary district will probably default payment of $326,180 in bond principal and interest on March 1, President Thomas J. Bowler and other trustees declared at a meeting yesterday. The district has defaulted on bond obligations to the extent of $13,613,021 since Jan. 1, 1932, because it has been without funds. The construction program of the district has been at a standstill since February of last year.

Hold Up Parkway Hotel Office, Threatening Four

Three robbers looted the office of the Parkway hotel, 2100 Lincoln Park West, of $35 yesterday. Four persons, the manager, J. J. Calvey, Miss Rhoda Shirkey, switchboard operator; Miss Marie De Line, cigar clerk, and Edward Schmidt, room clerk, were threatened by the bandits. Schmidt was forced to open the hotel safe. It contained only locked safety deposit boxes, which the robbers left untouched.

SCOTT DURAND NAMED IN RUM RING INDICTMENT

Husband of Dry Leader One of 75 Accused.

Scott S. Durand, head of the Chicago sugar brokerage concern bearing his name and husband of a prominent worker in the Woman's Christian Temperance union, was charged yesterday with being one of the leaders in a $9,500,000 alcohol conspiracy in an indictment returned before Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward.

Mr. Durand, who is socially prominent, is the owner of Crabtree farm, just north of the village limits of Lake Bluff. His wife is a former president of the Lake Bluff council of the W. C. T. U. and the author of a book defending prohibition. Both Mr. Durand and his wife are said to be spending a few months in South America.

75 Named in Indictment.

Seventy-five alleged members and employes of the liquor ring, which is said to have manufactured 6,000,000 gallons of alcohol in 60 south side stills, are named in the indictment. Named as members of the board of directors with Durand are six Chicago business men: Harry and Fred Soth, owners of the Calumet Yeast company; Herman Lebenson, Chicago broker for the Union Starch and Refining company of Columbus, Ind., and Granite City, Ill.; Morris M., William J., and R. B. Sink, incorporators and stockholders of the Sugar Supply corporation, a brokerage concern.

The indictment names James Peskin, once owner of a wholesale grocery company, as business manager of the alcohol ring. Three alleged members of the Capone gang are included in the indictment. Governemnt agents said they had "muscled in" to assure the hoodlum organization of a share in the huge profits. The gangsters are James Alexander, Al Moore and Frank Bonjorn.

All three of the names are said to be aliases, and government agents ventured the guess that Moore may have been a name assumed by Capone himself. Aside from Benjamin Goldstein and his son, Frank, charged with manufacturing the stills for the liquor ring, the rest of the defendants are alleged employes of the liquor ring.

Follows 2 Year Inquiry.

The indictment, which includes 37 counts of possession, conspiracy, manufacture, and maintaining a nuisance, was the result of two years' work on the part of Assistant United States Attorney Walter E. Wiles and prohibition agents acting under Chief Eliot Ness.

Prosecutor Wiles said that the syndicate started operation in July of 1929 and continued to function until late last summer. Peskin, the agents said, was wholesaling alcohol in a small way when the others joined the ring. His business suddenly jumped to proportions that required from one to four carlonds of sugar a day. Then agents said, the Capone syndicate discovered Peskin's organization and "muscled in" for a share of the profits.

The syndicate used 60,000,000 pounds of sugar, of which Mr. Durand sold 30,000,000 pounds, agents said. They also said that 2,000,000 pounds of yeast were used. A total of 6,000,000 gallons of alcohol was turned out in the 60 stills scattered through the south side, and sold at profits ranging from $1 to $1.50 a gallon.

Campaigner Against Roosevelt.

Mrs. Durand was active in the last political campaign against President Elect Roosevelt and spoke against his announced stand against prohibition. She is the author of a book, "Consider," which sets forth the advantages of prohibition.

Bonds of from $1,000 to $10,000 were set by Judge Woodward yesterday, and bench warrants issued for those named in the indictment who are not yet under arrest.

Seized in Loop Hotel as Canadian Bank Robber

Elroy Hunt, wanted by authorities of Markham, Ont., for participation in the robbery there Jan. 30 of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, was seized last night in the Saratoga hotel, 27 South Dearborn street, by Lieut. John Cartan and Sergts. Chris Callahan and Michael Shannon of the detective bureau. According to information given the Chicago police by Canadian authorties, Hunt obtained $2,800 in the bank robbery.

MERCHANTS SHUT SHOPS IN FRANCE IN TAX PROTEST

Famed Paris Business Districts Deserted.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 16.—French shopkeepers staged a "merchants holiday" today in the struggle with bureaucracy over the budget project now before the senate. Retail merchants closed their stores for the afternoon throughout the Paris metropolitan area and most of the provincial cities in a remarkable protest against any increase in taxation.

Despite the defection of the Good Products merchants and certain other associations, the strike was surprisingly strong. It was 78 per cent effective in the high class shopping districts of Paris and certain of the suburbs.

Shoppings Districts Deserted.

Rue de la Paix, world famous shopping street, was as deserted as on a summer Sunday afternoon and so were Rue Royale, Saint Honoré, Rue de Castiglione and other shopping highways well known to American tourists.

Most of the shuttered places bore the uniform printed sign: "Closed in protest. No new taxes. Thoroughgoing economy. Fiscal equality."

The strike was equally heavy in the red ring of Paris suburbs, notably Saint Denis and Saint Ouen, radical factory towns where the small shopkeepers, urged by the communist daily Humanite, closed almost 100 per cent.

Marseilles, Montpellier, Beziers, Carcassonne, Chaumont, Arras, Nevers, Avignon, Poitiers and other big provincial towns were reported closed 50 to 80 per cent. Other towns closed several hours and still other merchants issued protests addressed to parliament. Saint Brieuc and Gueret will strike tomorrow.

Vote 10 Per Cent Tax Increase.

In Paris manufacturers of charged water staged a parade of delivery trucks across the city bearing placards, "For every two francs worth of charged water, you pay eight francs tax."

The senate financial committee tonight completed its consideration of the budget bill passed by the chamber and voted a 10 per cent increase in the income tax. The senate debate is expected to open tomorrow.

JUDGE HOLDS MUNCIE MAYOR NOT IMPEACHED

Muncie, Ind., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Mayor George R. Dale has not been properly impeached and therefore the County Superior court has no jurisdiction in the case, Judge John S. Lairy of Logansport ruled today in dismissing Dale's appeal from the council's action in declaring the mayor's office vacant.

Judge Lairy held Dale was not lawfully impeached because the council did not notify Dale of impeachment proceedings and merely declared the office vacant by resolution. The council contended that since Dale appealed from the council's action this indicated such action was valid.

BRUNKER DEMANDS CLOSED COURT FOR RENO HEARING TODAY

Reno, Nev., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Albert Ridgley Brunker, Lake Forest millionaire, told reporters today that he would demand closed doors at the hearing tomorrow of his motion to modify the divorce decree of his former wife, now Margaret Gaylord Ruppel, for the custody of two minor children.

Word today from Carson City was to the effect that the senate had unanimously passed a bill, already passed by the assembly, which would make closed doors in divorce proceedings optional with the court instead of compulsory on demand of counsel. There is some speculation whether Judge B. F. Curler will close the doors in the Brunker motion.

Mrs. Ruppel and her husband, Frederick H. Ruppel, are here from Pasadena prepared to resist the motion. The children are not here. Brunker said Mrs. Ruppel had promised to have the children in court in Reno tomorrow.

SOY BEANS GIVEN BIG EXHIBITION SPACE AT FAIR

The soy bean will be glorified at A Century of Progress exposition to the extent of occupying 600 square feet of exhibit space in the Agricultural building. The University of Illinois will arrange the exhibit.

Harvey J. Sconce, soy bean expert and director of agricultural promotion for the fair, said the soy bean would be shown in the act of being crushed for oil; made into meal, which in turn will be made into soy bean flour, diabetic foods, infant foods, macaroni, glue, and fertilizer.

PAIN DEADENED CHEST COLDS LOOSENED WITHOUT DRUGS

Get quick relief from neuralgia pain, sciatica pain, neuritis pain, rheumatic pain, lame back, stiff neck, headache, strains and chest colds by rubbing plenty of Baume Bengué (pronounced Ben-Gay) on the spot. It doesn't blister or stain. Rub it in till it sinks down and soothes the pain or breaks up the chest cold. Take no drugs, for any drug that is powerful enough to "deaden" pain or loosen a chest cold may not be good for you.

But beware of imitations. Ask your druggist for Baume Bengué by name (called "Ben-Gay" in English). There are many analgesic balms, mostly cheap imitations of Ben-Gay made out of synthetic drugs. That is why they are cheap. That is also why they are ineffective. Insist on Ben-Gay and you will get real results.

the 60-Second Workout

30 SECONDS TO RUB. Massage Vitalis into your scalp until it tingles. That shows Vitalis is waking up your scalp.

30 SECONDS TO BRUSH. Comb and brush your hair. Notice that natural lustre! Your hair will stay neat all day.

FOR HANDSOME HAIR

Twice a week, give your scalp and hair a vigorous workout with Vitalis. Your scalp wakes up. Natural oils are restored. Circulation quickens.

Beware the Cough or Cold That Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

R. F. C. HOLDING INSULL PLEDGES OF DAWES' BANK

Owen D. Young Also Talks to Senators.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—With former Vice President Dawes, Owen D. Young, Paul H. Davis, president of the Chicago Stock exchange, and Samuel Insull Jr., as witnesses, and assistants, the senate stock exchange committee today searched the ruins of the crumbled Insull utilities pyramid.

Under the guidance of Ferdinand Pecora, committee attorney, the senators hunted for traces of the manipulations, which caused the ruin.

The committee learned from Mr. Dawes that the securities put up as collateral for 11 million dollars lent by Mr. Dawes' Central Republic Bank and Trust company to Insull companies, officers and employés now repose in the portfolio of the Reconstruction Finance corporation as part of the collateral for the 90 million dollar credit established for the Dawes bank.

Some Conflicting Statements.

What the committee and its attorney felt they had gone a long way to demonstrate was as follows:

That stock in the Insull controlled Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and Corporation Securities company of Chicago had been sold to the public on the basis of annual reports showing substantial earnings, while the companies' income tax returns showed large losses; reports and returns might be legally correct, it was granted, but that did not save the public.

That Samuel Insull Sr. had to "take care of certain people" with 1,000 shares of Shenandoah corporation stock, bought by a syndicate of which Insull Utility Investments was a party.

That shares of stock of Insull, Son & Co. held by Insull Utility Investments at $1,250,000 was written up to $5,000,000 in order to "have the books reflect its real value."

Tht at the time Samuel Insull put up securities for the $2,000,000 loan from Mr. Young's General Electric company and for two $5,000,000 loans from the Central Hanover Bank and Trust company of New York, no mention was made of the fact that Insull Utility Investments and Corporation Securities had millions of debentures outstanding against which they were required to hold 50 per cent of the companies' assets.

That loans from banks by the two companies reached 80 millions, with 86 millions of debentures outstanding.

Shy with Suggestions.

When it came to legislative suggestions for prevention of similar situations in the future both Mr. Young and Mr. Dawes proved shy.

"I'd be glad to see laws passed," Mr. Dawes proclaimed, "but I don't want to go off half baked, which is a habit not peculiarly unknown to Washington at this time. I would like to see laws that would make it more difficult for dishonest men to get proxy control of large corporations belonging to thousands and thousands of people, that would prevent them from borrowing money from the banks to increase their power for the misuse of the companies. But one of the elements involved is human nature. If you can ever get laws to control human nature, then you would have a chance of getting a perfect solution."

Dawes' Insull Loans.

The loans to Insull companies and individuals by the Dawes bank, now taken over for liquidation by the City National bank, of which Mr. Dawes is chairman, totaled $11,977,400 on April 16, 1932, and $11,130,233 on Jan. 10, 1933.

"Was part of the collateral put up to secure these loans put up with the R. F. C. when the bank secured its loan?" asked Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.].

"It was all put up," said Mr. Dawes. "It is all now in the possession of the R. F. C."

Mr. Pecora brought out the fact that through multiplying his companies, Insull was able to borrow far more than the legal limit which a bank might have lent to a single corporation.

Dawes Explains Sadness.

Mr. Dawes said "a feeling of sadness comes over any banker who had a part in making loans to the Insull group," but while the Central Republic Bank and Trust made such loans he was absent in Washington or London.

"Then, because my name had been used in connection with the bank from 1902 to date, when I was an officer or director of it and when I was not, I came back to it as a matter of duty," he said. He whacked a fist on the table.

Among the larger of those loans were $545,980 to the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee; $1,070,023 to the Consolidated Properties Trust; $2,812,577 to Insull Utility Investments, Inc.; $1,820,652 to Middle West Utilities; $460,000 to the Skokie Valley Realty association; $1,787,014 to the Utility Securities corporation; $263,200 to Martin J. Insull, and $500,000 to Samuel Insull.

Tells Securities Pledged.

The collateral put up for the Samuel Insull loan consisted entirely of securities of Insull Utility Investments and Corporation Securities; that put up for the Insull Utility Investments loan was made up of securities of Commonwealth Edison, Middle West, Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, People's Gas, and Corporation Securities company of Chicago.

Securities of Insull companies figured largely, but by no means wholly, in the collateral back of other loans, many of which, out of a total of 41 in all, were to individual officers or employés, some in amount as small as $225, others about $50,000.

Mr. Young confessed "a feeling of helplessness" toward the complexity of the Insull structure.

Beyond Insull Control.

"It was impossible," he said, "for any man to grasp that vast structure. Samuel Insull was largely a victim of it when it got beyond even his power, competent as he was. I believe all the people, working on their particular problems, did what they thought was wise. But the thing got out of control."

"Resulting in losses to certain investors," suggested Chairman Peter Norbeck [Rep., S. D.].

"If it could have been kept going all the obligations would have been paid," Mr. Young replied.

"But as set up, it couldn't keep going," amended Senator Norbeck.

Mr. Young believed in holding companies, but not more than one to a set of operating companies and he would like to see loans from operating to holding companies prohibited. He believed publicity better than blue sky laws.

On Favored List.

Mr. Young explained how without knowing how many shares he would get or at what price, he agreed to a request by Mr. Insull to invest not more than $50,000 in the formation of the Insull Utilities Investment company, with which Insull hoped to buy control of his operating companies.

Mr. Young said he left for Europe for the reparations conference before the shares were issued. He did not return until six months later to learn that he had received 4,000 shares at approximately $12 a share. "They still remain in my possession," he added.

Mr. Davis, president of the Chicago Stock Exchange, told that those shares for which the favored few had paid $12 and the Insulls themselves $7.54, had opened on the market at $30. He refused to admit that the Chicago Stock Exchange or its business conduct committee should have done anything about that.

Samuel Insull Jr. told of discrepancies between reports to the public and income tax returns to the government concerning the two Insull investment companies. Those discrepancies were due, he said, to the fact that income received in stock dividends was not taxable, nor was income in cash dividends on which the tax was paid at source.

"But stock was sold to the public on the basis of the large earnings shown in the report, while the companies might be experiencing an operating loss?" Mr. Pecora demanded.

"Yes, sir, it was," Insull said.

MEYERING DEMANDS JUDGES RESTORE HIS COUNTY POLICE FORCE

Sheriff Meyering yesterday made a formal protest against the recent order of the Circuit judges who voted to abolish his force of 100 highway policemen after April 1. The sheriff appeared at the judges' meeting and demanded that they reconsider their action.

After hearing his plea the judges announced that they would discuss with Gov. Horner his plan of establishing a metropolitan police built around a nucleus of 60 state highway policemen who have been ordered into Cook county. The judges dispatched a letter to the governor asking him to tell them his plans for the new force so that they could provide for the sheriffs' office before the 1933 budget is passed by the county commissioners. If no appropriation for a police force is included in the new budget no funds will be available for their pay if the force is restored later.

After the meeting the sheriff announced that he would confer with the governor.

U. S. GRAND JURY TOLD OF INSULL STOCK JUGGLING

Inflation of Income Bared by Investigators.

How stock was juggled back and forth among Insull investment trusts and subsidiaries, with an inflation of income on the books for each transaction, was disclosed by the United States bureau of investigation yesterday as the federal grand jury began hearing evidence concerning the defunct Corporation Securities company.

Indictments charging Samuel Insull Sr., Samuel Insull Jr., Martin J. Insull, and a dozen or more others with using the mails to defraud are to be sought by the United States attorney's office and, if voted, will be returned next week. The statement issued by the bureau of investigation, headed by Melvin A. Purvis, said that hundreds of thousands of circulars, letters and bulletins were sent through the mails by the company and advertisements were inserted in the principal newspapers of 16 states.

Cites Transaction of April, 1930.

In April, 1930, the statement said, Corporation Securities sold 1,250,000 shares of common stock to Corporation Syndicates, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary, and to Insull Son & Co., subsidiary of Insull Utility Investments, Inc. These two companies transferred the stock to Utilities Securities company at a profit of 50 cents a share, which was divided equally between Corporation Securities and Insull Son & Co., netting Corporation Securities $299,748.

During 1929-'32, the statement continued, Corporation Securities received stock dividends from Insull Utility Investments, Inc., which were charged against the earnings of the latter company for $2,146,911 and carried on the books of Corporation Securities as income of $4,041,555. During the same period Insull Utility Investments, Inc., received stock dividends charged against Corporation Securities earnings at $246,476 and credited to income of Insull Utility Investments at $679,918. Books of the two companies were kept in the same office by the same employés.

$1,752,150 Profit in Ten Days.

On Jan. 6, 1930, according to the statement, Corporation Securities paid members of the Insull family, Samuel Insull, Samuel Jr., Martin J. Insull, and Margaret Insull $2,803,430 for 70,086 shares of Insull Utility Investments common stock, a price of $40 a share. This same stock was purchased Dec. 28, 1929, ten days before the sale, under an option of Jan. 17, 1929, at a cost of $15 a share, the transaction netting the Insulls $1,752,150.

A total of 150 million dollars was invested in the bankrupt Corporation Securities company and when it collapsed there were not enough assets to pay for an exhaustive audit.

District Attorney Dwight H. Green and his first assistant, William J. Froelich, are presenting the case to the grand jury. Only one witness, Harold B. Huling, agent in charge of accounting for the bureau of investigation, was heard. However, some twenty "victim" witnesses are under subpœna for appearance.

It was learned yesterday that the prosecutors are studying the evidence with a view of indicting Samuel Insull Sr. on at least one count of concealing assets in bankruptcy so that he may be extradited from Greece.

Raymond F. McNally, receiver of Corporation Securities company, was instructed in an order issued by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday to appear before the grand jury with all the company's books and records.

REFEREE REBUKES KIRK'S LAWYER AT BANKRUPTCY QUIZ

E. J. SALEK.

Hearing of the voluntary bankruptcy petition of Miss Beatrice Kirk, 20 year old daughter of Walter R. Kirk, former soap manufacturer, was continued to March 1 by Referee in Bankruptcy Garfield Charles after one witness had testified yesterday.

E. J. Salek, employed by the Rollo-Webster company, which has insured all the jewelry of the Kirk family, testified that the ring and watch which Miss Kirk said she sold to her father for $150, were appraised at and insured for $2,600 on Dec. 28, 1932.

None of the Kirk family was present. Miss Kirk is reported to be vacationing in Florida. Mr. Kirk's attorney, Maurice Moriarty, was present and objected to questioning of the witness by Attorney Frank Leonard, counsel for Herman Goldberg, Kenosha, Wis., horse dealer, to whom Miss Kirk owes $2,000 for a riding horse she bought but now disowns. After several objections were overruled Referee Charles said:

"Attorney Leonard has a right to question this witness and you have no right to object. In fact, it does not concern you and you don't even have to be here."

POLICEMAN, HURT BY TWO BOYS IN A STOLEN CAR, DIES

Patrolman Joseph P. Haller, 50 years old, died at the Englewood hospital yesterday from injuries suffered last Nov. 19, when his automobile was wrecked by two youths driving a stolen car, in a collision at Damen avenue and 22d street.

Haller was treated for a fracture of the shoulder and returned to duty at the Damen avenue police station last month. He became ill on Wednesday and was taken to the hospital, where physicians discovered that an infection had developed in the old wounds. Haller lived at 6011 South Aberdeen street.

Joseph Nuzzo and Tony Pizzito, both 17 years old, who were driving the stolen automobile, were captured shortly after the crash. They have been sentenced to six months in the House of Correction for stealing the car.

Policeman Heller's death brings the 1933 Cook county motor toll to 101.

TAKES POISON BY MISTAKE, DIES.

Mrs. Mary L. Peterson, 60 years old, died yesterday in her home at 3525 Hollywood avenue, Brookfield. Police were told she took poison from a medicine cabinet by mistake while searching for medicine to quiet her nerves.

Acids in Stomach Cause Indigestion

Creates Sourness, Gas and Pain How to Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any Walgreen Drug Store some Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder form—never liquid or milk) is harmless, inexpensive, and is a fine remedy for acid stomach. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no fear of indigestion.

HOUSE SHOVELS MONEY AS FAST AS CLERK READS

Cash Flashes Past Those Raising Protests.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Another bad day for the cause of economy. The house is considering the bill appropriating more than 100 million dollars for the state, justice, commerce, and labor departments. There are 25 of the 435 members of the house in attendance.

The legislative machine is grinding so fast that appropriations of hundreds of thousands of dollars are voted before members can catch enough breath to expostulate. Thus goes through an appropriation of $244,000 for the collation of customs statistics by the commerce department. When Representative Miles C. Allgood [Dem., Ala.] catches his breath the clerk has rattled off another page of the bill. Finally halting the machinery Mr. Allgood moves to reduce the appropriation to $144,000.

Oversupply of Statistics.

Representative William B. Oliver [Dem., Ala.], in charge of the bill, makes the point of order that the motion comes too late. The item has been approved.

"I tried to get recognition at the time," Mr. Allgood pants, "but the reading clerk was reading at such a rapid rate that I lost track of it."

Mr. Oliver generously waives the point of order, saying he would not take advantage of his colleague. Mr. Allgood then argues that in these hard times "we can well dispense with so many statistics."

"I recently have been back home," Mr. Allgood adds, "and the general complaint that I have heard is that congress and the departments are needlessly spending large sums of money in sending out pamphlets and statistics and propaganda of every character from the agricultural department and from the department of commerce and all the various departments. They are even criticizing the members of congress for filling up the Congressional Record with long speeches. What they want back home is economy. The kind of economy that will cut out these needless expenditures, and they are looking to this congress and the next congress to get down to sure enough real economy on these measures."

Recalls Nation's Interest.

Mr. Allgood somewhat wearily admits misgivings that his proposal of a $100,000 cut in the appropriation will not prevail, because of the disposition of the house to stand by the appropriations committee. This practice, he asserts, "has been carried too far for the best interests of the country."

On behalf of the appropriations committee, Mr. Oliver says that there should be one agency for the collection of statistics. Then real economy could be accomplished. To effect that reform plenary authority to consolidate governmental agencies should be conferred on the executive.

Pending such action this appropriation should not be reduced. Thereupon, by a voice vote the little band of members, legislating in the name of the house, rejects Mr. Allgood's proposed $100,000 reduction.

Another Suggests Savings.

The item of $600,000 for salaries in the bureau of standards attracts the attention of Representative William H. Stafford [Rep., Wis.]. He said he had long been of the opinion that many of the activities of the bureau of standards should be discontinued. He wants to know whether "the bureau of standards, although they are doing commendable work of value to certain lines of industry, should not have their wings clipped, and clipped decisively so that we could save some money, and no one would be at a loss, except a few favored employés and perhaps a few favored industries."

Mr. Oliver responds that the appropriation for the bureau was cut by the committee $111,275 below the Hoover budget estimate as a hint to the next President in his house cleaning to put the institution on a self-sustaining basis like the patent office. Mr. Stafford points out that that was only a five per cent cut in a total allowance of $2,167,000 for the bureau.

Place for Pruning Hook.

"If there is any place in this bill," says Mr. Stafford, "where I think the committee could have used the pruning hook rightly, could have struck the dagger right in and perhaps given it a twirl and cut out may be $400,000 or $500,000 without doing any violence, it is this service; and I am an industrialist."

"Why talk that way?" sneers Representative Edward W. Goss [Rep.] of industrial Connecticut, himself an industrialist.

"I do not want any industry with which I am connected to profit from the government at the expense of the taxpayers," Mr. Stafford retorts.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers [Rep., Mass.] interposes that the value of the bureau has been established by its invention of a self-extinguishing match and self-extinguishing cigaret.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water oil laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul; skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel dizzy and sick. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful harmless gentle vegetable extracts amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Frank Lykowski, owner of a grocery at 3815 Christiana avenue, returned to his store yesterday afternoon to find his 18 year old son, Theodore, standing back of the counter, his arms in the air, as he faced two young gunmen standing in front of the counter.

Lykowski swiftly disarmed one of the bandits and both of them fled, the grocer firing after them. He told police he was certain he wounded one of the men four times, but the other helped him into a waiting automobile. The bandit who had kept his gun fired back at the Lykowskis, inflicting flesh wounds in the father's side and the son's leg.

EXPECT COURT TO DISMISS ALL TAX PROTESTS TODAY

Action to Aid Collection of $130,000,000.

Hayden N. Bell, head of the tax department of the state's attorney's office, will present a motion to County Judge Jarecki at noon tomorrow asking the dismissal of all objections to the payment of taxes now pending in the county court.

Judge Jarecki indicated that he would grant the motion, which would clear the dockets of Cook county courts of tax litigation for the first time in three years. The motion is regarded as an important move toward the collection of more than $130,000,000 in unpaid real estate taxes affected by the objections.

Objections in Three Classes.

The objections to be wiped out fall into three general classes. The first and most important class consists of those filed by the Association of Real Estate Taxpayers, leaders of the tax strike, and by other taxpayers who objected on the ground of alleged failure to place personal property on the tax rolls.

Some of these objections were filed two years ago. Judge Jarecki withheld judgment on them, while cases in which the basic principles of law involved were being carried to the United States and Illinois Supreme courts. The federal Supreme court knocked out the last of these tax strike suits, the Cisar case, two weeks ago, but Judge Jarecki has yet to take action under the principles of law established by its action. He will be asked to do that in Mr. Bell's motion tomorrow.

Dismissal to Be Final.

Dismissal of this first and largest class of objections will be final. Some of the remaining two classes of objections are undoubtedly legitimate, and a loophole will be left in Mr. Bell's motion for property owners who have honest objections pending. This will be in the form of a provision that complainants who believe the questions raised in their objections have not been adjudicated, as they have in the so-called tax strike objections, may come into court later, state their cases and seek to have the dismissal of their objections set aside.

One of these remaining classes consists of rate cases, in which objections are made to tax rates instead of to the assessment roll. Some 5,000 of these cases are on file in which objections are made that certain appropriations of various governments were illegal and asking that the objectors be relieved from paying that part of their tax bills which would go to these appropriations. Judge Jarecki has been hearing arguments on these cases for several weeks.

Jarecki Explains Stand.

The third class of objections consists of those which normally arise in any tax collection, consisting of allegations of error on the part of the assessor in valuing individual properties, or of mistakes in computing tax bills. Judge Jarecki explained yesterday why he is considering dismissing these objections under his blanket order.

"Some of these people may have had legitimate objections," he said. "But their objections have been on file in some cases for three years, and I consider that while they may have had a legal excuse for objecting originally, that they have delayed presenting their cases for the primary purpose of delaying payment of their taxes."

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Mrs. Frances Kufel, 2380 South 16th street, reported to the police today her 16 year old son, Alois, has been missing since Monday. Fred Oven, 60, 1645 North Marshall street, left home Saturday and has not been back since, his son-in-law, Walter Horn, reported today.

HIS HASTE SLOWS MOTOR JOURNEY IN EVANSTON

Leonard F. Baumann of Niles Center, was driving through Evanston last night on his way home and in a hurry. In Main street he became annoyed at a slow moving car ahead of him. He couldn't pass because the street is divided by snow and ice into two narrow one way lanes.

First Baumann tried to speed up the car ahead by tooting his horn. This did no good. Then he gave the other car a bump. It was equally ineffective. Finally, when he came to a place where the lane widened Baumann steered wide and come alongside the other car. Two men were in the front seat.

Baumann told them what he thought of them and then the two men got out of their car. They were policemen. "We'll overlook the names you called us," said one of them, "but we'll have to take you to the station for reckless driving." It was quite late when Baumann resumed his homeward journey.

LAUNCH PROBE OF RECEIVERSHIP ABUSES TODAY

Six Bond Committee Officials Called for Quiz.

Six secretaries of bondholders' protective committees are to be questioned today by Assistant Attorney General George S. Lavin, in an investigation of abuses of receiverships and foreclosures. Other groups of secretaries are to be called daily until all have appeared with minutes of their meetings.

The six to be questioned are J. R. Friedlund of the Home Mortgage Investment company bondholders' committee; Percival G. Hart of the Ell-Brandt company committee; E. L. Andersen of the Greenebaum Investment company committee; Harold C. Bull of the Wollenberg & Co., committee; Sam Tavalin of the Division Street State bank committee, and A. Rosenthal of the Chicago Medical Arts building committee.

Attorney General Otto Kerner said the secretaries are to be asked how officials of the committee were selected and how much they are paid. They will also be asked to tell how they operate and what they have done to protect bondholders.

"I am acting for the protection of good committees as well as to protect bondholders," Mr. Kerner said. "I hope to get from the efficient committees regulatory suggestions for legislative action. If anything is uncovered that is not right I shall not hesitate to bring grand jury action."

The attorney general announced the appointment of two assistants to aid in his campaign to curb excessive fees and other abuses of receiverships and foreclosures. These are James Graden Skinner and John W. Brabner-Smith.

Skinner is to be the chief assistant in the law department of the Chicago office. He was an assistant corporation counsel from 1911 to 1916 and served since that time as a special assistant on the Chicago harbor. He was associated with Kerner before the latter became a judge and has practiced in Chicago 32 years.

Brabner-Smith is a graduate of the Yale law school. Before coming to Chicago he was associated with the law firm of Elihu Root in New York, which was counsel for the Seabury and Roosevelt bondholders' committees. He is a lecturer of the Northwestern university law school and recently completed a series of articles on foreclosure practices with Prof. Homer F. Carey.

Jim Tully's Son Freed of Girl's Charge of Assault

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Thomas Alton Tully, 21, son of Jim Tully, author, today was acquitted by a jury. The jurors deliberated less than an hour. Young Tully was accused of two statutory assaults on Miss Frances Charbonneaux, a waitress.

AIRCRAFT CARRIERS "RAID" LOS ANGELES AND SAN FRANCISCO

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Aircraft carriers units of the "Black" invading fleet launched simultaneous air raids on two Pacific coast ports, San Pedro and San Francisco, between 4 a. m. and 7 a. m. today.

The San Francisco raiding group included the aircraft carrier Lexington and three heavy cruisers. Theoretically they were destroyed off Point Reyes by the 14 inch main batteries of the battleships Oklahoma and Texas of the defending "Blue" fleet.

Off Los Angeles the aircraft carrier Saratoga and her three heavy cruiser consorts, all supposedly badly damaged by gun fire, torpedoes and aerial bombs, were driven out of the Santa Barbara channel, but only after the Saratoga had loosed several score planes for a successful bombing raid on the Los Angeles area.

WIFE OF MASSIE CLAIMS SHE LEFT HAWAII IN 'DEAL'

Fights for Vindication in Rape Case.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Commutation of the ten year prison sentences imposed on the four defendants in Honolulu's sensational "honor slaying" case was the result says Mrs. Thomas H. Massie, one of the principals, of a "deal" she made with authorities to leave the islands and drop the prosecution.

Ascribing her disclosures to a desire to "vindicate" herself of aspersions she said were cast upon her by Hawaiian authorities when charges against four of her alleged attackers were dropped, Mrs. Massie said last night she left Honolulu only to save her mother and husband from jail.

Tells of Proposition.

The latter, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, and Lieut. Thomas H. Massie of the United States navy were convicted with two enlisted navy men on charges of manslaughter in connection with the death of Joseph Kahahawai one of five men of mixed blood accused of raping her.

On the day they were convicted, Mrs. Massie said, authorities made her a proposition.

"They offered to commute the sentences to one year," she said, "if I would leave Hawaii immediately. The offer was refused. They immediately offered to commute the sentences to one hour. This was accepted, and soon we left Hawaii."

When the charges against the four natives were dropped, an official report said investigation had failed to substantiate Mrs. Massie's identification of either Kahahawai or the others as her assailants. The report described some of Mrs. Massie's statements regarding the case as "unsatisfactory."

Assails Gov. Judd.

"This whitewashing that Gov. Lawrence Judd issued was entirely unnecessary," Mrs. Massie asserted. "I was not to appear against these men and consequently no evidence against them could be submitted. The indictments would have been quashed quietly and automatically."

Mrs. Massie said she has asked Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney who defended her mother and co-defendants, for confirmation of her statements, upon receipt of which, she said, she will take "further action."

"If he declines the confirmation," she added, "I will make a statement of my own to vindicate my story of the attack."

Asks Official's Removal.

HONOLULU, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Senator David Trask introduced in the Hawaiian senate today a resolution declaring Attorney General Harry Hewitt "should be removed from office without delay" for the manner in which he had conducted the case of four men accused of raping Mrs. Thomas H. Massie.

The resolution asserted Hewitt had so performed his duties in the case as to bring him "into public disreupte and public suspicion." Action on the resolution was deferred until March 16.

Trask's resolution was introduced after receipt of a dispatch from Philadelphia quoting Mrs. Massie as saying Hawaiian authorities had prevailed upon her to leave Hawaii before the men accused of attacking her were to be retried. The jury disagreed in the first trial, at which Mrs. Massie testified. The case was quashed last Monday and the men were freed.

Hewitt Denies "Deal."

Hewitt said he knew "absolutely nothing of any such arrangement" in reference to Mrs. Massie's charge.

Prosecutor John C. Kelley said:

"Mrs. Massie's statement is bunk. She left on the advice of her husband's attorney, Clarence Darrow. There never was any such deal, of course. She got out of Hawaii because Mr. Darrow told her to get out."

When informed Mrs. Massie had said he "whitewashed" the assault case, Gov. Lawrence M. Judd remarked:

"The case has been closed by regular legal procedure and the governor does not intend to enter any further discussion of the matter."

CAROL'S TROOPS FIRE INTO 4,000 'REBELS'; 7 SLAIN

King Leaves; Soldiers Patrol Capital.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Feb. 16.—The mailed fist of King Carol today struck at the radical movement to push him from his throne.

In January the haughty Hohenzollern saved his crown by firing the chief of police of Bucharest and the commander of gendarmes at the request of the cabinet and against his own wishes. Early in February he decreed martial law in Bucharest and the oil district of Ploesti to curb labor disorders.

Seven Slain in Battle.

Today his military forces again came to his rescue. They stormed the government railroad shops at Grivica, a suburb of Bucharest, and drove out 4,000 barricaded workers at the point of the bayonet after a pitched battle in which seven persons, included a soldier, were slain and scores were wounded.

The workers, who had been in possession of the shops for about 24 hours, refused the demand of the soldiers that they march out peacefully at 6 a. m. The soldiers then opened machine gun fire, which was answered with pistol shots from the yards.

The machine gun bombardment lasted fifteen minutes. The soldiers then dynamited the gates of the shops. The order was given to fix bayonets and charge. The troops poured in and a hand-to-hand struggle ensued. The workmen hurled burning torches at the soldiers.

At 8 a. m. the defenders were overpowered and 2,000 workers were rounded up as prisoners. Later all but 750 of the strikers were released.

King Speeds from Capital.

Upon receiving news of the clash King Carol sped from the capital for his Sinaia palace. He was accompanied by his cabinet.

Bucharest tonight is in a state of great excitement. The capital is without lights due to sabotage, and troops are patrolling the streets to maintain order.

The present trouble arose over resentment of the railway shopmen at the arrest of eleven of their leaders, who were arrested after protesting wage reductions. King Carol is known to be determined to stamp out the communist movement, which has been growing rapidly. The government has announced that it intends to make an example of the arrested strikers and will court martial them.

Wives and children of the eleven arrested strike leaders knelt for hours in front of Carol's palace, imploring him to pardon them and free the imprisoned workers.

Magda Lupescu Flees.

NICE, France, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Magda Lupescu, red haired beauty and friend of King Carol of Rumania, was reported today to have taken refuge on the Riviera as a result of difficulties in Bucharest. Reports said she crossed the border last night and was staying at Mentone, but police said there was no record of her there.

GET ANOTHER SIX MONTHS TO OBTAIN FORD'S TESTIMONY

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Process servers who for three months have been trying to hand subpoenas to both Henry Ford and his son, Edsel, today were given an additional six months in which to serve them.

Charles Edwin Fox, receiver for the Sweetin Automobile company, Philadelphia, which seeks to question the Fords, told Judge George G. Parry of Common Pleas court that "the taking of testimony from Mr. Ford is very vital because it is the only hope of obtaining anything for the creditors and stockholders of the Sweetin company."

Benjamin O. Frick, attorney for the Ford Motor company, charged that counsel for the receiver in Detroit "seek to make a vaudeville show out of this action."

Last month Wilfred C. Leland Jr. served the elder Ford at a party, the subpoena calling for his appearance before a notary in Detroit. A court, however, held it defective.

The Sweetin company, as former agency for the Lincoln automobile, seeks $227,000 from the Ford company, charging that the latter caused it that much loss.

WIFE CHARGES BROKER IS CRUEL; ASKS A DIVORCE

Mrs. Nellita Salmon Shedd, 621 Bonnie Brae, River Forest, filed suit for divorce in the Circuit court yesterday, charging her husband, Henry W. Shedd, insurance broker, with cruelty. Attorney Frank E. Cantwell, who filed the suit, declared that Shedd had an income of $7,500 a year. Mrs. Shedd asks alimony and money for the support of their two children, Thomas W. Shedd, 11 years old, and David Edward Shedd, 6 years old.

The bill sets forth that the Shedds were married May 24, 1921, and separated last Jan. 1.

Mrs. Shedd alleges that her husband twisted and bruised her arms on Nov. 17, 1932, and a month later tore a telephone from her hands as she was trying to make a call.

CHAS. A. NEUMANN IS CHOSEN JURY COMMISSIONER

Charles S. Neumann, 60 years old, 2859 Palmer street, was chosen at a joint meeting of the Circuit and Superior court judges to fill the unexpired term of his brother, the late Leopold Neumann, as a jury commissioner. The term expires on next July 2.

Mr. Neumann has been a resident of the 34th ward for more than 50 years. He formerly conducted the wholesale flour business which bears his name, but retired from active control six years ago. Although he has been identified with Democratic politics for many years he never has held a public office. He resides with his wife and a daughter, Margaret. He has two other children, a daughter, Mrs. Laura Hambourger, and a son, Walter.

Leopold Neumann died last Oct. 29 following a heart attack while making a political speech in support of Gov. Horner. He had conducted German language newspapers in Chicago for many years. Charles Neumann said yesterday it had been the "wish of Mayor Cermak" that he succeed his brother as jury commissioner.

DETECTIVE TRAPS BANK ROBBERS; KILL 1; SEIZE 3

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Trapped as they were about to enter a house in West Philadelphia, where they had hidden loot, three bank robbers were seized today. Their leader, Willie Ferguson, was killed by submachine gun fire while he tried to keep detectives out of a bathroom where he had hidden.

The gang was coming from Ambler, where Samuel Horst, cashier of the First National bank, had been kidnaped by the gang and forced to open the vault. There the robbers had obtained about $37,000.

When the detectives, who had not yet heard of that bank robbery, searched the house, where two women were questioned, they found about $50,000 which they believe had been taken during other bank robberies. The three men seized were questioned tonight on bank holdups in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

BRAZIL CLOSES AMAZON WATERS TO COMBATANTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Feb. 16—The channels of the upper Amazon were barred today by Brazil to Colombia and Peru, who on Tuesday began an undeclared war in Brazilian territory for the possession of the upper Amazon river port of Leticia.

Gen. Mora, commander of the Brazilian defense forces, informed the government here that the channels of Aramaza, Cleto, and Esperanza have been closed to the two combatant nations.

Will Isolate Colombians.

This action, it is assumed, will isolate the Colombian army transported up the Amazon to the fighting zone as the Colombians have no other way of reaching the area except by air. It also would shut off Peru from the Amazon river outlet to the Atlantic ocean.

Gen. Mora sent his message to the government from Leticia, which is now held by Peruvians.

The commander of the Peruvian forces, the Brazilian commander said informed him that the Colombian fighting planes had their wings painted green and blue in the same manner as the Brazilian planes. He also charged that the Colombian planes were taking off from Brazilian waters.

Dispatches from eastern Peru said that there was no further fighting today and that the Colombian fleet of five ships which "attacked" Peruvians at Tarpaca on the Putumayo river were remaining in Brazilian waters. Tarapaca is directly on the border.

Paraguay Claims Victory.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Feb. 16—(AP)—A Paraguayan war office communique today said Bolivian troops launched an attack last night in the Fort Nanawa sector in the Gran Chaco along almost the entire front but that the drive was repulsed.

The Bolivian losses, the communique said, were heavy with 157 known to be dead. The Paraguayan losses were said to be two dead and five slightly wounded. It was added that Bolivian artillery was active in the Saavedra sector yesterday.

URGE $8,000,000 SAVING IN RELIEF FOOD PURCHASES

Cost-Plus System Sought for Cook County.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A saving of about $8,000,000 this year in the distribution of food to needy families in Cook county, some of the emergency relief workers estimate, might be effected through a change in present methods of purchasing supplies. The saving would amount to about 10 per cent of the $80,000,000 which the experts figure is Cook county's need for relief in 1933. For the year just ended, relief expenditures in the county, of public funds—private funds not included—reached the sum of $45,460,000, and the present year is expected to see the load on the taxpayer almost doubled.

In looking for sources of waste in the disbursement of these vast sums the dispensing of food is regarded as the most susceptible spot. It is by far the greatest item in relief.

7 Per Cent for Salaries.

In Cook county of the amount expended, about 7 per cent goes for salaries, 1½ per cent for expenses, and 91.5 per cent is given to the recipient in the form of food, fuel, work, clothing, rent and medical care. About 80 per cent of the amount received by the "clients," as they are termed, is in the form of foodstuffs.

Thus with an estimated total cost of $80,000,000 this year for relief about $58,000,000 appears likely to be spent on food. By applying a wholesale cost plus system, a saving of between 12 and 15 per cent, it is contended, might be made, reducing the tax load by perhaps $8,000,000.

At the present rate of expenditures, which is less than is expected later, a saving of between $600,000 and $650,000 a month is figured as possible through a change in method, which has been under consideration by the emergency relief commission.

Use Old Methods.

As the system now stands, with little change in method from the boom days of prosperity, the food items given in family relief are as follows:

Second—Fresh milk, a pint a day for every child under 16 years, and special for sick and elderly people.

Third—A grocery order on a local groceryman normally patronized by the client.

About 25 per cent of the total expenditure for food is for milk. The Emergency Relief commission has contracts for delivery in bottles in the regular way at ½ cent a quart under the regular public price. It used to be 11 cents, now it is 8½ cents delivered on the doorstep of the needy.

Another 20 per cent of the food is the fixed ration. There are different sizes, depending on the size of the families aided, and they are delivered at the homes once a month in sealed cartons by trucks. The average family ration is $3. It is contracted for at a wholesale price, and the commission holds it is as economical a method of distributing food as a commissary or any other system.

The bulk of the food, however, 55 per cent of it, is distributed through grocery orders. A varied set of relief budgets depending on size of the family has been set up, giving the amount of weekly food allowance in dollars and cents. From this budget is deducted the cost of milk and the fixed ration, and a grocery order for the balance is issued to the client twice a month.

On the back of the order are printed the articles of food from which selection may be made and the client designates what grocer he will patronize. The prices are retail. The grocer attaches the receipted order to his bill and then bills the emergency relief commission.

The idea back of this system is that in disbursing relief there should be as little disruption as possible of the normal business life of the neighborhood and that it should aid the small tradesman. The retail prices at which these grocery orders are filled—this 55 per cent of the total relief food bill—are figured by the commission to average about 45 per cent above the wholesale prices.

Experience of York, Pa.

Some cities have set up commissaries from which all food relief supplies are given out, but, as in York, Pa., this has been followed by protests from small retailers who are taxpayers and who urge that it is unfair to them.

One proposed plan which would not involve the establishment of commissaries, but would utilize the neighborhood stores as dispensers of food [outside of milk and fixed rations] on a cost plus basis has been under discussion by the relief commission.

Under this plan the entire food supply would be contracted for at a wholesale price. Fixed rations and milk would be delivered as now. But the other 55 per cent would be under a cost plus basis.

The neighborhood shop would stock up at the contracted wholesale prices with items specified on the relief budget. The retailer would handle this stock and fill the grocery orders from relief clients for a 12 per cent charge. The grocer would send the receipted order to the wholesaler, who at the next delivery would replace the items and would pay the retailer 12 per cent of the wholesale price of the items for handling. The wholesaler would then bill the relief commission for the receipted orders plus the 12 per cent charge he had paid the retailer.

Provides Quick Turnover.

Advocates of this plan, which is being studied by the commission, argue that it would have advantages for taxpayers, neighborhood stores, families on relief, and the relief agencies, in addition to effecting a great savings. They argue that the retailer, although he would get 12 per cent instead of an average of 45 per cent on the goods he supplies on grocery relief orders, would have quick turnovers and few idle goods on his shelves and his 12 or 15 per cent fee would be paid quickly where now he is tied up with 45 to 60 days' bills.

The commission, too, would only have accounts with a few wholesalers instead of with several thousand retailers, which would reduce expenses.

At present about $5,000,000 a month of public funds [not counting in private funds] is being actually dispensed in relief in Cook county, outside of administration costs. Of this about 80 per cent, or $4,000,000 goes for food. The milk is figured as costing $1,000,000, the fixed rations, $800,000. This leaves $2,200,000 dispensed in grocery orders at retail prices. The cost plus system, its advocates figure, would save at least 30 per cent on this amount, or over $650,000, a month. These are round numbers, of course.

The 3 per cent sales tax passed by the state senate and now before the house at Springfield, will raise the funds needed for 1933 relief, according to Wilfred S. Reynolds, director of the emergency relief commission, who spoke yesterday before the City club. The commission has estimated the relief requirements for this year as 92 million dollars for Illinois, of which 80 million will be required in Cook county.

Receive Relief Report.

George W. Rossetter, president of the Association of Commerce, and C. L. Rice, official of the Western Electric company and a member of the association, presented a report on the administration of relief funds to the county board yesterday. After a brief discussion the county commissioners agreed to appoint a committee to meet with a committee of the Association of Commerce to consider legislation to place the administration of relief funds on a more economical basis.

The commissioner's committee, consisting of Peter M. Kelly, William Busse, and Marie Plumb, will meet with the Rossetter group early next week. At that time the recommendations of the commerce association report will be studied. The commerce commission had suggested that a new relief commission with limited membership and absolute freedom from political and personal interests be given charge of all relief administration.

RELIEF COMMISSION TO SUPPLY 200 MEN TO CLEAR LOOP SNOW

The request of Commissioner of Public Works Hewitt for more men to aid in removing snow from the streets in the loop and in the districts adjacent to the central business district was granted yesterday by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission.

Dr. Martin H. Bickham, head of the "earned relief" section of the relief agency, informed the commissioner that 200 men would be supplied for three days' work today, Monday and Tuesday. In addition, more than 100 city employés attached to the First ward force will be working on street cleaning. By Tuesday night, the commissioner said, all traces of last week's heavy snowfall should be removed from the streets and sidewalks in the downtown area.

Some of the men, who will be supplied by the relief commission, will be members of the union headed by Michael Carrozzo. Carrozzo, who is not a citizen of the United States, is blamed for the delay in clearing away the snow because of his insistence that the city should put to work members of his union as well as men on the relief rolls.

WELFARE FUND TELLS CHARITIES TO CUT BUDGETS

Less than ⅔ of $7,500,000 Goal Attained.

Rigid economy within private welfare agencies is urged in letters signed by Frank D. Loomis, secretary of the Emergency Welfare fund, and sent to 125 agencies participating in the campaign inaugurated last October to raise $7,500,000 for charities other than relief of the idle.

The fact that less than $5,000,000 of that amount has been raised, together with the discontinuance on Feb. 1 of allocations from the Illinois emergency relief commission, caused the welfare fund to notify its member agencies to revise their budgets. They were requested to present the reduced estimates of needs immediately.

Hope for New Contributions.

Mr. Loomis voiced a hope yesterday that contributors will come forward to help the private agencies retain their present budgets. Many of them will be hard hit, he said, if they are forced to make further economies. The entire amount of the $7,500,000 is needed, he added.

"The private agencies already have utilized almost every way possible to save money," Loomis said. "Their workers' salaries have been cut to almost nothing and some have been going along for months without pay.

"The private agencies serve in many ways the public seldom hears of. For instance, they keep countless people off the relief lists by renewing their courage, giving them odd jobs, or offering wise counsel."

Help Poor to Help Selves.

Mr. Loomis stressed the importance of the small agency, which is doing a valuable service in its neighborhood by thus helping people help themselves.

Mr. Loomis pointed out that many excellent agencies outside the welfare fund group have declined help. This generosity, he added, threw funds to other welfare groups more urgently in need. All agencies on the Emergency Welfare fund's list have been indorsed by the Chicago Association of Commerce.

The list of agencies participating in the Emergency Welfare fund includes five major relief agencies, 12 minor relief agencies, 22 child caring agencies, five health agencies, nine protective agencies, 40 neighborhood work agencies, seven miscellaneous groups, 12 free clinics, and 12 free bed hospitals.

R. Douglas Stuart is president of the Emergency Welfare fund. Robert A. Gardner is director of the campaign to raise $7,500,000 for the distribution among the agencies.

PLEADS FOR HOSPITALS

The Chicago Medical society yesterday requested the Emergency Relief fund, in the "interests of efficiency and impartiality," to adopt a policy of sending patients depending on the fund for hospitalization to hospitals nearest the patients' homes. This request was made in a letter to Frank D. Loomis, secretary of the fund, signed by Dr. Charles Phifer, secretary of the medical society.

"Although there are approximately seventy general hospitals in the city, registered and approved by the American Medical association, barely 20 per cent of these, or only thirteen or fourteen have been designated by the fund to receive and care for patients," the medical society pointed out.

The letter was based on a resolution passed by the society's council at its February meeting.

JAPAN DARES THE WORLD TO GET MANDATE ISLES

Tokio Ponders Just When to Quit League.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Feb. 17 (Friday).—Japan's withdrawal from the league of nations over the Manchurian dispute today became only a question of time. This, it was learned, will be decided by the cabinet either today or tomorrow. It is expected that the notice of resignation will be sent within a fortnight.

In connection with the withdrawal the foreign office spokesman announced that Yosuke Matsuoka, chief delegate at Geneva, has been granted permission to return to Tokio by way of America. Matsuoka will leave by the end of this month, the spokesman said.

"We Keep the Islands."

"Regarding the mandated islands [the Marshall and Caroline islands in the Pacific, delivered to Japan under the Versailles treaty], there is no question that we are in possession of them," the spokesman asserted. "The league cannot say anything. If any one wants them, let him try to come and take them.

"The only question remaining is the technical method of withdrawal. This will be decided by the cabinet, which meets today and again tomorrow. Japan is not taking a method similar to that of smaller powers which have resigned for no special reason. It is up to the league, not to Japan, to commit suicide."

Gen. Sadao Araki, minister of war, also prepared the country for Japan's withdrawal from the league.

"Some persons fear that Japan after leaving the league may suffer from an economic boycott, or have to fight the world in other ways," he said, "but these fears are groundless. No country will risk its existence for the league.

"It is also declared that Japan may be isolated after leaving the league, but how can Japan be more isolated than now? And since Japan will have to spend a considerable sum for military purposes in Manchukuo, where disturbances are likely to occur, it will consequently be better economically for Japan to withdraw.

"The steel must be struck while it is hot. The Jehol bandits must be exterminated while the army's feelings are at the present burning stage. What must be done, must be done. Japan made a great mistake at the London naval conference when she gave in. This reacted greatly on the country and has had extremely bad effects. Japan cannot repeat such a mistake in Manchuria."

(This referred to the treaty in which naval tonnages were set at the 5-5-3 ratio for great Britain, United States, and Japan, respectively.)

Japs Gird for Attack.

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Along the frozen, snowbanked roads which wind south and west from this city soldiers are moving day and night in loose marching order toward the Jehol province border. Japan is getting ready to attack.

Japanese troops, augmented by the armed forces of Manchukuo, probably 50,000 strong, are marching to the mobilization points from which the long planned Jehol invasion will begin. It will be a drive along a 200 mile front, and it may become the most serious clash between China and Japan since their undeclared war began in September, 1931.

At least half of this force is made up of Japanese veterans, who went through last year's Manchurian campaign. Against them China can throw 150,000 men, strong in numbers but weak in organization.

The Japanese authorities justify their designs on Jehol by the contention that the province is a part of Manchukuo and that the drive now in preparation is a "policing" operation to bring the province under the control of the Manchukuo authorities.

IDLE EVICTED FROM CITY HALL AFTER 2 DAYS

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 16.—(AP)—A two day siege of the county-city building by an army of about 5,000 idle was ended early tonight, deputy sheriffs and police evicting the demonstrators after nearly two hours of effort.

With Sheriff Claude G. Bannick's entire force of deputies and 100 policemen at the scene, the demonstrators were led out of the building with little violence on either side.

Before leaving, however, William Dobbins, leader of the organization of the idle, announced that their headquarters would be removed to another nearby building.

"This eviction was just what we wanted," he said. "It will aid in crystallizing sentiment for our cause."

The demonstrators, men, women, and children, took possession of the building Tuesday night, asserting they would remain until their demands for relief were met.

Commit Mrs. Ida M. Tilden to Custody of Daughter

Mrs. Ida Merrill Tilden, widow of William A. Tilden, was yesterday committed to the custody of her daughter, Mrs. Esther Batchelder, 356 East Hilldale road, Lake Forest, by County Judge Perry L. Persons of Lake county following a sanity hearing in the Batchelder home. Two sons of Mrs. Tilden, William J. and Merrill Tilden, and Mrs. Batchelder announced they would seek the appointment by the Lake county Probate court of a conservator of Mrs. Tilden's estate.

Second of 90 Taxi Drivers Acquitted in License Case

A jury in the Municipal court of Judge Robert J. Dunne yesterday acquitted Ben Africk, 2902 West 22d street, a driver for the Public Taxi Service company, of a charge of operating a taxi without a license. The case was the second won by the taxi company, ninety of whose drivers have been arrested on a similar charge.

BERWYN BANKER GUILTY OF BRIBES TO 13 ALDERMEN

Judge Rejects 'Campaign Gift' Defense.

Francis Karel, 34 years old, chairman of the board of the closed First American National Bank and Trust company of Berwyn, was found guilty yesterday by Judge Philip L. Sullivan of paying $10,000 in bribes to 13 Berwyn aldermen. The defendant faces a sentence of one to five years in the penitentiary.

The state charged that Karel distributed the money among the aldermen in return for a council resolution to rent as a city hall the building vacated by the First National bank of Berwyn. This institution, of which Karel became president at the age of 29, merged with three other banks to form the First American National. Testimony showed that Berwyn rented half the bank building as a city hall for $100 a month, and later, after the building was vacated, leased the entire structure for 10 years at $500 a month.

Denies Money Was Bribe.

Ald. Thomas F. Shea, who had been granted immunity on his promise to testify for the state, surprised the prosecution Wednesday with the statement that the $10,000 was given in campaign contributions and not in bribes. He said that Karel made the contributions because he had saved commissions to real estate operators by dealing directly with the council. Karel took the stand yesterday and told the same story in his own defense.

Judge Sullivan, who heard the case without a jury, pronounced Karel guilty with the following statement:

"I don't believe Shea's testimony," the judge said. "I believe that the money proposition was discussed prior to the passage of the ordinance. It seems to me preposterous that a man of Karel's intelligence should pay $10,000 simply as a campaign contribution after the deal had been closed.

Says Defendant Is Guilty.

"The conclusion is inescapable and the result inevitable. The facts show Karel guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Punishment in this case should deter others. The general impression is that every part of the government is for sale. If the governments of this country are to be maintained this sort of practice has got to stop."

Judge Sullivan at first denied a motion for a new trial and then allowed Defense Attorney Ben Short until March 3 to present argument for a new hearing. Karel is under indictment in the federal court on charges of making false statements to bank examiners. Nine Berwyn aldermen are charged with accepting bribes, and their trial is set for March 18 before Judge James F. Fardy.

NEW YORK BOY CONFESSES HE KILLED YOUTH

Murch is 15, a "cop hater," a bully and juvenile gang leader and, according to his own confession to police, he stabbed the Bender boy Jan. 31. He hid his victim's body in an unfinished house on Richmond Hill circle, Queens, not far from the Bender home. It was found yesterday, and Murch, already under suspicion, was immediately arrested. He confessed after six hours of questioning.

Magistrate Daly held him without bail, committed him to the custody of the Children's shelter in Jamaica, and set the hearing for Feb. 24.

The police said Murch's bravado broke down a little under questioning. "I did it," they said he told them. "Bender lied about me and told everybody in the neighborhood I hit Mrs. Paterson on the head with a wrench. I said I'd get him for it, and I did."

COMMEND KILLER OF BANDIT.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide yesterday at the inquest into the death of an unidentified bandit and commended Thomas Paviakes, 55 years old, one of the owners of the Madison Street Department store, 1035 West Madison street, who killed the bandit in the store last Friday night.

SENATE, 63 TO 23, VOTES TO SUBMIT DRY REPEAL

House to Act Monday; States to Follow.

up the battle for this session. A move in this direction two days ago by Senator Millard E. Tydings [Dem., Md.] galvanized the Robinson leadership into immediate action. From a lukewarm advocate of general repeal, the usually ponderous, lethargic Robinson suddenly took the field and demanded nothing less than "naked repeal."

Robinson's attack on the original compromise Blaine resolution, banning the saloon and entangling the federal government in prohibition enforcement, rallied Democratic and Republican wets behind him, broke down the fading dry filibuster, and won for him in the end the support of Majority Leader James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.] and Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.].

There was no letup on the part of the Robinson forces from the time they first got the hope of success yesterday by forcing consideration of the Blaine resolution until they had stripped it of its major enforcement provisions. They caused its adoption after three and a half hours of spectacular debate before crowded galleries today.

Glass Amendment Beaten.

Two amendments—one by Senator Carter Glass, slight of figure but a giant in oratorical display, and Senator David A. Reed, Republican stalwart from Pennsylvania, were pressed in an effort to provide for a federal ban on the saloon.

By 46 to 38 the Glass amendment was turned down. A few moments later Reed's motion to ban the saloon lost by 47 to 37. An amendment by Reed to ban the saloon, but making no provision for federal enforcement of the ban, lost, 70 to 14.

A huge crowd that filled the galleries and packed the lobbies with long waiting lines journeyed to the senate for today's show. In the senate chamber virtually every seat was filled from 2 oclock on. Many representatives and others enjoying floor privileges were massed in a closely packed black horseshoe shaped line back of the senatorial seats.

Vice President Curtis rapped vainly for order for seven minutes after the final vote was taken. The ending of the balloting had loosened the tension and while there were no outbursts of applause the buzz of comment that sprang up in all sections of the chamber made conduct of business impossible for the moment.

Not only was the Democratic house leadership rallying tonight for action Monday but Bertrand H. Snell [Rep., N. Y.], minority floor leader, declared himself in hearty accord. He joined with Mr. Garner ins predicting the adoption of the resolution.

Britten Helps Move.

At the same time Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.], leading house wet, announced that the so-called house wet bloc will meet on Saturday morning in an effort to line up votes. Mr. Britten recalled that 103 Republicans voted in favor of the Democratic flat repeal resolution on the opening day of this session and declared that at least 150 Republican votes could be counted on for the Blaine repeal resolution, which more nearly conforms to the Republican campaign plank.

Representative Rainey, majority leader, said the resolution "complies absolutely with the Democratic campaign platform."

It was clearly apparent from the time the Vice President's gavel started today's proceedings that friends and foes of the repeal resolution were agreed upon one matter. This was that federal prohibition had been a colossal failure.

"Utter Failure," Glass Says.

"Prohibition seems to have been an utter failure," said Senator Glass when he arose to press his amendment banning the saloon. "I am certain, nevertheless, that the country will not approve the Blaine repeal resolution unless it provides a ban on the saloon. I insist upon a constitutional guarantee against the abominable saloon system."

"Prohibition is a failure," he agreed.

"Prohibition has not been successful," agreed Senator Borah, rising to denounce the whole repeal movement. For the next few moments his booming voice filled the galleries as with waving arms and ruffled thinning mane he denounced the repeal movement and the nation's failure to enforce prohibition.

Then arose Tydings, the Maryland bachelor senator, who a few weeks ago threatened to resign his seat unless congress got down to work. His purpose, he quickly explained, was to reply to Senator Arthur R. Robinson [Rep., Ind.], who earlier had denounced the senate for adopting the Robinson [Dem., Ark.] amendment last night which removed the federal saloon ban from the repealer.

"Mr. President," Senator Tydings said, his tall, slim figure slouched forward, "it seems to me that we have lost sight here of the real substance of this proposition. One senator after another has arisen and assumed a fact that does not exist, namely, that if we repeal the 18th amendment liquor is going to come back.

"I want to know when it ever went away?

"Every man in this chamber knows that the police records of the capital of the United States show that in the ten years following prohibition, as compared with the ten years preceding prohibition, there was five times as many persons under twenty-one years of age arrested for intoxication. If five times as many persons under twenty-one years of age have been arrested for intoxication right here under the nose of congress what is the use of talking about liquor coming back?"

Bootleggers' Public Utility.

"Every man knows," continued Tydings, as a murmur swept the chamber, "that he can go to the telephone and have a bootlegger come up to his office and deliver liquor within a half hour. Every man here knows that New York and Chicago and every large city are filled with speakeasies. We know that crime has grown on a scale never before seen in the history of any country.

"We know that gunmen have ruled our cities, yet men have the effrontery to stand here and say we are going back to that wicked thing called liquor, when, under present conditions, it has corrupted more public officials and government officers than ever before, increased drinking among the young, built speakeasies all over the land and made hi-jacking and bootlegging and distilling in an illegal way, the words of mouth of every citizen of the land."

Answers Indianan's Fear.

"When," continued Tydings, "the senator from Indiana gets up and tells us about the good women of this land who are going to be debauched with liquor, he loses sight of the fact that the good women of this land are drinking more under prohibition than they ever drank under the old regime."

"And," Tydings shot this home, amidst a buzz of comment, "every man in this chamber knows it.

"The senator [Robinson, Ind.] knows more youths are drinking today than ever drank before in the history of this republic. He knows there is more graft and corruption and hypocrisy in high places than ever. He knows there have been more murders in Chicago in a single year than have happened in Great Britain in over ten years. He knows there are 5,000 speakeasies in New York City."

Gains Under Prohibition.

The Marylander closed by asking himself this question:

"What are the gains of prohibition?"

Mr. Tydings furnished his own answer:

"The gains," he said, "are elimination of the saloon and the substitution of the speakeasy. The gains are the crime, the murder, the corruption, the hypocrisy of men who occupy the highest legislative positions in the gift of this republic."

"Are there," he demanded, "any senators in this chamber who have violated the 18th amendment or the Volstead act?"

"Are there any representatives?" he asked.

"I do not say there are," hastily continued Tydings. "The senators themselves know the answer to my question."

Jouett Shouse, president of the Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment, asserted tonight that the action of the senate today would strengthen the faith of the American people in constitutional government.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—One of the most puzzling political oddities that your correspondent has observed during the present lame duck session of congress is the opposition to the repeal of prohibition by statesmen who would still oppose repeal, even if it were shown that the revenue from the sale of liquor was the only means of saving the national treasury from bankruptcy.

The Association Against Prohibition insists that complete repeal and a liberal sale of liquor as well as wine and beer would yield a billion dollars a year and balance the budget. This may be an exaggeration, like the asking price in a breach of promise suit, for the Association Against Prohibition is a lobby conducted by practical politicians and lobbies, under legal counsel, have a tendency to claim the maximum.

The Anti-Saloon league, which is another lobby, used to claim that prohibition would abolish poverty forever, fill the banks with savings and empty the jails. However, the tax under repeal might bring in half a billion dollars a year and the budget still might be balanced very conveniently.

New Type of Patrioteer?

In that case, with every drink representing a definite contribution to the government funds, drinking could be looked upon as a patriotic duty and a new type of patrioteer might spring to life, vowing never to draw another sober breath until the return of prosperity and regretting that he had but one set of arteries to give to his country. In extreme cases, dry citizens might be hounded through the streets as unfortunates who happened to bear the name of Krauss or Schultz were harrassed a few years ago, and compelled to stand to the bar and drink numerous whisky sours to prove their love of country.

Moderates, of course, would disapprove this sort of conduct, if only on the ground that whisky sours were too good for prohibitionists, but it would take stern measures to protect the Rev. Clarence True Wilson and the Rev. Deets Picket from bands of patriotic zealots.

Industry Not So Noble.

In trying to contemplate such a situation one must remember that certain moral values which have been cherished for a long time are rapidly losing their value in the present situation. The virtue of industry is not as noble as it used to be and, indeed, t statesmen have already half approved a measure which would bribe the farmer to take it easy, thereby producing less and thereby, eventually, creating a shortage and raising prices.

Similarly the fine old virtue of thrift is coming into downright disrepute, what with the statesmen inveighing against hoarding and the editorials urging the citizens who have any money to spend it away for merchandise in anticipation of their needs, lest it lose its value by inflation.

Industry and thrift have been what a statesman would call foundation stones in the escutcheon of our sacred heritage, but if they are to droop and wither on the reef of adversity the fine old virtue of total abstinence might as well be thrown to the wolves, too.

One matter which your correspondent has seen no mention of in any of the current debates among the statesmen is the power of alcoholic beverages as a trade stimulant. This power is well recognized by the proprietors of the large hotels in all the big cities who have complained that their guests go out to the speakeasies under prohibition and spend money liberally, but squawk bitterly when they come to settle their hotel bills in the cold light of the morning and discover that coffee was 20 cents per cup.

The speakeasy proprietors recognize it also in their custom of giving away drinks of benedictine, curaçao, or cuantro to patrons who have taken time out from their drinking to dine. One drink of speakeasy benedictine, curaçao, or cuantro calls for another, and so on until closing time, at a dollar a drink. One free liqueur, given for priming purposes, may yield a revenue of $25 before dawn. By that time it is coming in seidels.

It seems odd that the retail merchants of dry communities have not recalled the trade stimulating influence of the old small town saloon because there, undoubtedly, was one of the most potent aids to commerce that ever existed in the rural communities.

It is not good sense to imagine that a loving husband coming home from a prohibition lecture on a Saturday night would suddenly feel liberal and invite his loving helpmeet to stop off at the Bing department store and buy herself something unnecessary, but your correspondent has a friend, Mr. Jimmy Bronson, the manager of prize fighters, who recalls that when he was running a beautiful saloon in Joplin, Mo., down where Oklahoma and Arkansas meet, the Saturday night shopping was the main support of the local retail commerce.

Come on Saturday Nights.

"Joplin was very, very wet," Mr. Bronson related, "but Arkansas and Oklahoma were very, very dry, so on Saturday nights all the dry farmers and miners and their wives would drive to Joplin.

"The husbands would come into my beautiful little saloon for a little refreshment and the wives would go nosing around in the stores without buying much. They would see things which they wished to buy, of course, but they would not spend the money until they could take a peek at pa and see how he was doing. But after pa had been in my beautiful little saloon for an hour or so the wives would send in word that ma was waiting outside and pa would throw in a couple of quick ones and put a quart in his pocket and go out to meet ma.

"You cannot imagine how this stimulated the retail business of Joplin on Saturday nights in my time," Mr. Bronson recalled longingly. "After looking around, ma would say she just saw a beautiful dresser in the furniture department, or a new coat or something or other and pa would tell her, sure, go ahead and get it because that was what money was for. And go ahead and get a new washwringer, too. Get the best that money would buy, because, good old ma, she was a pretty fair sort of old girl, after all, fat or no fat, and the best was none too good for her.

Drive Business Out.

"They drove all that business out of the dry territory and over the line into Joplin on Saturday nights, and then the country went dry and now nobody gets the business. It was a great mistake."

But the dry statesmen hold prohibition above everything else, including the budget, and even if it were conclusively shown that the treasury must have the liquor revenue or go broke, they would still vote for appropriations, including farm relief, ornamental postfices, dams, ditches and pensions for their constituents, but against repeal of the eighteenth amendment. One of their claims is that the citizens have no money to spend on liquor anyway and this apparently is so. Whether it is actually so is another question. The Anti-Saloon league used to say that even if a man were broke and his family in want he could always find money to buy liquor, and many citizens might as well be drunk as they way they are under the amendment which was going to abolish poverty, fill the banks and empty the jails.

Iowans Start Action for Legal Beer and Wines

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 16.—(AP)—State Senator Matt D. Cooney of Dubuque said today he probably will introduce a beer bill in the Iowa general assembly within the next week or ten days.

Other measures seeking to amend the Iowa state law to permit the manufacture and possession of light wines and beer were under consideration in the assembly in anticipation of favorable action by congress on the repeal measure.

Would Put Missouri Early in Repeal Race

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Legislation making possible a state prohibition repeal ratification convention will be drawn immediately for presentation to the Minnesota lawmakers now in session, State Senator Claude MacKenzie said today.

Arkansas Senate Defeats Legal Wines, Brandies

They've Never Tasted a Tonic!

THESE are not patent medicine children. Their appetite needs no coaxing. Their tongues are never coated, cheeks never pale. And their bowels move just like clockwork, because they have never been given a habit-forming laxative.

You can have children like this—and be as healthy yourself—if you follow the advice of a famous family physician. Stimulate the vital organs. The strongest of them need help at times. If they don't get it, they grow sluggish. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin is a mild, safe stimulant.

When a youngster doesn't do well at school, it may be the liver that's lazy. Often the bowels hold enough poisonous waste to dull the senses! A spoonful of delicious syrup pepsin once or twice a week will avoid all this. It contains fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin, and does a world of good to any system—young or old. You can always get this fine prescriptional preparation at any drug store. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and protect your family from those bilious days, frequent sick spells and colds. Keep a bottle in the medicine chest instead of cathartics that so often bring on chronic constipation. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin can always be employed to give clogged bowels a thorough cleansing, with none of that painful griping, or burning feeling afterward. It isn't expensive.

CANADIAN HOUSE DEFEATS U.S. RUM EXPORT MEASURE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 16.—The Canadian house of commons voted tonight, 100 to 44, against resumption of liquor exports into the United States. The action was taken despite the fact that an estimated annual revenue of $12,000,000 would have followed legalization.

Party reins were off for the vote, which occurred after a long debate. Conservatives, Liberals, Laborites, and Progressives split on opposite sides of the issue. Even members of the dominion cabinet were divided, two ministers voting to resume liquor shipments and eight, including Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, voting against resumption.

King Opposes Bill.

The issue was presented in a bill by Col. Sidney C. Robinson, Essex county Conservative. If carried it would have repealed the prohibition liquor exports to the United States enacted by MacKenzie King's Liberal government in 1930. King reiterated today his warning that serious international incidents might follow if rum running were allowed to flourish on the border.

A few members, notably Dave Spence, Toronto Conservative, questioned the sincerity of the American prohibition law. Spence declared liquor was sold openly in the republic and that therefore Canada should not attempt to hold back. And America's recent election vote, deemed to have been a wet declaration, was frequently referred to by Robinson bill proponents as a reason why Canada should turn on the liquor flow again.

Today's poll of 44 votes for a resumption of shipments constitutes a quadrupling of the strength of the liquor export advocates. At the last trial of strength they mustered only eleven votes.

Bennett, King Oppose Bill.

Liquor export advocates tonight took solace in the knowledge that if America legalizes strong beer, the export prohibition law automatically becomes void.

Prime Minister Bennett and King sounded the death knoll for Col. Robinson's bill in the afternoon session when both took the floor to denounce the measure.

"It does not matter," said Bennett, "that there is a prospect that the United States will change its prohibition law. It exists at present and we cannot conjecture what the United States may do in the future."

MOBILE AND OHIO RAIL EMPLOYES VOTE TO STRIKE

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Employés of the Mobile and Ohio railroad have voted to strike rather than continue to accept a 20 per cent wage cut, it was learned tonight, and the wage dispute will be submitted to the United States board of mediation.

Representatives of the thirteen railway brotherhoods who had been negotiating with the Mobile and Ohio receiver in St. Louis would make no comment on the result of the strike balloting beyond saying that the necessary two-thirds of the 3,500 employés involved had voted to strike unless the wage question could be settled by mediation.

Ernest E. Norris, receiver for the Mobile and Ohio, at the conclusion of a final conference held here with representatives of the brotherhoods, tonight invoked the law governing wage disputes and submitted the case to the United States board of mediation. He sent a telegram to the board's headquarters in Washington asking that it send representatives to St. Louis to hear evidence and attempt to effect a settlement.

Norma Shearer of Films, Husband, Going to Europe

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Norma Shearer, movie star, today secured a passport to journey to the south of France and other European countries. She will leave shortly with her husband, Irving Thalberg, motion picture producer, who is taking the trip in the interest of his health. Thalberg was stricken with influenza last December, following which complications set in, and he had to be treated for a condition affecting his heart.

Wins $1 Damage Against Ex-Sheriff; Asked $10,000

Marion, Ill., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Walter Long, a Marion carpenter, was awarded one dollar in his suit against former Sheriff Oren Coleman for $10,000, as the result of an alleged injury in a scuffle. The verdict will require Colemand to pay costs of the trial and the dollar. Lang alleged he suffered from palsy following a scuffle with Coleman. Coleman said he attacked Lang in fun.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

ANTON CERMAK.

The people of Chicago, shocked to learn that a bullet from the gun of a mental defective had struck the mayor of the city, could find some reason for pride in the utterance of Mr. Cermak when he said to Mr. Roosevelt, "I am glad it was me instead of you." The bullets were intended for the President elect. They did not reach him, and the country was spared a tragedy. It is with profound relief that the American people realize that upon the eve of the inauguration of a new President he was not made the victim of a maniac. There is the personal element and there is more than that. These distressed times are spared that calamity and also the confusion which even our ordered processes would suffer. With that reflection the people of Chicago may turn with regret to the aspect of the event which most closely touches them.

All right thinking citizens of Chicago have come to have a high regard for the man who was elected mayor to take responsibility for emergencies seldom encountered by an American city. We believe that Mr. Cermak has tried with all the ability of a very able man to meet the emergencies intelligently and honestly. Few men taking important office have inherited so much trouble for which they were not responsible. Mr. Cermak's predecessor had made a ruin of every function of government upon which he could lay his hands. It was Mr. Cermak's duty to rebuild upon the ruins in times of general and widespread hardship.

We think he faced his problems courageously and did the best that was in him to put this punch drunk city back on its feet, to restore its reputation in the eyes of the world, to reestablish its credit, to relieve its taxpayers, and to pay its debts.

Another word may be said about Anton Cermak. He was born in Bohemia. He faced the opportunities and problems of American life and was required at the beginning to absorb the American tradition and to become a part of American political thought. He entered its political life and so complete was his success in taking over every essential of American thinking that when he and Franklin Roosevelt were together two Americans talked to each other, and they were entirely two such Americans as might have had their ancestry in common from families which landed before the revolution.

We think it is important to dwell upon this in a tribute to Anton Cermak, because even if it be a commonplace in our ordinary observation of American life it is the most significant factor in it. It was not peculiar to Mr. Cermak alone. It is in truth the foundation of the American citadel. It makes this a nation of a people distinctive in their own right, in their own ideals, in their common aspirations for humanity, and in their stability of political action and government. Although it be the common thing, it is proper now to recognize it for its eternal worth in a tribute to a citizen of Chicago who was born in another land and who has served the country of his choice.

AMBASSADORSHIPS AND THE CAMPAIGN DEFICIT.

Chairman Farley of the Democratic national committee is anxious to have the $750,000 deficit in the late campaign fund met before March 4. He thinks the principle of a balanced budget should be applied in the party as in the government financial policy and he suggests contributions from the states on the quota system according to wealth and population.

Whether this plan will produce results is a matter of prophecy. We think it might be advisable to get the deficit paid in before the selections for the major posts in the diplomatic service are finally closed. That plan might pan out more satisfactorily.

THE LONG BROTHERS OF LOUISIANA.

Senator Huey P. Long says his brother Earl is a liar. Earl Long testified before the election committee that his brother, the Kingfish, had been paid $10,000 by a man whom he described as the payoff man for a power firm. Earl Long says that Huey told him he had been given this $10,000 and that Huey remarked he was afraid the bills had been marked. Huey replied that Earl was a damn liar. Apparently the two Long boys are not on the best of terms.

Aside from the interest the episode might hold as a domestic matter, it has an aspect of importance for the United States senate, which is the judge of the qualification of its members. If Earl Long is not a liar, as Huey says he is, Huey would seem to fail to attain the moral standards which the senate has insisted in other cases must pertain to membership.

On two occasions the Republican Frank Smith from Illinois knocked at the door of the senate in vain with his credentials because it was a matter of record that he had been given a campaign contribution of $125,000 by utility companies, over which, as chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, he had regulating power. The radicals in the senate, among whom Senator Long of Louisiana is now to be found, made short work of Mr. Smith as an enemy of the people and a representative of the utility interests. Although Mr. Smith's credentials were irreproachable, his qualifications were at least dubious. Now the shoe is on the other foot. It will be interesting to observe what doubts arise in the demagogic section of the senate when the noisiest demagogue of them all, the Louisiana Democrat, is accused before a senate, soon to be Democratically controlled, by his own brother of conduct in a transaction which may have a bearing upon the qualifications of the senator from Louisiana.

THE TRANSPORTATION REPORT.

The gist of the report of the national transportation committee, of which the late Calvin Coolidge was chairman until his death, appears to be a sound admonition to return to common sense in facing our transportation problem. First we are told that parallel railway lines do not compete, but merely furnish very expensive duplicate service. Ex-Gov. Smith goes further and recommends regional consolidations to be made compulsory if necessary. This suggestion could have originated in the files of THE TRIBUNE, as we published on Aug. 30, 1931, a proposal to consolidate the railways of the United States by regions. It, therefore, has our hearty approval.

Next the committee turns to the rate making formula of the present law, which requires that the interstate commerce commission shall initiate rates that will enable the railways to make a fair return on their valuation, which is also to be determined by the interstate commerce commission. This formula is to be scrapped, according to the committee, and a basis of costs of operation under efficient management adopted as a guide. THE TRIBUNE agrees that the present formula has been found to be unworkable, but doubts if rates based on cost of operation may be substituted. It has been found impossible to segregate the cost of handling any one particular shipment or car and a cost basis would mean that all commodities must be handled at equal rates. Rates on low grade commodities would be advanced and on high grade commodities reduced.

Fundamentally, a freight rate should represent the difference between the cost of producing an article at one point and the price for which it can be sold at a profit at another point. Every situation must be examined separately and this is beyond the scope of any formula or the power of any central committee.

The third recommendation means literally that the railroads should wake up. They should adopt competing methods, of which they complain, cooperate to reduce competitive expense and abandon unnecessary services, circuitous routes, etc. Perhaps the removal of the regulation suggested would restore life to the carriers. We are inclined to think that it would.

We are not entirely in sympathy with suggestions to regulate competing forms of transportation. They are reminiscent of the hobbies placed on railways a century ago at the connivance of the stage coach and canal operators. There is no public demand for regulation of transportation by water or highway, except such as has been instigated by the railways themselves.

It is to be hoped that the recommendation of this committee will immediately receive the attention of congress in order to avoid what ex-Gov. Smith appears to foresee—that our railway transportation system, crippled by regulation, will be dropped on the doorstep of the taxpayers.

BUGHOUSE MR. WHITE.

William Allen White, the Emporia editor, celebrated his sixty-fifth birthday anniversary in a way he was showman enough to know would get him circulation the country over. That's all right. William Allen is an amusing cuss. To celebrate he wrote that in his youth he had adopted the motto, for guidance in life, "Ain't it grand to be bughouse?" He explained that it was grand because there is no insanity so devastating as utter sanity, and no worse addiction, not even that to whisky, so bad as addiction to logic.

No doubt Mr. White believes it, but he must not regard himself as a hermit in his idea. The whole state of Kansas joins him in the credo. And there are many believers elsewhere. The doctrine can, however, be overplayed. It frequently is. It is not necessarily true that a citizen escapes realities by taking a sunflower in one hand and a rattle in the other and dancing down the highway imagining he is the great god Pan. The chump sometimes is sidewiped or plumb bumped in the seat of the pants by a truck he was too bughouse to avoid.

Mr. White's bughouse theory was made the germ of the farm board, for one thing, and Kansas can get the returns on it any time by driving a load of wheat or corn to the bank for a loan. Carrie Nation did not believe it was great to be bughouse, but managed to achieve it just the same, and Mr. White can find that achievement in the worst laws the United States ever passed.

It would not be so bad if a people ardent in their desire to be bughouse would confine their activities to their own properties. It's inherent in the doctrine that the gentleman who knows he is Napoleon should demand that the other fellows should be Adam and Eve. This confuses the world more than need be.

CLINICAL REVIEW OF THE VANITIES.

[Louisville Herald-Post.]

After viewing Earl Carroll's Vanities with our friend the doctor we are turning theatrical critic. Mr. Carroll's ladies of the evening, it was plainly visible, sport among them four with housemaid's knee, either fully developed or in the incipient stage; one with just a plain appendectomy scar, and two from whom the appendix was removed and a base established for exploration to other points. All of the ladies excited the doctor's admiration for the old family physician's handiwork in severing the ties that bind.

So much for the chorus. Among the lady principals both the doctor and ourselves were impressed with the urgent need of a good cleansing mouth wash, after which the performance would be improved by the addition of some talent.

SURE CURE.

"Doctor, can you tell me how to make my husband stop snoring?"

"Don't worry. Your baby will soon be teething and you will not need to stop his snoring."—Humorist.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

TOMB OF AN UNKNOWN WOMAN.

(A Sequence of Eight Sonnets.)

I.

A scrub-oak marks my silent, unknown grave,
Fast-rooted with me in the fertile earth;
No epitaph proclaims me fool or slave—
No year is heavy with my foundling birth.
That I conversed with love in high estate
Matters but little as I here review—
That I loved many though with none did mate—
And gave I lightly to the temporal few.

In giving, gave I little save the dust
Of passing weakness on its way to strength,
Or broken gold bound up with henna rust—
And silk threads drawn into an measured length.
Now with new freedom I can tell you this:
That life is but perpetual genesis.

II.

My lovers came, but little did they give,
Nor could they give completely. Love cannot Bestow itself, is ever fugitive.
It is above bestowal . . . and the thought
Expands the man, and glorifies his face,
Becoming then superior to speech.
While it is touched, it touches not. The race
Through seeking finds it ever out of reach.

Had I but known this wisdom in the year
The pears hung heavy, bending to the earth,
I would not daily contemplate the tear,
And wait again to descend into birth.
I wait for marble and a future day.

III.

And in the night I visit one I knew,
With wind-tossed hair, that breast-bared to the sun
Stood free of earth, a laughing lad, Carewe.
We lived a little, and with living done
Death came upon me: Separate from the rest
Stamped with corporeal caste and countersign,
I came this way . . . and now his one request
Asks me to not remember he was mine.

Between us ever was a gaunt, high wall,
Leaning upon my breath, against my heart.
And when the bliss of being would enthrall—
It toppled on me, tearing us apart.
And still . . . he builds a wall around his home
And does not know the many times I come.

IV.

Apart from him I roam the world alone,
Bind broken links, cement them with my will,
I see the sun, impersonal as stone,
A golden compass, measuring the hill.
It masters time, while I, a fugitive—
Seek of the wind that parts the ripened grain—
The reason why the songless sparrow lives—
I, on whose breast so many snows have lain.

My words are prayers, borne up in the night
By sudden wings of one migration bird,
And they invoke the Bringer of the Light—
To hear my songs, that surely He has heard;
The iris-bordered garden path is dark,
And sorrow binds the silver-throated lark.

V.

Duane who wounded me with tender words
That fell like raindrops on a frozen lake,
Was not aware that high fires mold thin swords—
He did not use a plush divining rod,
And when Duane comes calling me I think—
He does not see the scrub-oak curtly nod.

But could not tell him, looking at the glass,
That tasteless it lay in my throat like time
Dropping an acorn in a wet morass.
And now I'm empty of triumphant fruit—

VI.

He thought that I would come bringing no tears,
Emerge desireless from the reckoning dawn,
Come empty handed down the barren years—
A dinosaurus leading in a fawn.
Instead, I stood a towering, granite rock—
That must be hewn to measure carefully,
The mountain I escaped from had no lock—
It was a fortress with a single key.

One day he promised a new creatured world,
The past, a dwindling rocket in the east;
The pennant of my life was then unfurled . . .
A doe walked in denuded of the beast.
But that lost self! That other self of me!
That roams the wind in lost identity.

VII.

That wider reservoir, the too full sea.
And learning there that in a single word—
The heart can break in mute cacophony.
I questioned loving many, and I found
That love, tight bound, is but a lasso for
The giant, Liberty, to cast around
The throat of life in finite metaphor.

Like stepping stones that part to let the grass
Make emerald borders for its vanity,
My bondage stood to let my freedom pass,
In crimson dress of its mortality.
For life I know is but a mask for pain—
And love can, bleeding red, but set the stain.

VIII.

No gesture of the palpitating leaf,
Nor meadow silence freighted with the dew—
Speaks of translated pain, or of the grief
Because bright laurel mingles with old rue.
The charm that chained me to the transient earth—
Wrapped tightly in self-conscious atmosphere—
Said not a word about another birth,
But abrogates the fate I darkly fear.

The seven stalks of wheat above my heart—
Are fruit of my small loves. I could not live
Who knew imagination's subtle art,
That burned the breast with love it could not give.
Perhaps a summer wind will take the wheat

VICE PRESIDENT ELECT GARNER announces he is going to wear a silk hat in the inaugural parade. That's the last straw! We did have some hope that Texas Jack would do something to save just a shred at least of Jeffersonian simplicity. But now that he says he will wear a silk hat, we won't be surprised if he says he is going to ride in a golden circus wagon or an open cage at the head of the parade. R. H. L.

COLD FLOORS.

THE use of better instruments for measuring the heat of the body in different locations shows that cold feet are no creation of the imagination. The blood of the central organs maintains uniform temperature during health, as the physiologists tell us, but not the various parts of the body, and particularly the skin thereof. When the feet feel cold, they are cold—and the fact can be proved. This means something. For one thing it means the difference between comfort and discomfort. There is some reason for thinking that the persons who are subject to cold feet also have a tendency toward rheumatism and that those who are prone to rheumatism are apt to end up with heart disease.

The research students are driving hard to find a way out of heart disease problems. A large part of those who have crippled hearts can be kept for many years in a reasonable state of efficiency if they intelligently follow rules laid down by their well informed physicians. A fair proportion of those disabled by broken compensation can be put back on a plane of efficiency. All of which is very important, but prevention of heart troubles is very much more so. And the researchers are trying to find ways of prevention. Keeping the body warm in cold weather appears to be one way.

If all of this phase should be washed out, the discomfort of cold feet is excuse enough for a discussion of that subject. In every method of artificial heating, unless panel heating be an exception, the floors are cold. The fresh air that we let into a room for ventilation is almost certain to be cold air. Cold air always falls to the floor. When heating is done by open fires cold air to keep the fire going blows along the floor.

Not only is the air of the floor zone cold but the blood itself has a low temperature. Most floor material has good heat conduction, which means that it chills rapidly and keeps cold under ordinary circumstances. Not only is the concrete, stone, or other floor material a good heat conductor, but the beams on which it is laid are also heat conductors.

To overcome these sources of discomfort we make use of a variety of devices, such as carpets, rugs, and footstools. Changing from shoes, often wet and cold, to loose, warm slippers on coming in is often worth while. The orientals, who shift from shoes to loose, warm slippers when they come into their poorly heated houses, were not as foolish as they appeared to be.

Persons who are to engage in sedentary occupations for several hours would promote their comfort and well-being if they would change from their wet, cold shoes to looser, warmer, drier footwear on coming in for the day's work.

THEY ARE HEALTHFUL.

C. R. writes:

1. Are tomatoes unhealthful to eat?
2. How about green peppers, both raw and cooked?
3. Have tomatoes acid?

REPLY.

1. They are healthful.
2. Until it matures pepper is not hot enough to be harmful.
3. Tomatoes are slightly acid. The system burns this acid into an ash, which tends to increase the store of alkalis. The carbonic acid produced by the burning is thrown off with the breath.

OF GOOD SERVICE.

E. L. P. writes: What are the merits of the sun lamp for winter use with a small infant?

REPLY.

We all need more sunlight than we can get at this season of the year. This is especially true of young children who must stay indoors in cold weather. Exposure to a good lamp is of service in supplying the deficiency.

NO SEDATIVE NEEDED.

K. R. writes: My brother, 60 years old, has convulsions periodically, sometimes once in six weeks and then again two minor attacks in one night. Is constipated and uses a mild cathartic every night. Do you favor luminal pills as a preventive? Whenever he touches liquor the spells are more frequent.

REPLY.

Drugs of the bromide group have a place in the treatment of epilepsy. When attacks are as infrequent and as mild as you mention I can see no need of any sedative.

Epileptics need to live hygienically, to get plenty of out of door exercise, to eat properly, and to diet. They should never eat heavy meals. Faulty bowel habits are harmful.

PEDDLER'S LICENSE.

Maywood, Ill., Feb. 5.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a water softener and soap powder that I sell in the Chicago suburbs. I have regular customers upon whom I call once a month. These are all standing orders. 1. Can any of these suburbs force me to pay a peddler's license? In some of these suburbs I have perhaps ten customers and sell only three or four dollars' worth of merchandise a month. 2. The authorities maintain that I must pay a fee of $2 a day to make these few deliveries. 3. If I continue to make these calls once a month without the purchase of the license am I liable? To what extent?

R. W. W.

1. You do not need a peddler's license for delivering on standing orders, but if you have no standing order, but merely make periodic calls and at such calls sell on the spot what your customers desire, this would be peddling and would require a license.
2. We incline to the opinion that so high a fee might be regarded as going beyond mere licensing and amounting to prohibition, but it probably would cost you more than the amount in issue to litigate the question.
3. You could be arrested.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

BANKRUPTCY.

Palatine, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Three years ago "A" filed voluntary bankruptcy, claiming some real estate exempt under homestead rights. This real estate had a heavy mortgage against it and since his bankruptcy "A" borrowed from "C" on his personal note and used the loan to pay off part of the mortgage. In spite of this payment "A" has lost the property by foreclosure. "C" threatens legal procedure to collect, but "A" is now destitute and has no assets of any description. 1. Is there a time limit in which "A" can again file bankruptcy? 2. Does this time limit vary in different states? What is the time limit in Illinois, Minnesota, and Wisconsin? 3. Is it dated from the time of filing bankruptcy or from the date of discharge? 4. What other action can "A" take to enable him to retain the necessities of life as against "C's" action until this time limit is up?

E. H. L.

1. Yes, six years.
2. No, it is a matter of federal law.
3. It is dated from the adjudication, which is practically the same as the filing date.
4. His legal exemptions are intended to protect the necessities of life.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 17, 1917.

LONDON.—Almost on the anniversary of the inauguration of their great Verdun offensive last year, the Germans launched an attack in the Champagne yesterday that swept a mile and a half of French trenches to a depth of half a mile and garnered 871 prisoners and twenty machine guns. While the furious assault combined all the elements of a grand offensive movement and constituted the most important battle of the year, few military students here venture the prediction that it is more than a spectacular feint to cover a bigger operation on another part of the front. The action took place between the Maisons de Champagne farm and hill 185, about midway between Verdun and Reims, and about a mile and a half south of the main road between Tahure and Cernay. The operation was preceded by an intense artillery fire. Four lines of French positions were stormed by the troops of the crown prince. The French troops retreated before the onrush without offering stubborn resistance, choosing rather to place their hopes in swift, sharp counter blows. These they continued throughout the night and this morning, but without success. "The French increased their own loss in useless counter attacks," says Berlin communication.

WASHINGTON.—Great Britain, in a statement received by the state department from Ambassador Page in London, proclaims the most drastic step which it has taken since the war began to isolate Germany from the rest of the world. The statement is in the form of a warning to the neutral nations that a "new dangerous area" has been created in the North sea. The area is roughly all of the waters, except the Danish and Netherlands territorial waters, between a point four miles from the coast of Jutland to a point seven miles from the coast of the Netherlands, in latitude 53 degrees 27 minutes north and longitude 5 degrees east, thus including the entire German frontage on the North sea. This British mine field serves two purposes. The first and probably the most important is the closing of the exits toward the Atlantic ocean of the German U-boats from their bases in Germany and Belgium. With the English channel practically closed by an elaborate system of nets, mines, and patrols, the means of exit for the submarines has been through the route north of Scotland and down the Irish coast. The new danger zone is designed to close that way out. The second purpose is to supplement the work of the British navy, which has been blockading at long distance the coasts of Germany with a vast mine field, imperiling any ship which may attempt to reach any Teuton port with supplies.

WASHINGTON.—Plans for arming and for convoying American merchantmen through the submarine war zones proclaimed by Germany were laid before President Wilson and his cabinet. These plans were drawn at an all-night session of the high commanding officers of the navy.

WAR SUMMARY.—Petrograd reports that several German attacks south of the village of Kadarovitze, southeast of Ziochoff, were repulsed. Rome reports that Austrian efforts at several points near St. Caterina and east of Goritz were defeated. Seven more ships, all British, with a tonnage of more than 40,000, were sunk by German submarines.

TAXING THE SPENDER.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—One thing that will help to keep the depression with us is the present personal property tax.

What man is going to buy a diamond bracelet for $3,000 if he is going to pay $100 per year for owning it? Suppose a man spends $10,000 for a pleasure yacht. Each year it costs $1,000 to keep it in good condition by painting, insuring, overhauling, and storage. To tax a man $350 for the privilege of being a good citizen and a good spender is certainly wrong. Which is the better citizen, the man who is a good spender, or the other fellow, who instead of giving work to his people, buys a bond with the money and pays no tax?

What we need is the incentive to have those that have the money to spend it on the extravagant things, the luxuries. If we want to stop business this tax is a great help. The tax should be removed entirely so that people may spend freely without the great worry of this tax.

This year the tax is being enforced so that it is going to be a hardship, especially for jewelry concerns whose stocks are valuable but have no turnover in times like these. The politicians would be smart if they would repeal the laws that curtail business, as when business is good the merchant is an easy mark for the tax man. G. H. S.

AN UNTIDY CONSULATE.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Can it be interpreted as a friendly gesture when official representatives of a foreign country move into a residential district of an American city and ignore the dictates of good citizenship by failure to care for their sidewalks and grounds?

When the Polish consulate moved into the fine old residence at 1500 North Dearborn parkway there was an attempt for a while to properly care for sidewalks and lawn, and we welcomed them.

After the lapse of a few months we saw the grass smothered with weeds and later burned up by the sun. In winter we slip and slide as best we can over piles of snow, and when it melts wade in slush up to our ankles. Sidewalks are never cleaned.

Surely some of their unemployed countrymen could be secured for a small sum to give the exterior of their habitation a decently clean and well ordered appearance.

What do we think of the Poles as residents or potential citizens? Well, we're trying not to judge them by their official representatives. A NEIGHBOR.

SILVER COINAGE.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—It would be great stuff to coin silver at about its present value, four ounces to a dollar, about $3 to a troy pound. Imagine carrying around $10 in that kind of money!

On the other hand, we might coin silver at sixteen to one. Then everybody could sell his silver to the government at many times its present value; and wouldn't the silver roll in from the far corners of the world?

REQUEST FOR ZANGWILL LETTERS.

New York, Feb. 11.—I am taking advantage of being in this country to ask those who possess letters from my husband, the late Israel Zangwill, whether they will be kind enough to lend them to me. I know he had a very large circle of friends and acquaintances in "the great republic which carries mankind and its fortunes," as he styled America in his play "The Melting Pot!"

My husband did not want his life to be written—he had a feeling that biographies were never true—and so in spite of much pressure I have not allowed a biography to be produced. It has occured to me recently that he would not have objected to the publication of a selection of his own letters and this is what I am proposing to make on my return to England. Such a volume would give a picture of his character, which was of so rare a quality that, I feel, it should be made known to the world.

If your readers will entrust me with any letters that they may possess I will take the greatest care of them. Letters selected for publication will be copied within the next three or four months, so that the originals can all be returned without waiting for the completion of the book.

The letters should be sent to me, Mrs. Israel Zangwill, Hotel Wellington, 7th avenue and 55th street, New York City, before Wednesday, Feb. 22, as I sail home the following day. My home address after that date will be Far End, East Preston, Littlehampton, Sussex, England. E. ZANGWILL.

THE PLIGHT OF THE COUNTY TEACHERS.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—I have read many articles in your column about the unpaid Chicago teacher. I wonder just how many know the plight of the Cook county teacher—many of us unpaid for over a year. The loop stores accept the Chicago teachers' vouchers and also the vouchers of Cook county employés, but the poor Cook county teacher goes on like a stepchild, with no recognition. R. S.

FOOD AT 56 CENTS A WEEK.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 13.—Since THE TRIBUNE suggested the Aurora relief program as one of economy and, presumably, efficiency, I should like to call attention to the Canton [Ohio] Community store as described by A. M. Lunz in the Midmonthly Survey for November. Whereas the Aurora cost is 64 cents per week on a very limited, monotonous diet, that of Canton is 56 cents a week per person, with a much more varied diet and opportunity for personal choice. In Canton it is possible to include fresh milk, fresh meat, fresh vegetables, and more varied starch foods. This community has tried a voucher-on-grocers system and a commissary type of distribution with the result that they believe the latter is far more satisfactory both from the standpoint of economy of operation and the necessary regard for social and human values. MICHIGAN ASKS STATE, FEDERAL AID FOR BANKS

Would Separate Quick, Slow Assets.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The eyes of the business and banking world are turned on Michigan, first of the states to adopt a banking moratorium as a way out of disaster. It was learned today that the banks of the Detroit district intend to remain closed to unlimited withdrawals of deposits until the danger of wholesale withdrawals and subsequent failures is removed by protective federal and state legislation.

Under the legislation which it planned to rush through congress and the state legislature a new sort of indefinite moratorium would be set up on assets, realty and securities, which would have to be sacrificed at present market values if depositors insisted on wholesale withdrawals.

There appears little chance of remedial legislation of such a radical nature in the remaining six days of the present bank holiday declared by Gov. William Comstock. Therefore the holiday is likely to be extended until it merges into the new banking order.

Conditions Vary Among Banks.

The limit of withdrawals now is 5 per cent. This will be lifted later as the condition of each bank warrants. Many banks declare they are ready now to pay in full all depositors who want their money, but they have been forced into this moratorium by the danger existing in other quarters.

The banks now are acting as a unit. The threat to remain closed indefinitely is to be held over congress and the state until the needed legislation is passed. Many banks throughout Michigan and in other states do business through the Detroit banks and have deposits there. They are held down to the five per cent deposit withdrawal rule.

Today, the first day of business under the five per cent plan, passed quietly, with withdrawals less than had been expected. Those who needed money got it. The main stress of lack of money was over. Crowds around the bank windows were not larger than on an ordinary Saturday morning, bankers said.

Gov. Comstock came here today and explained proposed legislation as follows:

"We propose to get laws applying to both state and national banks permitting the setting aside of frozen assets in trust funds, to be held until such time as they can be sold for something approaching their worth. Selling them now would not realize 10 cents on the dollar.

Would Reorganize Banks.

"The laws will provide that each bank coming under this regulation shall be reorganized and, with the live good assets of the bank, continue on the basis of present times, conditions, and values. It then will be up to the management of such banks to keep them in this condition. The banking commissioner would have supervision over the management. At any time he would be able to rule that any given bank can pay 5, 10, or any other percentage of its deposits and hold the rest so long as it pleased."

The New York and Iowa bank plans are being studied in this connection. It is predicted here that the action by Michigan will lead to a general action along this line.

"We figure that if Detroit real estate is no good, the United States is no good," one banker said. "We want to hold such property for the depositors until we can realize on it. We want to separate the slow stuff, issue certificates of deposit against it, and do business only on what is left."

The Union Guardian Trust company was not open to pay out any deposits. It has deposits of $25,000,000, according to the latest figure, indicating withdrawals of about $10,000,000 since Dec. 31 last, and quick assets of about $4,000,000. When this institution failed to receive expected aid from the Reconstruction Finance corporation last Monday night the present banking holiday was declared.

Feared for Other Banks.

Gov. Comstock said if this institution had been forced to close its doors, it would have caused "a flock of other banks to close all over the state." Another reason for his action was that big depositors would get their money out before the crash came and take it out of the state.

The Union Guardian is one of a group of 21 banks, which have interlocking directorates in which Edsel Ford and two other Ford associates are listed. Edsel Ford and associates own the beautiful building in which the bank is housed, one of the show places in Detroit. It's a building which has been regarded as the newest type of American architecture. The Union Guardian has more than 72 per cent of its assets in Detroit real estate. Its directorate might have merged its assets into the stronger banks of the group, but the directorate did not do that, explaining that they did not consider it fair to burden the depositors and stockholders with certain bad assets.

MICHIGAN SENATE VOTES POOR FREE ARMY GOODS

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—The senate today unanimously adopted a concurrent resolution offered by Senator Ray Derham, Iron Mountain, providing for the immediate distribution to the needy of the state, through welfare agencies, of a $200,000 stock of army goods acquired several years ago and now stored in the state garage.

Senator Derham declared that the stores include thousands of pairs of heavy and serviceable army shoes and bales of woolen underwear. The stock was acquired for the use of convicts quartered in highway construction camps.

FAMILY RENEWS APPEAL IN PAPER TO KIDNAPERS

Police Search Mountain Summer Homes.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Members of the family of Charles Boettcher II., wealthy victim of extortionists, today renewed their efforts to contact the kidnapers by placing an advertisement in a Denver newspaper, as instructed in the original ransom note demanding $60,000.

The advertisement first was placed in the paper Monday and said, "Please write. I am ready to return. Mabel." Apparently no response was received from the original insertion.

Looks at Second Suspect.

Mrs. Anna Lou Boettcher, wife of the kidnaped man, today viewed a second suspect in the case, but failed to identify him. The man was A. A. Swanson, former Denver policeman, who was arrested several months ago in another extortion case. Swanson was released.

N. W. [Pinky] Mitchell, a bootlegger, arrested also as a suspect, had not been released, although Mrs. Boettcher failed to identify him yesterday in the police "shadow box."

Get "Mountain" Tip.

Search for Boettcher, who was kidnaped Sunday night, turned late today to the Denver mountain parks, after reports that two automobiles bearing Illinois license plates were seen on top of Lookout mountain, thirteen miles west of here, early Monday, a short time after the abduction.

Two carloads of heavily armed officers searched summer homes in that isolated mountain region, but failed to find a trace of the missing man.

The city cabinet today approved an offer of a $500 reward, in addition to the $5,000 already offered by Claude K. Boettcher, father of the kidnaped man.

Relatives indicated today that notes, purportedly from the kidnapers, received in the last several days, have been written by cranks.

Lieut. Gov. T. F. Donovan Speaks at Club Banquet

Pana, Ill., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Lieut. Gov. Thomas F. Donovan was the principal speaker here tonight before the Christian County Jeffersonian club at its annual banquet at the Masonic temple. He appeared in place of Gov. Horner, who was unable to attend. Other state officers and the speaker of the house, Arthur Roe were honor guests and spoke briefly. The club has 5,000 members. A grand ball followed at St. Patrick's Catholic community house.

NEBRASKA FARMERS MARCH ON CAPITOL TO VOICE DEMANDS

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Farmers marched with flying banners today to the Nebraska capitol, presented two sets of relief demands to the legislature and then returned to their homes. Harold Hulfish, a deputy state sheriff, estimated their number at 4,000.

Singing and shouting, the column of men trudged two miles from the fair grounds to the statehouse. A few women took part in the march. Most of them milled through the corridors of the new $10,000,000 building or sat on the steps outside, listening to impromptu speeches and band music, while the rest crowded into the house of representatives chamber and applauded the reading of a long list of demands.

A few deputy state sheriffs, equipped with tear gas bombs, stood around the edges of the crowd, but there was no disorder. A. O. Rosenberg of Newman Grove, who organized the march on the capital, said further organization of farmers would be attempted in order to bring "as much pressure as possible" on members of the legislature to heed demands for relief.

FARM TAX STRIKE THREATENED BY INDIANA BUREAU

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Five thousand Indiana farmers, including county leaders of the Indiana farm bureau, met here today to protest against failure of the legislature to provide "adequate tax relief."

The farmers adopted a resolution threatening "an immediate call to the organized groups here represented for a massmeeting to adopt state-wide uniform plans for allowing property taxes to remain delinquent until enactment of laws embodying our tax suggestions."

"Tax reduction accomplished thus far by the 1933 legislature will hardly be noticed when we pay our tax bill," William H. Settle, president of the farm bureau, asserted.

Settle and Lewis Taylor, vice president and director of the tax and legislative department of the bureau, said: "We are for not creating any new taxes unless there can be a corresponding reduction of property tax."

Following their meeting, the visiting farmers marched to the statehouse, where petitions signed by 50,000 persons were presented to Gov. Paul V. McNutt and legislators of both houses.

Pershing Leaves El Paso for Vacation in Arizona

MORATORIUM ON DEBTS UNFAIR, SAYS DUFFIELD

Insurance Man Points to Danger in Plan.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—A "moratorium on mortgages" is a fine phrase, but not a fair one.

This is the message which E. D. Duffield, president of the Prudential Life Insurance company, holder of one billion 100 million dollars in mortgages, today brought to the senate finance committee's clinic on depression.

When we talk, as the pending Hull-Walcott bill talks, of an arbitrary two year moratorium on mortgage payments we are thinking of the debtor only, Mr. Duffield argued, and we are forgetting entirely that other fellow in the picture, the creditor.

Points to Harm in Plan.

And that other fellow, Mr. Duffield pointed out, is frequently no bloated bondholder, but an average citizen, who has "scrimped and scraped" to buy some life insurance and who, by that insurance, really holds some of the many mortgages held by his insurance company.

"As a matter of fact," cut in Senator Reed [Rep., Pa.], "the creditor is the man who gets his pay envelope on Saturday night."

"Exactly," agreed Mr. Duffield. "And any mortgage moratorium, any scaling down of debts, would mean that we would have to scale down our obligations to this man who has saved all his life for the future; it would mean an increase in the cost of insurance."

Opposes Scaling Debts.

As an insurance man, Mr. Duffield, who is also acting president of Princeton university, felt that that would be bad. But as an American citizen he felt that there was a more fundamental harm to result from any general scaling down of debts. And that is the "destruction of the sanctity of the contract," which, he declares, is the keystone of the economic structure.

Individual scaling down of debts is a different and a far less disturbing proposition, he pointed out. Here the common sense of the creditor will often lead him to compromise a debt. And he cited his own company leniency in individual cases with the farmer who was unable to meet his mortgage payment on time. As a result of this individual creditor gentleness on the first of last December the Prudential had 89 per cent of its mortgages paying interest within six months. "Only 11 per cent were in distress."

Harrison in Charge.

Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], resident physician in charge of the clinic, asked a question which was interpreted as being a prophecy of his own hopes. He said, "If, in a coming special session, we'd get to work, iron out our differences, balance the budget, pass some constructive measures, do nothing else, act quickly and then adjourn, would that have a good effect on the situation?"

"Nothing you could possibly do would have a greater effect," said Mr. Duffield, ardently.

R. E. Wood Before Committee.

John F. Hylan, former mayor of New York, dubbed the federal reserve system as a tool of the bankers, criticized the Reconstruction Finance corporation for permitting the banks to "ride it for billions," and recommended an expansion of the currency.

Mr. R. E. Wood of Chicago, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., appeared before the committee at an executive session today.

"I have no special cure all," he said later. "I let them ask me questions. Why did I want to talk in confidence? Because I have seen so many business men make such foolish prophecies and statements that were given wide publicity."

RAILROAD MEN FIGHT RIVALRY OF BARGES AND HIGHWAY TRUCKS

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—One thousand railroad men and their friends met here today protesting the use of tax money in "subsidizing truck and waterway competitors of railroads." Employes of all railroads entering Bloomington and special delegations from Clinton and Springfield attended.

Ten thousand signatures to petitions from McLean county voicing opposition to government competition represented by the federal barge service and subsidies to truck and bus lines in the use of highways are promised.

Speakers alluded to the new competition railroads are facing in the Illinois waterway to be opened next spring. They said railroad protests already had resulted in the recommendation that the federal barge line be discontinued. This was made by the Shannon committee investigating government in business.

It was asserted also that the Shannon committee had recommended that the postoffice department discontinue solicitation of parcel post business.

The principal point of contention in the waterway controversy is said to be that federal operation of barge lines was undertaken to prove that private operation would be commercially possible, yet that the federal operators are not charging investment costs, nor attempting to earn an interest rate on the investment which tax payers are compelled to make, and that therefore their reports of earnings are misleading.

CONDUCTOR DIES AFTER BATTLING A TRAIN ROBBER

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—J. U. G. Caster, heroic conductor of the Chicago bound Golden State Limited, died early today of gunshot wounds received in a battle with a train robber last night.

Caster, who was 64, borrowed a revolver from a passenger after the bandit had been observed by a porter robbing passengers in the observation car. Caster ran back to the observation car, where he and the bandit fired simultaneously.

The robber was shot through the head and the heart. Caster was shot in the abdomen. One passenger, Frederick Byers of Pasadena, was shot below the right knee.

A voter's registration card in the name of George Clinton Towers, 480 Pine street, San Francisco, was the sole clew to the identity of the dead bandit, who was about 55 years old.

Caster had been an employe of the Southern Pacific thirty years.

RECORD HERRING CATCH.

More than 1,000,000 kilograms, or 100,000 metric tons, of herring were caught along the coast of the province of Holland, in western Sweden, last fall. It was the largest yield of this fish recorded so far.

TRUSTEES DELAY SELECTING NEW U. OF ILL. HEAD

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—At the regular monthly meeting of the board of trustees of the University of Illinois here today no action was taken on the appointment of a committee to aid in the selection of a successor to President Harry W. Chase, who resigned last month to accept the chancellorship of New York university. The board announced the 10 per cent salary reduction for staff members and employes on salaries of over $1,000 will become effective on March 1.

This is a continuation of the program of retrenchment and economy started by the university twelve months ago. As a result it is saving the state over $2,500,000, or 22 per cent of the funds appropriated by the last legislature for the present biennium.

It will be recalled that at the December meeting of the board it was decided that, effective July 1, university salaries would be reduced by that amount in keeping with the university's program of economy and cooperation with the state in reducing public expenditures.

MRS. ROOSEVELT GIVES FARMERS WORD OF CHEER

Calm in Making Address at Cornell Event.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President elect, brought a cheerful message to farmers and their wives at Cornell's farm and home week today, going through to the last detail with her plans despite an assassin's attempt upon her husband's life in Miami, Fla., last night.

Outwardly calm, Mrs. Roosevelt, climaxing a busy day, addressed 3,000 persons, telling her hearers that "each one of us must gain something" out of the depression.

Mrs. Roosevelt did not mention the shooting in her address, but upon her arrival here this morning she said, answering a question as to whether she were not worried: "Why, no, of course not. Such things are apt to happen at any time to a man in public life."

Mrs. Roosevelt declared she would not ask for further protection for her husband as a result of the attack and as for herself "could not imagine living in constant fear of death."

Solicitous Over Cermak.

Her first comment was an expression of solicitude for Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago, wounded by the gun fire intended for the President elect. Later in the day she telephoned Col. Louis McHenry Howe, Mr. Roosevelt's secretary, for further word of the mayor's condition.

In her address, Mrs. Roosevelt declared that "We as a nation, must get a new set of values. I think we will come out of this trying period with the knowledge that success is not always measured by what we get in return. Many people succeed who never earn much. The measure of success is the amount of happiness you create, not the amount of money you have."

"Happier When Busy."

Mrs. Roosevelt disagreed with the technocrats, contending that most persons are happier when they are busy.

One way to increase interest outside the home, she said, is to take an interest in the community and in government, in "what is taking place in our larger home. After all, government is just housekeeping on a little larger scale."

Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau and Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach, spent the morning at Miss Rose's home, heard Prof. George F. Warren of Cornell assail congress for "not giving us a medium of exchange that is stable," and was guest at an "economy" luncheon before she addressed her audience.

HORNER MINING ARBITERS MEET; ASSEMBLY IDLES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Faced with the problem of labor mediation, Gov. Horner's mining commission set to work today to untangle the controversy which brought about the central and southern Illinois mine war.

The nine members of the commission—three senators, three representatives and three citizens named by Mr. Horner—spent most of the day studying the governor's private file gathered several weeks ago when the governor strove to bring about a compromise between the United Mine Workers and the Progressive Miners of America, the contesting union.

Senator W. E. C. Clifford [Dem., Champaign] was elected chairman at the organization meeting of the governor's mining commission today and Representative Frank A. McCarthy [Rep., Elgin], secretary.

It is believed the commission will hold its first meetings early next week here, possibly calling both Walker and Pearcy among early witnesses.

Not much work was done in either house of the assembly today. Stunned by the shooting of Mayor Cermak in Miami the members seemed content to cluster in the legislative chambers and discuss the near-tragedy.

Mary Garden Here to Sing Folk Songs in Loop Theater

Mary Garden, Chicago's own opera star, came back home yesterday with the news that she would never sing in opera again because "we have no opera any more in this country." But that will not keep the singer from singing in public. She is to appear here during the coming week in the Chicago theater and expects to sing principally classic folk songs. Miss Garden is stopping at the Drake hotel.

BERLIN TIGHTENS PRESS GAG; SHUTS LIPS OF EDITORS

Papers Forbidden to Discuss Ban.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—The German press has been forbidden to publish the reasons given by the government for the suppression of newspapers and periodicals.

Today the republican organ, Tempo, was prohibited, and when its editor was asked what reasons authorities had given for the suspension, he declared he was not permitted to announce them.

Reasons Are Published.

The Berliner Tageblatt had the courage to print these reasons:

"Tempo was prohibited because it printed a report on the Berlin bourse under the heading, 'Uneasiness at the Bourse; Shares Forced Down.' It alleged the new conflict with France over the trade agreement was responsible for the general uneasiness. This news was not true."

The pessimistic interpretation by the financial editor was responsible for the prohibition of the paper despite the fact that there was a downward trend in the market the day the article objected to was published.

The Tempo, a late afternoon paper, was the second republican organ prohibited in Berlin. The National Zeitung was suppressed yesterday. This leaves only Der Tag in the late afternoon field. It is owned by Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, minister of economics.

Paper Claims Damages.

Almost three quarters of the Socialist and communist newspapers have been prohibited. The Socialist Vorwaerts appealed to the Supreme court when it was first suppressed two weeks ago. The court ruled the prohibition was unjustified. Vorwaerts is claiming damages.

[Vorwaerts and the National Zeitung were suspended yesterday until Feb. 22 for printing reports and commenting on the Nazi-communist clashes at Eisleben.]

The national council of the German states, under pressure of the states in the south, has decided it would take no part in important actions until the Supreme court has ruled whether Franz von Papen, vice chancellor of Germany and dictator of Prussia, and the delegates he has appointed are entitled to represent Prussia in the council.

Catholics Assail Hitler.

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A threat by Chancellor Adolf Hitler of further severe repressive measures faced his opponents, while Catholic societies countered with a statement assailing his tactics.

Hitler attacked the Catholic parties, which mustered more than 6,000,000 votes in the last election, for cooperating with "atheistic Marxists," in an address he made last night at Stuttgart. The Catholic parties, Socialists and communists, who held a majority in the reichstag recently dissolved, are opposing Hitler forces in the new reichstag election March 5.

A joint statement of the Catholic societies said, "We reject a dictatorship that allows the nation nothing more than to be ruled." It predicted civil war.

$30,000 IN RUM ON TWO BOATS SEIZED BY U. S.

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Two fishing boats, each with a cargo of liquor aboard, were towed up the bay by a coast guard patrol boat today and tied up at the barge office. The combined liquor cargoes totaled 650 cases, valued at about $30,000. The boats were the 48 foot Anna S. and the 40 foot Fosspena.

They were seized in Mill basin, Sheepshead bay, Chester A. Fox, chief boatswain's mate of the patrol boat thought that the boats were lower in the water than their fish cargoes warranted and ordered two of his men to search each. The search was fruitless, but the patrol boat stood by. Meanwhile the entire crews of both vessels disappeared with the sole exception of one man on the Fosspena who was arrested. Fox ordered a second search, and his men, after moving the fish cargoes, found the liquor. Five hundred cases were on the Anna S. and 150 on the Fosspena.

VOTE $5,000 FOR WIDOW OF MAN SLAIN BY U. S. DRY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—(AP)—To the widow of one of the famous characters of the old west—William M. Tilghman—the house voted tonight to award $5,000 because he didn't "draw" fast enough to keep a prohibition agent from shooting him.

The bill, which passed the house and was sent to the senate, would allow that sunm to Zoe A. Tilghman "in compensation for the death of her husband, caused by being shot by a federal prohibition agent."

In asking the house to pass the measure, sponsored by Representative Swank [Dem., Okla.], the claims committee said that the "name of Bil Tilghman is inseparably connected with the stirring events of the old west, and he was one of the most colorful characters of the Territory of Oklahoma."

ROBBERS POSE AS CUSTOMERS.

Two men who posed as customers last night forced Mrs. Freda Heft, 46 years old, and her son, Samuel, 16 years old, to stand against a wall with their hands raised while they looted the cash register of Mrs. Heft's grocery at 2023 Cixbourn avenue of $10.

2 Chicagoans Tie for Class President at Illinois U.

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—In a class election held on the University of Illinois campus today, M. D. Wilber, Quincy, Ill., was named president and Joseph Brock, Whiting, Ind., vice president of the senior class. The vote for the junior class presidency was a tie, and E. E. Bond, 125 North Lotus avenue, Chicago, and H. C. Hartman, 6215 Bishop avenue, Chicago, will act as co-presidents.

BOMBS IN CUBA FIRE LETTERS IN 59 MAIL BOXES

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 16.—Small incendiary bombs caused the contents of 59 mail boxes in the downtown district of the city to burst into flames last night. It is estimated that 500 letters were lost and 2,000 damaged. Many of the boxes contained airmail.

Confusion and alarm quickly emptied the sidewalk cafe of the Hotel Pasaje on the Prado when diners, the majority of them American tourists, became aware of a smoking mailbox located there.

Tiny metal coverings which apparently had held acid causing the fire was found in the boxes. These mechanisms are similar to one discovered in an outgoing airmail sack at the postoffice on Jan. 31.

Kansas Pedestrians Must Carry Light on Highways

Topeka, Kas., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Pedestrians in Kansas may be required to carry red lanterns on highways at night or suffer the consequences of accidents without recourse. Failure to carry a red light would preclude recovery of damages from motorists by a proposed law.

Valparaiso, Ind., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—A fair exchange is no robbery even if it is a matter of wives, according to Raymond Mohnssen, Valparaiso filling station attendant, and Lewis De Witt of Porter, Ind. Less than a month ago both obtained divorces and then married each other's former mate.

De Lamarter Conducts His New Symphony

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Eric De Lamarter conducted the first performance of his own new third symphony at the Chicago Symphony orchestra concert last night, and Nathan Milstein, a highly stimulating violinist, continued as soloist. The audience broke the customary rules of applause to approve the first, and added shouts and whistles as well as handclaps to approve the second. Wherefore there was more than common excitement at a symphony concert.

For some time past there has been a custom not to applaud between movements of a symphony, but to wait until it is all over. The habit does not seem psychologically sound. For applause cannot be stored up like water in a bucket, so many pints for this movement, a couple of quarts for that, and poured out all at once. It ought to go when it is spontaneous, otherwise it soon loses its pressure.

So when the audience broke in at the end of each movement and made the composer-conductor turn around and bow, it was an indication that he had done something meritorious. He had. This is a work considerably more extended than he has been in the habit of writing, and rather graver in tone. It is based on a "motto" theme, the same succession of notes which by changing their length here and there become different tunes, and it is strange how many tunes by this process can be made out of the same notes. It has been an expert job of writing, both in devising the melodies and in their presentation and development.

Sincerity shines out of every phrase and in spite of the gravity of the first and second movements there is a third which, because of its perky grace, would be approved by Paul Whiteman and transcribed into his own orchestration. The fourth dashes into high, sustained excitement, and so the symphony ends triumphantly.

Mr. Milstein, who played the Tschaikowsky Concerto to great applause on Tuesday, played the Goldmark to even greater last night, being the work by which he was introduced to the Tuesday audiences last season. He is a wizard. The glittering rapier flashes of his display passages are enough to make the heart beat faster; he has learned the valuable lesson that high tension in a sustained, lyric melody is quite a different thing from sentimentality, and he banishes sentimentality. These two facts, his infallible technique and his pronounced musical good sense make him, to a high degree, a notable of the concert platform, and last night's announcement that he would give a recital on March 6 became important news.

Once again orchestra and audience sat still and called him back again and again until in self-defense he raised his violin and began to play some more Paganini Caprices. These, though of smaller dimensions than the concerto, were again glittering art.

Church Architecture Along Modern Line Likened to Brewery

When church architecture tears from its Gothic, Byzantine, or Greek traditions and goes modern the result is likely to look like a brewery. At least such comments were frequently made yesterday at the North American conference on church architecture at the Stevens hotel when pictures of some modernistic church edifices were shown on the screen.

Thomas E. Tallmadge, a fellow of the American Institute of Architects, however, warned that American church builders should keep their eyes on what is going on in Europe in religious architecture, despite anti-brewery feeling among many American churchgoers.

"America has applied the modernistic structure with good results to office buildings," said Mr. Tallmadge, as he pointed to improvement over the "terrible conditions that existed before THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE competition," and added that "the churches still follow 1900 styles." Prizes in the national competition conducted by the conference included first, in small church class, Christ Episcopal church and parish house, Winnetka; second, the Evangelical Mission Covenant church, Hinsdale; first, medium size, Gary Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, Wheaton, and third in the same competition, the First Unitarian church, Chicago. Third prize in the cathedral class was awarded to the Wilmette Methodist Episcopal church.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his case-book covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read! Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution are in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

AN OLD SPANISH CUSTOM.

"The court and hundreds of his Spanish majesty's subjects were assembled in the massive throne room to witness the climax of the king's most unprecedented gesture.

"Juan Alvarez, having performed a bit of skullduggery for his highness, was tonight to be rewarded with a fair, square chance at the hand of the royal princess!

"Two large pieces of paper were to be placed, face down, on a table in the throne room. One was to be marked WIN, the other LOSE. Alvarez could pick up, or touch, ONLY ONE. Should he select that marked WIN the princess would be his! Should he choose that marked LOSE—well, he'd had his chance. How the populace applauded the king for giving a commoner such an opportunity!

"But hold! His highness had instructed the wise men to perform some hocus pocus, that while in reality giving Alvarez NO chance of winning, would maintain his reputation as a sportsman. The wise men got busy. They would mark BOTH pieces LOSE. Their salaries were raised! For how could the commoner possibly win when he could select but ONE sheet and on BOTH would be written LOSE?

"They counted not on Alvarez. Expecting the double cross, he was prepared. He strode into the throne room, made obeisance to his majesty, walked over, picked up ONE sheet of paper and before the eyes of the king and wise men, claimed the hand of the princess! And there was none to say him nay.

"HOW DID ALVAREZ WIN THE HAND OF THE PRINCESS WHILE CONFORMING TO THE RULES OF THE DRAW?" asked Fordney of his dinner guests.

Miss Florence Crane to Wear Historic Veil

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

The friends who gather in the drawing room of the Mrs. Richard T. Crane residence at 1550 Lake Shore drive tomorrow afternoon to witness the ceremony that will unite in marriage Miss Florence Crane, the only daughter of the late Richard T. Crane Jr. and Mrs. Crane, and William Albert Robinson, will see one of the most exquisite and historically interesting veils that any Chicago bride ever has worn.

It is Brussels point lace and came into the possession of Mrs. Crane some years ago and probably even then it was laid away and destined to be used for exactly what it is to be used for tomorrow. It was made for the Empress Elizabeth of Austria and was presented to her on the birth of the Crown Prince Rudolph by the provinces of Belgium. The motifs are the emblems of the house of Hapsburg, the Order of the Golden Fleece in one corner, the Double Headed Eagle of Austria in another, and the letters "E" for Elizabeth in the other two.

This precious lace will be held in place by a jeweled wreath, a family heirloom, formed of clusters of tiny berries made of lapis lazuli and jade, the leaves being formed of small emeralds with a dewdrop of diamonds.

Becomes Bride of Emperor.

For those who do not remember much about the ill fated Empress Elizabeth and her equally ill fated only son: She was the daughter of Duke Maximilian Joseph of Bavaria and Louisa Wilhelmina, daughter of Maximilian I. of Bavaria. She was born on Dec. 24 in 1837 at the castle of Passenhofen on Lake Starnberg. Her education was the reverse of conventional and after she was married in 1854 in Vienna to Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria and king of Hungary, she scandalized Austrian society by trying to modify court etiquette and frequently visiting the imperial riding school because of her extreme fondness for horsemanship.

She was popular, however, with her subjects because of her generosity and charitable spirit. Like the young American girl who will wear her veil tomorrow, she is said to have been remarkably beautiful, intelligent, and to have spoken a number of languages. Her only son was born in 1857 and died tragically in 1889, a tragedy from which his mother never recovered. He was married to Stephanie, daughter of the king of the Belgians, in 1881, but later he developed a deep passion for Baroness Marie Vetser and on Jan. 30 in 1889 their bodies were discovered in his hunting lodge at Mayerling near Vienna. The official verdict was that it was a double suicide.

The empress was stabbed by an Italian anarchist on Sept. 10, 1898, as she was walking from a hotel in Geneva to the steamer and she died a few hours later.

Hundred Guests Have Been Invited.

But to return to the radiant young person who will wear the lovely Belgian lace veil tomorrow: She is to become the bride of the adventurous young Milwaukeean—he spent his boyhood there, although he has lived in the east recently—at 4:30 o'clock, Bishop George Craig Stewart and the Rev. Dudley Stark, rector of St. Chrysostom's church, officiating. Only one hundred have been invited to the wedding and the reception that will follow. Miss Eleanor McCormick will attend the bride and George Palmer Putnam will serve as best man for Mr. Robinson. The bride will be given in marriage by her brother, Cornelius Crane.

Last night Miss McCormick gave a dinner party for the bride, and tonight Miss Crane's aunt, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, will give the bridal dinner at her residence, 209 Lake Shore drive, to which about thirty have been invited.

Mr. Robinson motored from the east, arriving last night in time for the dinner that Miss McCormick was giving, and his mother, Mrs. Ella Huegin Robinson of Cambridge, formerly of Milwaukee, came by train, arriving yesterday afternoon. Mr. Putnam and his wife, who is Amelia Earhart, did not reach here in time for the McCormick party, but will be here by tonight for Mrs. Patterson's affair.

Yacht Trip Through Canal.

Mr. Robinson and his bride will sail from New York a few days after the wedding on his new yacht for Yucatan where they will visit the Mayan ruins. Then through the Panama canal and up the west coast to Alaska where Mrs. Robinson will leave her husband and the yacht and return to the States to await the return of her husband who is going to endeavor to push on through the northwest passage to Labrador.

If he succeeds when he reaches New York again he will be the first to have circled the North American continent.

Good Morning!

The bats flew in, the bats flew out,
The bats flew everywhere about;
And while they swooped so far and wide,
With punctures in their throats—folks DIED!
The myst'ry of these myriad deaths
Townsfolk discussed with bated breaths.
The clew that seemed to them most hot
Pointed toward the town id-i-ot—
A white faced youth with wild op-tics
And straggling locks, and legs like sticks;
A youth who said that he LOVED bats
Because they "felt like nice, soft cats. . . ! "
O'er in his lab-o-ra-to-ry
The town doc listened quiet-ly
To tales of woe; surmise diffuse!
And a-greed vampires MUST be loose!
Tragedy stalks midst wild affrights,
And still the killer kills o' nights. . . .
The idiot dies! Hooray, they gloat!
And then — ANOTHER punctured throat . . .!
Police at bay! WHAT can IT be
That sucks blood so insatiately?
It ne'er occurs to minds so dense
To lay crime at feet of sci-ence!
If you're a good guess-ER you will
E'er now've opined the demon chill
Who demise doth administer—
AND—meets an end most sinister.
This film reminds of "Frankenstein"
And "Dracula." It is, in fine,
A mediocre shocker, full
Of fairly well presented bull.
It will not scare you overmuch—
You've been too often scared by such.
But if fil-lums that make you shudder
Are what you crave—well, try anudder.

Note of interest [to myself]:
On a four poster bed where a victim lies quaking
Is a "grandmother" afghan like what I am making.

Happy Time

When a tea is from 4 to 6 the hosts and the person or persons for whom the affair is being given usually are the only ones there at 4 and all the guests arrive practically in a body about 5 o'clock, but yesterday at the tea given by the trustees of A Century of Progress for Prince Spada Veralli di Potenziani at the Casino this was reversed and the hosts and hostess—Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes was the only woman in the receiving line—were there promptly at 4, and most of the guests were there by 4:30, but the prince did not arrive until almost 5.

The prince is a very busy man as Italian commissioner to the fair, however, so no one seemed to mind having to wait to meet him, and when he did come it was a gay and delightful party. It was that before he came, too, for the table was so chic, the harp and violin music so pleasing and low enough not to interfere with conversation, and every one dressed in his or her best reception clothes.

Mr. and Mrs. Dawes received alone until the prince and his secretary, Signor Liebman, and the Italian consul general, Giuseppe Castruccio, arrived, Mrs. Dawes in black velvet gown and hat with a filet of gold embroidered bois de rose chiffon.

Mrs. Patrick C. Hill was responsible for the gay new floral arrangements on the tea table, we were told, for she had just fixed them for the club and they were used for the first time at the tea. They consisted of a centerpiece of artificial flowers in pale orange, rose geranium, and white, and two fan shaped white opaque glass vases with the same variety of flowers in them. On the yellowish marbleized tables with the club's gay yellow china the effect was charming.

The dress uniforms of the military and naval men attached to A Century of Progress adds color to the scene—gold braid and buttons and decorations are so attractive. Some of those at the party were Capt. Morris S. Daniels, Lieutenant Commander H. D. Nuber, Maj. and Mrs. Chester L. Fordney, Lieutenant Commander J. M. Creighton, Capt. and Mrs. Frank H. Roberts, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Owings, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Skidmore, Col. John Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Glore, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson, Mrs. Arthur Cutten, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hamill, Miss Agnes Foreman, Mr. and Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks and their son-in-law and daughter, Count and Countess Visconti, and Mr. and Mrs. Rush C. Butler.

Engagement of Julia H. Kramer to Richard Lamport Announced

News Expected by Many Friends of Popular Debutante; Wedding May Be in Early Spring.

BY JUDITH CASS.

No one will be surprised at the announcement we are making this morning of the engagement of Miss Julia Hull Kramer to Richard Morey Lamport of Detroit for every one has been anticipating that very announcement since before Julia made her debut last fall.

If the young couple had had their way, the announcement would have been made months ago, but Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy Kramer persuaded their daughter to wait until after she had had one season as a debutante and I'm sure she is glad she waited, for in spite of the rumor having gotten about that she already was "spoken for," she had a perfect whirl all winter.

She attended the Girls' Latin school and then the Wheeler school at Providence and made her debut at a tea at the Fortnightly last October. Her fiancé, whom she met in the east about three years ago, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Lamport of South Bend, Ind., and a graduate of Bowdoin college. No date for the wedding has been set, but it is to be in the near future, probably early this spring.

There is a special reason for Mr. and Mrs. Kramer having chosen today rather than any other day late this winter on which to make the announcement for this is their twenty-first wedding anniversary. Mr. Lamport will be here from Detroit to spend the week-end with his fiancée and her family and to receive the congratulations of Julia's many friends.

James P. Hume of Washington and Chicago yesterday obtained a marriage license at Greenwich, Conn., by mail. News reports from Greenwich said the application indicated Mr. Hume and Miss Marion McFadden, a daughter of Mrs. Parmalee McFadden of 299 Lake Shore drive, would be married next month.

The engagement of Miss McFadden and Mr. Hume, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Hume of Washington, D. C., was announced last October. Mr. Hume, an attorney, lives at 185 East Chestnut street.

Singers Will Be Arts Club Guests.

This morning with their newspaper and their coffee and mail members of the Arts club will receive cards that will give them quite a lift, undoubtedly, for every one loves to meet a prima donna, and when she is the glamorous Mme. Maria Jeritza the prospect is doubly alluring. The president of the club, Mrs. Charles Barney Goodspeed, and the directors are giving a tea for Mme. Jeritza, John Charles Thomas, and Mario Duca next Thursday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock.

These three artists are to sing the leading rôles in "Tosca," to be given Wednesday and Friday nights at the Auditorium for the benefit of the Presbyterian hospital.

This afternoon the club will have one of its delightful tea parties to open an exhibition of paintings by Andre Masson, entitled "Towards the New City and a New Life: an international exhibition of housing and city planning organized by the Gallery of Modern Life." In the absence of Mrs. Potter Palmer, social chairman, Mrs. Eames MacVeagh will act as hostess.

Dinner Tonight for Elsie McCormick.

Tonight the Edgar J. Goodspeeds are giving a dinner for Miss Elsie McCormick at their Woodlawn avenue residence. At Christmas Miss McCormick gave Prof. Goodspeed a sixteenth century manuscript which is a rare copy of the Book of Revelations and which is now being prepared for exhibition by the University of Chicago.

The other guests tonight will be Miss McCormick's brother, Robert Hall McCormick, Vice President and Mrs. Frederick Woodward of the Uni-

YOU MAY NOT LIKE BRIDGE, BUT LUNCH IS GOOD

And Here Are Some Ideas for Its Preparation.

BY IRENE STEYSKAL.

As the amused indulgence or the ire of husbands, the weeping and wailing of old friends, and the ample spectre of avoirdupois which haunts its afternoon sessions, all lack power to dissuade our young matrons' bridge brigade, let us who have been the avowed anti-auction and contract forces acknowledge ourselves routed completely. After this long and wearying siege, let us settle ourselves down comfortably among the cushions with the victors to smoke the fag of peace.

We accept without a murmur the cold and calculating gleam in eyes that, at gayer, giddier pastimes, responded with a warmer, merrier twinkle.

We Accept It All.

We acknowledge that phenomenon of feminine psychology whereby, in the rôle of the afternoon bridge prize, a modest ash tray, a tea towel, or can opener becomes invested with unprecedented worth.

And yet, for the vanquished, this is not a cheerless defeat. After the game, the tea table.

In response to the pleas of a certain red headed young conqueror, who never forgets to count the trumps, we offer the following suggestions for "after bridge" menus:

Sandwiches, of course, are perennial favorites. Your friends will enjoy a teatable that offers:

White bread finger sandwiches—filled with chopped raisins, dates, nuts and cream cheese.
Green and ripe olives Sweet pickles
Brick ice cream Assorted wafers
Coffee

Currant jelly, chopped nuts and cream cheese also combine excellently as a sandwich filling. For the cold days nothing else can quite equal the deliciousness of hot toasted chicken or turkey sandwiches.

Shell Patty Happy Helper.

The shell patty is a happy helper on any winter afternoon. It may hold chicken a la king, creamed ham, or any of the creamed fish delicacies. The ham or fish fillings may be substituted on the following menu:

Chicken a la king in shells
Shoestring potatoes
Olives Radishes Pickles
Vanilla ice cream in ginger ale

Scrambled eggs and chopped bacon in toasted bread cups
Hot rolls
Hermits Coffee

For the bridge supper you may enjoy:

Cream of carrot soup
Scrambled eggs on sauted tomato slices
Crushed orange and cottage cheese salad
Cream puffs
Coffee

The tomato slices should be thickly cut, seasoned, dusted with flour and sauted in butter.

And just another word on sandwich fillings. At various times we have enjoyed crushed pineapple and grated raw carrots with a bit of mayonnaise on whole wheat bread; sliced corned beef spread with chopped mustard pickles on rye bread; cottage cheese and watercress on raisin bread; cream cheese and chopped green peppers on nut bread; cold boiled ham, stuffed olives, hard cooked eggs, all chopped, and mixed with mayonnaise on white bread.

What's Most Tender Hearted Animal? Porker Gets the Vote

BY BETTY BROWNING.

There seems to be a good deal of controversy as to which is the most tender hearted of animals, gastronomically speaking. Some cooks maintain that calves' hearts are the tenderest; others hold a brief for lambs' hearts. Beef hearts are out of it, although they have their supporters on other grounds, as, for instance, flavor and food properties. More of this anon.

For sheer tenderness pigs' hearts probably would win the esteem of an impartial diner coming in contact with the whole family of hearts for the first time. This, adherents of other hearts point out a bit disdainfully, is because a pig's heart is inclined to be meatier and less muscular than the rest.

Unprejudiced Admit It.

This tenderness may be a surprise to any one who has had an opportunity to become acquainted with a porker, his rugged individualism, his stolid indifference even to the hand which feeds him. But facts are facts, and epicures free of prejudice will acknowledge the toothsome succulence of a pig's heart.

Liver has profited by a tremendous vogue in recent years. Diabetics swear by it; food experts point out the rare vitamins which it alone of meats offers. All of which has resulted in a certain falling off of the heart market.

How unfair such a state of affairs is becomes evident when one considers the virtues of the heart: unique flavor, inexpensiveness, high protein and mineral content, superior "chewiness," that rarest of qualities in an age of soft living. And this holds true as much of the sturdier beef as of the tenderer pig.

For a Hearty Meal.

A hearty meal which will win the acclaim of the fussiest diner may have as its pièce de résistance a stewed, stuffed heart, whether calf or veal, beef or lamb. To prepare it thoroughly wash a good sized heart and remove the arteries, veins, and clotted blood. Cut the tough ventricles in order to leave a large space for the stuffing. Soak in cold salt water 15 or 20 minutes.

Make a dressing of 1 cup of bread crumbs, a quarter cup of butter, a teaspoon of salt, a half teaspoon of sage, a half teaspoon of onion juice or grated onion, a quarter cup of cold water, and a dash of pepper. Stuff the heart with the dressing, fasten with toothpicks or tie with a string.

Place in a baking dish with no water, lay strips of salt pork over it, and bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees Fahrenheit] for about 2 hours. Do not let the heart become dry or hard from too hot an oven.

A recipe for pigs' hearts, which may also be applied to lambs' or calves' hearts, presents them in diced form with a garnish of onion, carrot, or celery, caramel and lemon juice.

HEART WITH RICE BORDER.

2 calves', lambs' or pigs' hearts
2 tablespoons cut onion
2 tablespoons carrot or celery
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon caramel
1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice

Wash hearts thoroughly in cold water. Remove all muscles and veins, cut in small dice and cover with cold water for 15 minutes. Drain and cover with boiling water, add onion and carrot, and simmer for 3 hours. If water cooks away add just enough to keep heart covered. When tender add salt, a little pepper and flour rubbed smooth with butter. Cook 5 minutes, add caramel, and vinegar or lemon juice. Serve with border of cooked rice or mashed potato. Sprinkle with parsley and paprika.

Fresh Pork Cuts, Pot Roasts Are Best Buys

In its regular weekly report issued for the guidance of consumers, the committee on marketing information of the meat council of Chicago states:

"All cuts of fresh pork are recommended to the housewives of Chicago as the most economical meat buy over the coming week-end. Pot roast of beef is also available at attractive prices at the present time."

APPLES GOOD RAW OR COOKED; SUPPLIES LARGE

Nature and Science Vie in Production.

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

"You're the apple of my eye" has been a statement that has had a sentimental meaning for nearly every person, if we can believe valentines.

Twelve months of the year fresh apples are available, thanks to modern storage facilities and a forehanded system of Dame Nature that shifted the harvest dates for apples, with the aid of science. Chicago homes can enjoy as wide a variety in this blushing fruit as demand dictates.

Apple Sauce Is Conquered.

Even that somewhat difficult product for canning, apple sauce, has been conquered and is available in cans and jars to add zest to meats or to take a major part in the dessert of the meal. Apples from nearby counties and states and from the western orchards and eastern fruit belts are available even at this time of year, whether cooking or eating varieties are sought.

My German vocabulary may be poor and getting poorer, but memory still serves well to bring back mouthwatering thoughts of what neighbors in my boyhood used to call "apfel kuchen."

Like Dutch Apple Cake.

The preparation would be similar to the following recipe for Dutch apple cake, except that those German neighbors did not apply the final dash of hard sauce or plain or whipped cream. The Dutch apple cake is made as follows:

Ingredients are two cups of flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar, six tablespoons fat, one egg, three-fourths to one cup of milk, and a quantity of pared and quartered apples.

Prepare a rich biscuit dough with the first seven ingredients. Spread to a depth of one-half inch in a shallow, greased pan. Cut the apples in slices and place, sharp edges down, in rows on top of the dough. Sprinkle with two tablespoons sugar mixed with one-half teaspoon of cinnamon. Bake in a moderate oven 25 to 30 minutes. To be Dutch, the apple cake is considered more complete with hard sauce or the plain or whipped cream covering.

Some Illinois Apples.

Illinois and the western states have some varieties of apples that are popular both for eating uncooked and for use in baking or cooking. Such varieties include the Staymen and the Winesap. Other varieties more popular for their use in cookery include the Rome Beauty, the various Greenings, the Ben Davis, and the Arkansas Red, all available at this time of the year.

Some recipes which include the use of apples provide a picture of the appetizing result even before the cook begins in the kitchen. Among these is one with the title "Apple Gingerbread Upside Down Cake."

This also is Dutch even to advise serving with a covering of hard sauce or plain or whipped cream. To prepare, one needs a half cup of fat, half cup boiling water, one cup molasses, two and one-half cups flour, one and one-half teaspoons ginger, one teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon salt, three to five "firm fleshed" apples, two teaspoons cinnamon mixed with one-third cup of sugar.

Melt the fat in boiling water and add the molasses. Sift flour, ginger, soda, and salt together and add them to the first mixture, then beat vigorously. Arrange the sliced apples, cinnamon and sugar in a greased baking dish and pour the gingerbread mixture over the apples. Bake in a moderate oven about 45 minutes and turn out the cake, "upside down with care."

THIS FISH CHOWDER OFFERS DISH THAT IS A MEAL IN ITSELF

Fish chowder offers virtually a whole meal in itself. The ease of preparation and the economy of the dish recommends it to the cook. A recipe follows:

1 onion, chopped.
2 cups carrots.
5 potatoes.
3 tablespoons flour.
2 cups milk.
1 No. 2 can salmon or other fish.
1 teaspoon salt.

Cut the salt pork in small pieces and fry it for five minutes with the chopped onion. Cut the carrots and potatoes in small pieces, add to them the pork, onions, and salt, cover with five cups of boiling water, and cook until the vegetables are tender. Mix the flour thoroughly with one-half cup of milk and stir it into the vegetable mixture. Then add the rest of the milk and the flaked fish, and cook for five minutes.

To make a well balanced and complete meal with fish chowder as the main dish, only a salad need be added for adults, with extra milk for children.

248 MILLION CANS OF PEAS PACKED IN U. S. IN 1932

The size of the commercial pea crop canned in 1932 in the United States has been estimated from reports of canning factories as totaling 10,366,968 standard cases. In the canning trade 24 cans of No. 2 size are called a standard case, thus the pack last year was 248,807,232 cans.

Wisconsin, which is the leading state in the nation growing and canning peas, had a smaller crop of this vegetable last year, but canned 3,345,693 cases, or approximately one-third of all the peas packed in the United States. The state's canning crop was 3,345,693 cases, the smallest since 1916, according to the Wisconsin crop reporting service.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

The family which has two vegetables a day besides potatoes all winter long is likely to have little need for spring tonics.

Bluish fruit stains that do not come out with boiling water usually yield to alternate applications of a 10 per cent solution of acetic acid and boiling water.

VARIETY REMOVES BREAD FROM CLASS OF MERE NECESSITIES

Bread has been called "the staff of life" for centuries, but it still requires ingenuity to produce a variety of breads that will make eating more of a pleasure than a necessity.

Whole wheat flour is particularly valuable for use in many kinds of bread because it contains vitamin B, iron, and phosphorus, which increase the protective constituents of the diet.

Cheese biscuits are a pleasant change in the diet and are easily prepared. Grated cheese is used in place of some of the fat in the dough of ordinary biscuits. Tasty biscuits may be made in the same way by substituting peanut butter for the cheese.

Standard recipes for biscuits and muffins may be varied in many different ways by use of dates, raisins, nuts, and other fruits. A sweet biscuit is often useful for tea or lunch. Pinwheel biscuits are made by spreading ordinary biscuit dough on the board, sprinkling with cinnamon and sugar and rolling it up. These biscuits are then baked in slices like cinnamon rolls.

COOK DUMPLINGS IN APPLE SAUCE FOR NEW FLAVOR

Modern Cooks Reviving Traditional Method.

Economical tips for week-end food shoppers—a Saturday morning radio feature—will be presented tomorrow by Mary Meade over station W-G-N. Tune in at 9:45 for Miss Meade's market chat.

BY MARY MEADE.

I had to laugh a little when I read that question in a letter yesterday, for I know just how the reader felt. Somewhere back in memory she seemed to have a vague recollection of watching tablespoons of creamy white dumpling batter being put into —not the boiling water that today's recipes specify—but cooking apple sauce!

But it's no dream. That was the old, orthodox method of dumpling cooking which modern food-wise folks are just beginning to rediscover as a new means of obtaining delicious apple flavor. The following recipe hangs on to the old tradition, but offers a modern ingredient to contribute special goodness. However, if you are not supplied on your dumpling cooking day with evaporated milk, substitute three-fourths cup fresh milk for the evaporated milk and water. Either makes a delicious dumpling, though the evaporated milk is essential for the fluffy sauce that tops it all off.

STEAMED APPLE DUMPLINGS.

First for the apple sauce. Wash, pare and core six medium sized apples and slice for stewing. Cover the slices with water in a saucepan and cook gently until tender. Add one cup of sugar and continue simmering until the sirup starts to thicken. And now for the dumplings:

DUMPLINGS.

2 cups flour
¾ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon nutmeg
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons butter
⅔ cup evaporated milk
⅓ cup water

Sift the dry ingredients together twice, then cut in the fat as for baking powder biscuits. Mix the milk and water and pour into the flour mixture, moistening all parts quickly. Drop the dough from a tablespoon into the boiling apple sauce. This amount should make about twelve small dumplings, or six servings. Cover tightly and steam in the cooking apple sauce till the dumplings are done, about 10 minutes.

To serve, place two dumplings in each dessert dish and surround by several tablespoons of apple sauce, top with the following fluffy sauce:

LEMON SAUCE FOR DUMPLINGS.

1 cup evaporated milk
2 tbsp. lemon juice
Grated rind of 1 lemon
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup confectioner's sugar

Chill the milk until ice cold, then whip with a cold rotary beater until stiff. Do not expect it to reach quite the same stiffness to which fresh cream may be brought. Now add the lemon juice and continue whipping until very stiff. Cream the butter, add the sugar, and continue creaming till fluffy. Fold this mixture, together with the lemon rind, into the whipped milk.

Now while we're in the atmosphere of dumplings, pan dowdies, cobblers, and batter puddings [it's a clever cook who can tell the difference these days] let's have another early American favorite—with doubtless an English accent:

BLUEBERRY BATTER PUDDING.

1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoon baking powder
1½ tablespoons melted butter
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup milk
2 cups canned, drained blueberries
1-3 cup sugar

Sift the dry ingredients together and add the melted butter, egg, and milk which have been mixed. Place half the batter by spoonfuls in six individual pudding cups or molds and add a part of the berries to each cup. Sprinkle evenly with the sugar. Add the rest of the batter, filling the cups about two-thirds full. Snap a bit of oiled paper over each cup, holding it with a rubber band, and steam over boiling water for almost an hour. Serve this pudding, steaming hot, turned out into saucers and accompanied by fluffy lemon hard sauce or cream.

You Must Arise at 4 A. M. to Make Real Dutch Apple Butter

BY WILLIAM IRVIN.

This is the story of the Pennsylvania Dutch apple butter ring which, despite the implication in "ring," is neither a band of apple butter thieves nor a children's game. This point cannot be too strongly emphasized because that middle west farm institution, the so-called threshing ring, has conjured up in the minds of many city brethren an odd assortment of visions, ranging from a vigilante society for flogging horse thieves to a rural pastime combining the best features of drop the handkerchief and farmer-in-the-dell.

Prosaically enough, it is nothing more than a coöperative work group organized by the farmers of a community at threshing time, and derives its name, I suppose, from the figurative joining of hands in a spirit of neighborly endeavor and for a common end. Its single drawback, however, would seem to be the amateur status of the institution, the only compensation accruing to the coöperating members, aside from a return of the favor, being a square meal provided by the entertaining farmer. And that way lies disaster—for the host.

And Mine Host Is in the Red.

In the absence of a contract stipulating just how much or how little is to be eaten, there's a disposition to let the conscience be the guide on the theory that the vigor with which each one has applied himself to his allotted task in his neighbor's behalf can only be gauged by the amount each consumes at the farmer's board. The invariable result is that the host finds himself in the red if he is at all inclined to place any sort of mercenary value on the food he's served. But if he does that he can go a little farther and charge it all off to good will. So serious, though, does the problem loom that more than one thrifty farmer has considered the advisability of hiring his threshing done and charging the hired hands for a meal, the result of which, it is figured, will be that the hands will still owe the farmer money, although not quite as much, perhaps, as under the present system.

The Pennsylvania Dutch employ the same principle of coöperative labor in making apple butter, but there's a different factor involved here. And that's the resulting product, which in one case can be consumed by the participants, while in the other case it can't. Thus the basis on which the apple butter group seemingly would operate would be "all the apple butter you can eat, but no free meal under any circumstances."

How It's Done in Pennsylvania.

Whether it does so operate, Roy D Haverstick, apple butter expert, has neglected to state. To Roy, however, we're indebted for this treasured secret of the Pennsylvania Dutch, the making of old-fashioned cider apple butter, which has been handed down from generation to generation [the secret, not the apple butter]. O, may be it's not exactly a secret, but the circumstances under which the apple butter is made are just the kind that you usually find in good secrets.

It seems that a group of farmers and their families, having decided to go in for apple butter making in a fairly big way, gather at one of the homes at the eerie hour of 4 a. m. (That may not be an eerie hour to the Pennsylvania Dutch, but it is to a great many, and I'm sure it would take something like the prospect of making apple butter to get them up at that time.)

A preliminary step, it should be mentioned, had already been taken prior to the zero hour; that is the pressing out of about thirty gallons of apple cider.

Like a Scene from "Macbeth."

Gathered round the wood fire, above which is suspended a thirty gallon copper kettle, are the shadowy forms of members of the apple butter ring, conversing in low tones in keeping with the ritualistic flavor of the event. Truly a bewitching scene and one which, were you to witness, would make you apple butter conscious for a long time to come, I'm sure.

Boiling the cider goes far on into the day. The men boil and the women folk peel and quarter the apples. Thus it goes until the cider has been boiled down to about fifteen gallons. Then begins the apple adding process, an eight quart pail of quartered apples being dumped into the fifteen gallons of cider, and the boiling goes on and on with more eight quart pails being added at regular intervals until twelve such buckets of apples have thus been immersed. All the time the official "stirrer" has been wielding a long handled paddle. The apples boil and the stirrer stirs for all of three hours. Then the official tasters taste, and this includes about everybody who knows the difference between apple butter and cider.

Date Penciled on Covers.

The gallon and half gallon earthenware crocks then are filled and allowed to cool.

"Then," in Roy's words, "they are covered with brown paper securely tied around the top and the date is pencilled on. This is important, as some of the cider apple butter connoisseurs claim that the best flavor is found in apple butter which is two or even three years old. If properly prepared this apple butter never spoils even though never sealed in any way."

And you have the word of the Pennsylvania Dutch for it that this makes an unequaled spread for bread, griddle cakes, waffles and what have you, a delicacy to be served also with roast pork and ham, and a component part of a favorite salad composed of cottage cheese and apple butter. A Dutch treat!

SALAD IS WISELY CALLED BALANCE WHEEL OF DIET

Americans May Enjoy It All Year.

Wise cooks use a salad as "the balance wheel of the diet" to correct deficiencies or excess quantities of fat, protein, or starch in the principal meal of the day, according to dieticians who hold no prejudice beyond proper selection and use of varieties in vegetables, meats, pastries, desserts, and other types of foods.

These dieticians point to the original definition of a salad, as "a dish of green herbs or vegetables, usually uncooked and served with a dressing, sometimes mixed with chopped cold meat, fish or other foods."

There were salads in the days of preceding generations, but except in the periods of summer home garden growth, Americans could enjoy only a portion of the salad treats that are now possible 12 months of the year. Fresh fruits and vegetables, unlimited stores of canned goods in handy and attractive forms, and more general knowledge of their combinations with meats, cheeses, and dressings give us variety.

Vitamins Popularize Salads.

The call to vitamins popularized the salad. Four of these vitamins, A, B, E, and G, add to a healthy supply of calcium and other mineral salts in lettuce, cabbage, watercress, romaine, and endive. Raw tomatoes add more A and B vitamins and supply in addition a goodly amount of vitamin C.

But disregarding the vitamins, salads in various combinations offer such a variety in taste and color appeal that they prove their own salesmen. Cabbage salad may be in various forms, served as cole slaw or shredded and placed on a cabbage or lettuce leaf to be covered with a suitable dressing. Shredded cabbage is further enhanced with color and nutritive content when combined with chopped or grated carrots.

The salad of cooked vegetables is, of course, a most convenient method of using up left-overs. Beans, beets, peas, carrots, cauliflower, and potato, alone or in combination, with something raw for crispness, and lettuce, cress or celery leaves for greens, make an easy substitute for hot vegetables.

Cottage cheese, or eggs, or meat, or fish in salad increase the nutritive value greatly. All these foods are rich in excellent protein; cheese is especially valuable as a source of calcium and phosphorous. Eggs are also rich in calcium and phosphorous and in addition supply vitamins A, B, and D; meat and eggs are rich in iron and vitamin G; tuna fish, salmon, and sardines are rich in vitamin D.

The salad, especially the vegetable salad or the salad made of citrus fruits, besides being a cool and appetizing dish for summertime, is probably the most attractive, convenient, effective, and the cheapest way to provide the family with most of the "protective foods" other than milk and butter. The vitamins and mineral salts, which are abundant in green vegetables, in carrots and in tomatoes, in grapefruit and oranges, are served with least loss in these foods eaten raw.

WHOLESALE CELERY PRICES FAIL TO PAY FOR COST OF FREIGHT

Wholesale prices in Chicago and other northern markets have been so low on southern grown celery this month that growers in Florida have begun plowing under portions of the crop in an endeavor to put prices above the cost of freight.

Chicago is receiving its celery at present from three sources, Michigan, California and Florida. The best price quoted on southern grown celery has been about three cents a stalk, wholesale, which Florida growers claim is not sufficient to pay for marketing costs.

CHEAPER LIVER AS NUTRITIOUS AS COSTLY KIND

Rich in Minerals That Make Red Corpuscles.

Liver may be either a cheap food or a luxury, depending on the kind that is purchased. Pork, lamb and beef livers have the same food values as calf liver, although the latter is usually far more expensive.

Liver is especially rich in iron and copper, which are needed for the building of red corpuscles. It is one of the richest sources of vitamin A, a good source of vitamin G and contains some vitamin B. Like other meats, it has a high percentage of protein. For the regular family menu, liver is one of the most valuable kinds of food.

Much Depends on Cooking.

The attractiveness of a liver dish depends upon the method of cooking. The usual way is to broil or sauté it. Fresh, tender liver should be cooked only long enough to take away the red color. Liver with a less delicate flavor or texture, tastes better scalded first, although some food value is thus lost.

Liver may be ground or chopped and combined with other foods; in this form it may be used creamed, as in hash, loaf, croquettes, or as a scalloped dish with potatoes or whole wheat. It may even be made into a salad combined with raw cabbage and onions.

Recipe for Braised Liver.

Sliced, it may be served broiled with bacon, onions, or milk gravy, baked or braised. For this last named dish, dip the liver in flour and brown in fat, then cover with tomatoes which have been slightly thickened, season with onion, green pepper and salt, cook slowly, covered, for fifteen or twenty minutes.

Liver is an excellent food for children and can be served as a sandwich filling, ground and mixed with chopped cabbage or chili sauce, for the school lunch.

"I took everything, but gained only temporary relief. Until last spring my daughter, who is a nurse in a hospital, brought me some Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

FOLLY ISLAND

By Wallace Irwin

SYNOPSIS.

Bart Burgess is marooned in a catboat on Peconic bay, fifty miles from his Long Island home in Wyattville. His companion, Ingalls Frederick Warren, spoiled child of a new-made fortune, known as "Nosey Ingy," rows to town and sends Bart help and taxies home. A girl in a canoe invites Bart over to her family's island. Bart learns that she is one of the Bayleys, who have lived in seclusion on the island fifteen years. The father travels. He invites the girl, Alice, to visit him in Wyattville. Less than a week later Trevor Burgess, Bart's father, dies suddenly from a heart attack. He confesses in a letter left for Bart to being a bigamist. The Bayleys of Folly Island are his second family. They know him as Matthew Bayley. He asks Bart, for his invalid mother's sake, to guard the secret, and leaves a fortune to provide for the Bayleys. Bart calls on Mrs. Bayley, posing as a lawyer, and finds her a lovely woman, not the harridan he expected. Bart is happy to learn from her mother that Alice isn't Matthew Bayley's daughter. But to keep her from visiting his home and seeing his father's pictures is now a problem. When Bart realizes he loves Alice, he resolves to stay away from Folly Island. He sees a lot of Lora Sackett, a distant relative and recent divorcee, and soon finds himself unexpectedly engaged. The Bayleys visit New York and Bart has luncheon with them. Ingy Warren has been visiting the island and has invited Alice to Wyattville. Bart and Alice quarrel. He tells her of his engagement and she says she never wants to see him again.

INSTALLMENT XXIX.

THE FRUITS OF SILENCE.

The scrutiny of Capt. Hen Love, narrow as that of a cat over a mouse hole, had seldom roved far from the movements and behavior of the people on Folly Island. During the years since first they came there the Bayleys had become more a part of his profession than the catching of eels. And, as he had almost admitted to Bart Burgess, it takes an eel to catch an eel.

Year in and year out Hen had collected his monthly pay from Matthew Bayley for the very easy task of saying nothing and doing less. Hen Love had grown from a middle aged man to an old one, enjoying the fruits of silence until he had come to believe that his pension was an honest one. He had been neighborly and obliging, as he never failed to remind his benefactor when pay day came around. And he had known Mrs. Bayley before she was Mrs. Bayley. Tee-hee. Hen's little joke. And wasn't it Hen that found the justice of the peace for them, and everything?

But those halcyon days had become a little fogged after Matthew Bayley's death when Hen began to realize that the traveling man must have been a darned sight better off than he let on to be. Hm. Mrs. Bayley building that fine house, and everything. Yes-yes. Getting a telegram last month. Poor folks don't get telegrams, unless there's death in the family. But Mrs. Bayley didn't seem to have nobody more to die.

Yes-yes. The Bayleys was gettin' awful stuck up, with young fellers around all the time, seeing Alice. That there new Burgess feller. Pretty young for a lawyer. Must have a lot o' money somewhere, the way he come racing up in them speed boats. And the clothes he wore. Couldn't fool Hen Love about clothes. Them clothes come from New York, or Hen was a nigger. And what made that Burgess feller look so blue that day he went home and never did come back? Huh? Had Alice gave him the cold mitten? Was that it? And how about that sort of dudish feller, com' around in a yacht?

A yacht. Yes-yes. The Bayleys had began playin' with yacht folks, now that Bayley was dead and gone. One o' them Southampton millionaires, probably. Mrs. Bayley had gave up her notion to keep Alice cooped up any more. Why was that, hey? Maybe this here now dudish feller with the yacht would marry Alice and put her in society. . . .

Matching two and two together with the tiny cleverness of the bayman, Capt. Hen Love began considering his share in a wealthy matrimonial alliance. Now Mrs. Bayley had plenty money, but she wasn't free handed like Bayley was. Made a face every time she forked over the seventy-five dollars. But she got plenty money. That was the main thing; and that comfort strengthened Hen Love for the audacious interview which led to prosperity in an unexpected quarter.

That afternoon he went over to the houseboat with tribute; two eels in a bucket. Finding Mrs. Bayley alone—the boys and Alice had just gone up the hill—he approached her with his best company smile. She hadn't been particularly friendly last pay day and now her look down at him over the rail might have discouraged a less resolute spirit.

"Hauled in a couple o' big ones for you this morning, Mrs. Bayley. Yes-yes." Holding up the two snake-like objects, still faintly squirming. "The big ones is best, Mrs. Bayley, if you soak 'em in fresh water over night. Sweet as a nut."

"Thank you," she said without smiling. "How much a pound?"

"O, that's all right, Mrs. Bayley. I just wanted to be neighborly." But it cut his pride, her asking to pay for his eels. He, who had been special eel provider for years. Then, because she turned to go into the cabin, "You'll be movin' into that fine house pretty soon, won't you, Mrs. Bayley?"

"Yes, I think so. I'll take the big eel, Capt. Love, but you must let me pay for it."

"O, that's all right," he repeated. Then cunningly blinking, "Mrs. Bayley, I wanted to talk a little business with you." She merely waited, gave him no help. "It's this way with me, I'm a pretty lonesome man, now my wife's gone. So I thought I'd marry a girl I know down in Riverhead."

"That's splendid!" Mrs. Bayley almost smiled.

"But I can't what you might call make both ends meet on what I'm gettin' now, Mrs. Bayley. That young lady, she runs into money." She was still waiting, so he plunged headlessly ahead. "So I thought we could make some new arrangement, you and me."

"What new arrangement?"

"Well, when you folks wasn't so well fixed I was pretty reasonable, wasn't I? Yes-yes. But now you got plenty I was kinda thinking you'd be half way decent——"

"But the wages I'm giving you now——"

"O, that's all right, Mrs. Bayley. But it's jest temporary. What I been doin' is worth a sight more than that. I guess Bayley knew. And I was thinkin' that a hundred and fifty would be more like it, after this."

"Have you lost your mind?"

"Maybe so, Mrs. Bayley." His little eyes were greenish points. "But I don't thank nobody for tellin' me so."

"I don't care to argue the point."

"Well, there' some that will." A spiteful gnome, he hunched over the bucket of eels: "I ain't been keepin' still for fun, Mrs. Bayley. I like to talk as much as most folks."

"Capt. Love, now that we're talking so candidly," Mrs. Bayley had gone pale to the lips, but she kept her poise, "what was your object in entering my house when we were in New York?"

"Hey?" Sharply. "Who entered your house?"

"Nobody else has the run of the place. Why did you take my husband's picture?"

"I don't know what you're talkin' about." And that was the truth. "If you think you can do me out of my honest wages, jest by talkin' about a picture——"

"I'll have nothing more to do with you until you bring it back. You've been overpaid for years and I see no reason for giving you anything at all."

"No reason? No reason? Was it you called me crazy?"

But she turned coolly and went in to the houseboat.

There was not room for many thoughts in Hen Love's little head; but now he was trembling with rage and the realization that he had overstepped himself. After all, seventy-five a month was a lot, just for keeping still. Huh. She' had trumped up that photograph story just to make him feel small. And now, not only had she refused to raise his bribe, but as far as he could gather, she had fired him point blank.

Doris Blake Answers

Address Doris Blake, The Chicago Tribune, regarding problems of the heart. Enclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

Break the News Gradually.

"Dear Miss Blake: There's a young girl who cares for me. But I do not care to hurt her feelings by telling her I do not care for her. What would you advise? [HELPLESS."

One can always evade the phone calls. Be busy when being coerced into dates and gradually slide out of the situation.

Skeptical Suitor.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a beautiful girl. She gives me every reason to believe that she loves me, even telling me so. Yet I am skeptical. Please advise. DOUBTFUL."

You're not going to get very far with the girl if you aren't going to believe what she tells you.

Children Fill Breach When Trouble Comes

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

A certain family of my acquaintance is composed of father, mother, two grown sons, 19 and 21; two high schools boys, 13 and 16; also two married daughters, 25 and 23 years old.

They have been going through an uncomfortable but interesting and valuable experience during the depression. The father is a musician, teacher, and vocalist. He has always had to augment his musical income with a business position. Of late his musical income, always fluctuating, has been greatly reduced. People cut out music lessons and churches cut our choir directors when money is scarce.

For years he has had a job in the editorial department of a trades' paper earning a moderate but much appreciated monthly stipend. This paper had a very bad year 1931-1932 and was obliged to make several cuts in salaries. Finally, late in '32, the paper had to reduce forces to such an extent that this particular man lost his job.

The two older boys, who had been working since graduating from high school, were earning between them a little over $2,000. The family lived in a pleasant little house in the suburbs, had lots of friends, and thoroughly enjoyed their life. They lived according to the standards prevalent in that community on a salary ranging around $3,000 a year, counting the small board paid by the two sons who worked. This did not enable them to save anything more than the monthly insurance premium on the father's life.

Commutation was high on their railroad. The school boys had certain necessary expenses and were not able because of the unemployment situation to get any little jobs on Saturdays to help out as their older brothers had done when in school.

The 16 year old boy was a senior in high school when dad lost his job. The 13 year old was in the ninth grade.

The family got together and talked things over. They saw that some changes must be made at once. What to do about it?

If you don't believe the depression has done any good you should just see how those children took hold of the situation. The older boys acted like men and gave their father all sorts of courage. They planned a budget based on what they earned and the little musical income their father still had. It was hard to leave their friends, but the family moved to an apartment in the city.

The elder sister offered to keep the high school senior until he graduated, which was not easy for her because her income and house were both small. The younger sister helped her mother move and get settled in the new home. The school boys assumed a much better attitude toward helping at home, even doing things without being asked, and altogether the once easy going and apparently irresponsible children proved a tower of strength to their parents.

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

A list of boys' names and their meanings is now ready. This information will be sent out by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dubuque Girl Talks 'British,' Makes Film Hit

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 16.—Margaret Lindsay, playing the feminine rôle opposite William Powell in Warner's "Private Detective," and who made an impression as the girl on the Titanic in "Cavalcade" is not, as most of Hollywood thought, an English girl at all. She is a Dubuque, Ia., girl, who came home from an extended sojourn in England so changed and speaking so broad-A that the old friends in the corn belt took her for Lady Astor. Her real name is Margaret Kies.

As a lark, she posed as an English girl, and it was as such that she met a young movie producer, who signed her for pictures. After that she was afraid to give herself away, and played as a member of "Cavalcade's" all-British cast. Only when she began to believe that films may become her serious and permanent career did she break down and tell. Her parents still live in Dubuque. She had years of study in dancing and dramatics, but few professional appearances prior to "Cavalcade."

Julia Kramer Is Engaged to R. M. Lamport

Wedding May Be Held in Early Spring.

There is a laugh in every tragedy, somewhere, and young Bobby Faurot gave the one in the Roosevelt-Cermak affair to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Faurot Jr., by calling to them early yesterday morning, "Mommy, Daddy, Roosevelt's lost his job. The paper says 'Roosevelt Fired.'" The last word in the headline, "upon," did not make any impression upon this young scion of a well known family who has heard so much about "being fired" and "losing jobs" in the last few months.

Mrs. Melvin Traylor is heaving a sigh of relief today that she can attend Northwestern's charity carnival and ball tonight at the Aragon ballroom without so much as thinking about a ticket or reservation. All of her work as general woman's chairman was finished up last night.

Reports are that the party is to be one of the large and brilliant affairs of the season, with a notable array of screen, stage, and radio stars presenting a floor show at frequent intervals during the evening.

Many Parties for Lord Snell.

The Rt. Hon. Lord Snell, C. B. E., who is in the city this week as the guest of Harry Oppenheimer at the Ambassador East is being entertained at numerous small parties by his friends here. Wednesday night Mrs. Horace Bridges gave a dinner for him and Sunday Mrs. Mitchell D. Follansbee will entertain at luncheon for him after his lecture before the Chicago Ethical society on "The Nationalist and Military Menace in Europe." That afternoon the society will give a tea for him in its rooms at 208 North Wabash avenue.

A few weeks ago Miss Gloria Griffiths had a cocktail party in the Griffiths' apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive so her friends could admire the lovely portrait that Beltran Masses did of her, and now her mother, Mrs. Moisant Griffiths, is giving a tea tomorrow so her friends may see it also.

Those busy Junior leaguers who are publicizing the Enchanted Island of A Century of Progress by talking to school children all over the city and nearby suburbs and towns have finished their work in the public and parochial schools and today they are starting in at the private schools by having one of their number talk at the Harvard School for Boys.

Leave on Auto Tour Today.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert P. McLaughlin and Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Pirie are leaving today to motor to Florida. They probably will stop off at the John T. Pirie's home in Orlando for a short visit and spend the rest of their three weeks' trip motoring about wherever they please.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Bradley, who had planned to leave today or tomorrow on a motor trip south, will not leave because of some sudden business affairs. Later on, however, the Bradleys will take their trip and go to Summerville, S. C., and Miami.

Mrs. William H. Bush left town yesterday for a three weeks' vacation in Florida where she will visit Mrs. Reinhard Siedenburg, the mother of the former Kathryn Siedenburg who was a schoolmate of Emeline Bush's at Farmington. Miss Bush went east last year for the marriage of Miss Siedenburg to H. Danforth Starr Jr.

Mrs. Herbert H. Kennedy, Mrs. Albert F. Madlener Jr., and little Nancy Madlener are leaving tomorrow for Vero Beach, Fla., which is not so far from Palm Beach. Mrs. Kennedy will be gone three weeks and Mrs. Madlener plans to stay there two months.

The distinguished guest committee of the Woman's City club has issued invitations for a tea to be given next Monday afternoon for Miss Marion Talbot, dean of women at the University of Chicago. Miss Talbot, only recently returned from a year in Turkey, will talk informally on "The Turkish Women of Today."

Mrs. Tiffany Blake, assisted by Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, Mrs. Robert S. Gregory, Mrs. Edmund J. Doering, Mrs. R. Bruce Malcolm, Mrs. George G. Bogert, Mrs. George B. McKibbin, and Mrs. Herbert F. Perkins, will preside at the tea table.

Mr. and Mrs. Angus Hibbard of 2440 Lake View avenue are leaving Tuesday for Rancho Linda Vista, near Tucson, Ariz. They expect to return to Chicago in April.

With her mother, Mrs. Fortunato Jarace, safely packed off to her new home near Rome, and her debutante sister, Miss Jean McVoy, aboard the floating university, Mrs. Sidney Smith Gorham Jr. packed her own bags and those of her husband yesterday for a three weeks' Florida vacation. The young Gorhams are accompanying Mr. Gorham's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Gorham, down to the Boca Raton Town club, half way between Palm Beach and Miami. From there they will go up to Palm Beach for at least a week.

Mrs. Frank P. Hixon of Lake Forest is busy this week commandeering cars and chauffeurs in the name of hospitality. Mrs. Hixon is chairman of the business and professional women's department of the Chicago Y. W. C. A., which tomorrow and Sunday is acting as hostess to 300 young Y. W. C. A. business girls from northern Illinois and Wisconsin, who are meeting here for a mid-winter conference.

Maggy Rouff Revamps Waist and Skirt Idea in White Pique and Navy Wool

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Ensembles that look like the old time shirt waist-and-skirt outfits are sponsored for spring by Paris dressmaking salons. Many are composed of skirt, shirtwaist, and long coat. Others combine shirt waist, skirt, and jacket, and others are just shirt waist and skirt. The shirt waist part of the ensemble is often made of pique or linen, the materials that were used for it in the early part of the twentieth century.

One of these French shirt waist outfits that are smart for spring is shown in our sketch today. Maggy Rouff made it. The skirt is fashioned of a heavy navy blue wool with lacy horizontal stripes. The skirt is cut to look very narrow, but is made comfortably wide by a set-in panel of stiffly pressed knife plaits, set at the left side front. A set-in pocket is placed on the right hip and there is a plain tailored belt at the waistline.

The white piqué blouse that goes with this skirt is shown in the upper left hand corner. It has short cap sleeves and a round yoke at the neck, which has a knot in front from which a tie of the skirt wool hangs. Over this goes a drop yoke jacket in piqué shown on the large figure. This jacket buttons on to the blouse above the waistline and at the neck.

'Pageant' Has Two Appeals for Readers

G. B. Lancaster Author of Brilliant Work.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Pageant," by G. B. Lancaster. [Century.] February choice of the Literary Guild.

"This life, this pageant, this masquerade. . . . You ask me if I am going to the masquerade. I am at it." That sentence appears on page 328 of G. B. Lancaster's latest novel and gives the title to a tale of almost fantastic life about three generations of two great families of Tasmania who went out as colonists from England in the days when their servants were assured them through England's exportation of convict labor to that far outpost of civilization. "They drank life as if it were old port, every mouthful to be well savored on the palate," says the lovely Jenny who was a child in the first pages of the book and glows throughout it. "Now it is tossed down like a fizzy drink," she wisely observes as the book ends. It is those "well savored" days that "Pageant" pictures.

"We made our own wine, our own clothes, our own bread, our own laughter," observes the first Jenny, grandmother of her lovely namesake. On her deathbed the first Jenny, always known as Madam, had the same wit, the same pride, the same charm, the same lust for reality that had carried her into marriage at fourteen and into a new country, preserving the facts as well as the fancies of the brilliant French civilization of the early nineteenth century from which she had sprung.

Beauty she took to the bush and preserved it there in the furnishings of her salon. And a Gallic zest for life and living and a forthrightness and a brave realism oddly in contrast with the Victorianism of the other women of her circle. It is Madam that dominates the book with an almost imperial matriarchal power emanating from a body as delicate and fragile [to outward appearance] as a Dresden doll. The toast of the country, as she left her ninety-third birthday party—beginning to be drowsy and remote—the greatest man in all Tasmania was heard to say, "There goes a great lady."

"Pageant" has two distinct appeals to readers—the appeal of material wholly fresh and new to most of them and the appeal of the characterization of Madam, who is pure charm, steel-girdered; of Jenny, who has the same steel-strong tenacity under exquisite beauty; of Mab and Oliver, who are never steel enough; of the whole tribe of pioneers.

The material is at times almost melodrama, but a melodrama inherent in the very essence of the life which it depicts. Little settlements, served by white slave labor (slaves in every sense if not in the actual phrasing), surrounded by the menacing bush into which the convicts escape and from which they emerge in marauding bands, provide the locale in the first part of the book of a series of dramatic scenes which would make a tremendous moving picture.

There is something truly panoplied about "Pageant." The actors in it are by no means clods. They are arrayed mentally—and usually physically—in spectacular brightness. Witness a discussion over the poems of Mr. Shelley. "But he could inspire a clod!" cried Sigurd. "Pure, clear sparkling—like cut glass. Keats has only a soft, rich sensuousness."

"In fact," said Brevis, "if you dropped Shelley he'd break, but if you dropped Keats he would squash. Isn't that what you want to say, Sigs?"

There is a definite vitality not only in the scenes and the actions of "Pageant" but in the actors themselves. It is the vitality of fact, for the author gathered all of her material from old family papers and official records of the country where she was born and where she lived much of her life. G. B. Lancaster is the pen name of Edith J. Lyttleton. Two of her great-grandfathers went out to Tasmania from the peninsular wars, and her great-grandmother was lady in waiting to Marie Antoinette, probably the original of Madam in "Pageant."

Bleaches That Aid Some Skins Burn Others

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

It's much easier to make a broad, general recommendation on the use of a face cream than of a bleach. I'm usually a little hesitant about recommending bleaches except the harmless ones such as buttermilk, not because of any prejudice against bleaches but because skins react so differently to them.

If you have any skin idiosyncrasy it's almost bound to be heard from with the use of a bleach containing glycerin or lactic acid or similar content. I have recommended a bleach made of two ounces of rose water, one ounce of glycerin and four ounces of lactic acid. It's been used by any number of women with perfect satisfaction. Yet, there have been complaints registered against it, too. Glycerin on certain skins creates a burning sensation. It is combined with almond oil or rose water or flower oil, or boracic acid, or camphor in certain highly satisfactory preparations. Though it is in itself a bleaching agent, it is not something that you can generally advise, as I say.

So, bleaches are pretty much an individual problem. The fruit and vegetable juices are innocuous enough. Letting the juice of a lemon slice dry on the skin is a common practice, but here, too, the skin with idiosyncrasies may resent even lemon juice. A cucumber mask is an old time favorite as a bleach. And buttermilk is another of those good hand-me-downs from a previous generation. Wash the face and neck with it at bedtime. Some women use the juice of a lemon in a cup of milk for a bleaching bath.

Peroxide is sometimes recommended as a skin whitener. It must be well diluted, however, and kept strictly away from the eyebrows and lashes.

Some of the bleaches have a few drops of carbolic acid mixed in with other ingredients and I'd hesitate about recommending them, although the formula might be good.

An illustrated booklet of Miss Donnelly's stretching exercises may be obtained by sending a stamped, self addressed envelope, Address Antoinette Donnelly, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

New Costume Jewelry Has Merry Rattle

Metal Bracelets Are Stylish, but Noisy Idea.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

The serious and not so serious shoppers are all agog over some rattling new costume jewelry . . . yes, you've probably guessed it, the new rattles are caused by the metal and composition (bakelite maybe!) bracelets, an inspiration or noisy idea sponsored by Vera Borea.

What will intrigue you far more subtly than the clicking of these metal and composition circles is the grand and cheering color combinations. The composition bands are wide and silver thin, with a diameter of over four inches, enabling you to wear them just where they should be worn—over the cuffs of your street coats and suits. The metal bracelets are the usual shining metal variety that you jangled on your wrist all season.

The light, thin composition circles are knockout . . . you can buy some tortoise shell effects that are positively eye-filling, and what a find they are for red haired sirens who realize how peculiarly effective amber and deep brown shaded tortoise shell tints are with flaming locks.

Then you will be interested in a flat yellow tint or a sleek trio of three shiny black circles combined with chromium metal bracelets, or the jade green combine, the burnt orange and, last and quite the most dramatic combination, the scarlet, white and black trio combined with the silver metal bracelets.

Watch this new white and chromium combination . . . all the newest clips, bracelets, breastpins, Ascot tie clips, and odd little decorative numbers that can be planted on your chest are made of white composition stuff contrasted with smooth glittering chromium.

Even the earrings are listening in with blobs of white contrasted with bars, circles, and other designs of chromium. This clever use of chromium as a highlight for swanky street and daytime dresses and suits still progresses . . . you buy every imaginable size of button, clip, clasp, and buckle . . . you can find some of the best looking pins that are as decorative as they are practical, and nearly every fashionable frock of the season glitters with some of the stuff.

Metal combinations are featured in the new pins. One pin that is nothing more or less than a collection of hollow rings is particularly effective in a silver, gold and copper get together. There are earrings to match and what this very modern decorative jewelry can do for a bright or dark colored sports costume has to be seen to be appreciated.

If you insist upon wrist circles or bracelets that can be seen and not heard try the handcuff affairs, some of which look suspiciously like the butcher cuffs. These can be yours for very interesting and small sums, and you can riot in good high colors, such as bright clear yellow, a vermilion, a golden brown and the always fashionable black. Each enameled cuff is dotted liberally and most effectively with spots of white.

Other cuff bracelets are some new half way models that are as light as a whisper, delectably colored in fascinating new shades of yellow, grape, almond green, and red and bright electric blue. They are really just a half a band with both ends tapering away to nothing on the under side of your wrist, thus they are decorative without being awkward or noisy.

David and Goliath

BY NANCY CABOT.

The original title "David and Goliath" was taken from the Bible, as it is unnecessary to remark. The quilt block was designed under this name in New England around 1782. Since that time, however, the same pattern has been styled "Doe and Darts" and "Four Darts," because the blocks in each corner look more like darts than stones.

For a pattern of the "David and Goliath" design, send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn street.

Doris Advises Girl Not to Lend Money to B. F.

She'll Lose Cash and the Boy, Too.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

He wants to get into business for himself, a step the girl says she admires very much in the young man. But he has no money. An uncle of the girl died a brief while ago and left her a legacy of a little over six thousand.

Just that amount is all the young man needs to set him up in business. The job he's working at now is highly distasteful. He has suffered two cuts already. And they never did pay him what he was worth, to hear him tell about it.

Well, he hasn't asked her outright for the money—yet. But he's aware of the girl's legacy. And he's been hinting that if he only had five or six thousand he'd plunge right in and make good in a big way.

The girl is a little older—two years, to be exact. She is crazy about the fellow. He takes her out quite a bit, but he hasn't said anything about becoming engaged. Now, what the young woman wants to know is if it would bring her any closer to an engagement ring if she lent the young man her money. Of course, it would be a loan. She's sure, from the way he has talked, that he'd pay her interest on it. But she wouldn't worry about that if only the loan would make him feel he would want to marry her.

The wonder is that a girl in such a frame of mind and heart hasn't parted with her money already—turned it over lock, stock, and barrel. She must have some guardian angel looking after her or the mistake surely would have been committed ere this! For women victims of the money lending habit rarely stop to think about interest or any future security. They hand the money over feeling that the gift will work a binding morale on the young man.

But it doesn't! It works the opposite way in almost every instance. It's just a version of the old motto: "Don't give a fool an even break!"

CHECKS FOR $100 AWAIT TEN GIRLS OF CHICAGOLAND

Fourth Group of Winners Appears Sunday.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Checks for $100 each are being picked up—not for a song, but for a photograph—these days. Watch the rotogravure section of next Sunday's TRIBUNE and you'll find the fourth group of ten girls of Chicagoland who will receive their awards next week. Each is an entrant in the contest sponsored by sixteen newspapers in cooperation with A Century of Progress officials to select a Queen of the Fair and her court.

While they're waiting for the final photographs, to be submitted before April 15, the officials of the event are distributing $1,000 each Sunday for ten weeks to the girls they deem most charming of the early entries.

Sixty More $100 Prizes.

All that these girls have to do to win their prizes is to submit their pictures. There are sixty more of these $100 awards to be distributed.

If you haven't mailed in either your own photograph or that of your most attractive feminine relative or friend today is the best possible time to acquire representation in the flood of photographs reaching the contest headquarters daily. Only married women and girls with stage experience or artists' models are barred from competition.

Beauty is not the criterion. Feminine charm is the quality sought by the judges, whose names alone insure an event conducted on a plane far above that of the typical bathing beauty rivalry. It is the task of the jury named by THE TRIBUNE to select fifty-one of the photographs entered. This large group of girls whose pictures are chosen will be assembled in Chicago at the expense of THE TRIBUNE, and from them will be picked three fortunate girls.

Queen to Receive $5,000.

A check for $5,000, the title of sovereign of the Century of Progress, a wardrobe especially created for her, a suite at one of the best hotels, and a series of entertainments are awaiting the one girl who captures the fancy of a majority of the judges. The two rated next will receive checks for $3,000 and $2,000 respectively for second and third place, and they also will share in the festivities.

All eight of the judges are men and women of note and of discriminating taste. They include Mrs. Pauline Palmer, internationally known portrait painter; Mrs. Howard Ellis, also an artist of reputation; John T. McCutcheon, the cartoonist; Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Mrs. R. R. McCormick, Mrs. William H. Mitchell, and Wallace Kirk, each a patron of the arts and connoisseurs of personality and charm.

If your picture is entered it may be printed on Sunday. Don't miss your chance. Mail your photograph now.

GAS ATTORNEYS DEFEND RATES BEFORE I. C. C.

Attorneys for the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company yesterday began the presentation of arguments before the Illinois commerce commission in defense of the present rates charged the public. Their discussion consisted of an outline of the factors which led to the introduction of natural gas in the Chicago territory, with values and costs.

The city of Chicago, as petitioner for a reduction in the present charge, will present its arguments upon the conclusion of the utility lawyers' summation. No decision will be rendered, Chairman Benjamin F. Lindheimer said, until after other arguments are made concerning the gas rates of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois. A petition by a voluntary organization to be permitted to intervene was received over the objections of the city attorneys, but a ruling on their point was withheld.

CONGRESSMAN FALLS TO DEATH FROM HIS HOTEL

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Godfrey G. Goodwin, representative in congress from the 10th Minnesota district, was killed today when he fell from a window of his room on the fifth floor of the Driscoll hotel, near the Capitol. He was 60 years old.

After Dr. George W. Calver had testified that Mr. Goodwin had been under treatment for attacks of vertigo, a coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death. It was also testified that he had become ill in his office yesterday.

Representative Goodwin was to retire from congress on March 4. He was defeated for renomination in the Republican primaries in his district last summer.

Bandit Hides to Keep Boy from Identifying Him

Two robbers were holding up Miss Katherine Kile, 6200 Kenwood avenue, last night in her bookshop and subpostal station at 6736 Stony Island avenue when Michael Towohill, 1519 East 69th street, messenger boy for a nearby drug store, entered. "Don't let that boy see me," shouted one of the bandits to his companion, as he hid behind a counter, "he knows me." The other robber pulled Towohill's cap over his eyes. The pair then looted the postal cash box of $175 and escaped.

ADMITS HURLING GIRL TO DEATH FROM BRIDGE

Body Found on Ice of Rock River.

Moline, Ill., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—State's Attorney Francis King today announced that Maurice Meyer, 25, has confessed that he bound and gagged Miss Rose Gendler of Rock Island, a clerk in a Davenport, Ia., department store, and dropped her body from the Moline bridge across Rock river on the night of Dec. 21. Miss Gendler's body was found on the ice the next day.

According to Meyer Miss Gendler called Meyer and asked him to take her home. Meyer said he told her he was not feeling well and was going home.

Later he said he saw Miss Gendler on a street car. When she stepped from the car Meyer picked her up in his truck. Meyer said the girl told him she wanted to see a picture he had in his cleaning shop in Moline.

They drove the truck to the rear of the plant and he entered the shop to get the picture. Returning he told of finding the girl unconscious on the ground, where she apparently had slipped on the ice and fell, striking her head against the building.

"I tried to revive her, but failed," Meyer said.

"I became panicky and frightened, so I bound and gagged her and carried her to the truck and drove to the bridge, where I threw the body into the river ice below."

DE VALERA ACTS TO CURB WHITE ARMY OPPOSITION

BY HUGH CURRAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Feb. 16.—President Eamon de Valera today indicated he would suppress or curb drastically activities of the Army Comrades' association, commonly known as the "white army." The association was organized by Dr. Thomas F. O'Higgins as a military adjunct of Cumann na nGaedheal, government opposition party.

The move toward suppression of the association came in the form of a statement by De Valera in the Irish press that marches in uniform or public military exercises by unauthorized bodies will not be tolerated. It was specifically stated that usurpation of police functions by the Army Comrades' association would be prohibited. The association was a constant menace to peace in the recent elections, it was charged.

Army Claims Success.

In a statement issued yesterday the army indicated its activities are to be increased and that it is to become a disciplined body acting under officers with distinctive badges and uniforms for parades and formal occasions.

"The army will stand against the communist menace and maintain a true national outlook against sectionalism in public life," the communique asserted.

Commander Cronin, general secretary of the Comrades, denied today that the army has usurped police powers and said it has no intention of doing so.

Defends Comrades.

"Any acts of rowdyism during the elections were the work of the Irish republican army," Cronin asserted. "I do not think the president or any one else has the right to interfere in the perfectly legal demonstrations of a constitutionally organized body like ours.

"The Comrades have not indulged in illegal drilling, midnight terrorism, or other acts which the present government has found convenient to disregard when carried out by its own supporters, the new Irish republican army."

New Irish Group Formed.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Feb. 16.—(AP)—A newly launched "Irish Unity association" appealed tonight to the "white army" to join it in a constitutionally directed move for a "free united Ireland" of both north and south counties. The appeal said every member of the new organization must pledge himself not to carry firearms.

ROB ROGERS PARK OIL STATION.

New York, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Douglas Robinson, sister of the late President Theodore Roosevelt and an aunt of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, was reported recovering from pneumonia at her East 61st street home today. She is 71. Mrs. Robinson became ill five days ago. She long has been identified with civic and patriot organizations.

SEIZE HARTZELL AS SHIP DOCKS; FRAUD CHARGED

New York, Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Oscar Merrill Hartzell, former Iowa farmer deported from England as an undesirable alien, after he is alleged to have collected about $300,000 from gullible Americans who hoped to get a share in the fabulous estate of Sir Francis Drake, was arrested today on a charge of using the mails to defraud as he arrived on the liner Champlain.

Hartzell will be arraigned on charges of mail fraud and conspiracy. Plans have been made to prosecute him in Iowa.

According to postomce inspectors, Hartzell got donations from about 10,000 persons in the middle west, New York, and Pennsylvania. He told them, it is charged, that when the Drake estate was cleared up they would be paid $1,000 for each $1 invested.

Hartzell professed to have acquired the rights of the "legal heir" of the estate of Sir Francis, who died 339 years ago, the inspectors say. The extent of the estate he estimated at 22 billion 500 million dollars, and he declared he had interviewed King George on the subject.

BLACKHAWKS BEAT BRUINS, 2-1; ONLY TWO PENALTIES

COULTER MAKES WINNING GOAL IN SOLO RUSH

Victory Brightens Playoff Hopes.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The Blackhawks, inspired by the desperation that moves a drowning man to clutch at a straw, last night wrested a 2 to 1 victory over the Boston Bruins at the Stadium in one of the most important games of the National Hockey league. It was a vital victory to the Hawks, for it enabled them to cling to whatever slim chance remains for them to enter the Stanley cup playoffs.

The decision last night also cut the Bruins' advantage over the Hawks to five points. Had the Bruins won they would have tied the Detroit Red Wings for the lead in the American division of the league.

Coulter Breaks Tie.

The Hawk fans among the crowd of 7,000 found their heroes in Donnie McFadyen and Art Coulter, particularly the latter. Donnie opened the scoring in the second period by slipping one in on a pass from Roger Jenkins. In the same session, with less than two minutes to go, Marty Barry tied the score for Boston after Eddie Shore had toted the puck up the ice and passed to him. With five minutes of the game remaining, and the Blackhawks failing to get anywhere with Goalie Tiny Thompson, Coulter, a reformed wing now playing defense, strong armed his way the length of the ice and shot the puck home for the winning goal.

The amazing feature of the evening, considering the rivalry between the Hawks and Bruins, was that not a penalty was served until after 56 minutes of play. Shore was the first tenant, although why he was sent off is still a mystery, since he committed no apparent misdemeanor. A few minutes later Mush March was jailed on a holding charge.

The first ten minutes, while unprofitable as to scoring, produced some of the most spirited hockey of the season. Gardiner was kept busy warding off assaults of the Bruin sharpshooters who were constantly sifting through the Blackhawk defense. On the other hand, Shore and Alec Smith were turning back the Chicago wings time and again.

Can't Rile Shore.

The proceedings in the second period were as feverish as the opening session, but strangely enough nary a penalty had been called with more than half of the period over. Nevertheless the boys had been making faces and gestures at each other of such a nature as to promise a couple of impromptu bouts. The Hawks had been pushing Shore around considerably, but failed to rile Edward a bit.

The Blackhawk partisans went into delirium after seven minutes and thirty-five seconds of play, when the Chicagoans scored the first goal of the game. The McFadyen-Jenkins-Mackenzie line had just come on for duty and proceeded to give Thompson a lot of business, which eventually was rewarded by the blinking of the red light back of him. Jenkins brought the puck over the Boston line and shoved it along to McFadyen, who was skating by the mouth of the cage. Donnie managed to squeeze the puck past Thompson just before Shore spilled him into the boards.

Barry's Goal Ties It.

The Bruins came back with a vengeance and it was Shore who produced the nucleus of the tying goal. Eddie dashed down the ice, passed to Barry, who shot from far out, but straight and hard enough to send the puck home. The time was 16:20.

The boys let down considerably during the first ten minutes of the third period; let down, that is, considering the pace at which they had been traveling. Both teams contented themselves with long shots.

The Thompson-Cook-Couture line came on with five minutes to play, and gave Thompson his most strenuous exercise of the night. Within less than a minute Tiny was forced to make five stops, two of them off the stick of his brother. When the forward line couldn't function it remained for Art Coulter to break down the ice all alone and score the second Hawk goal of the evening to break the tie. He beat Thompson in 15:35.

Red Wings Tie Maroons; Go Into 1st Place

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Detroit's Red Wings gained only a 2 to 2 tie in a wild overtime National Hockey league match with the Montreal Maroons here tonight, but the single point gained in the standings, coupled with the defeat of the New York Rangers by Toronto, sent them into first place alone in the American division.

The Wings scored early, Doug Young putting away a lone handed try, but Goalie John Ross Roach of the Wings let a floater by Conacher get past him, tying up the match.

TORONTO, 5; RANGERS, 2

New York, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs, leaders of the Canadian division of the National Hockey league, outplayed the New York Rangers to gain a 5 to 2 victory tonight in their final clash of the regular season.

The defeat cost the Rangers their half share in the American division lead, putting them a point behind the Detroit Red Wings. Harvey [Busher] Jackson scored three of the Toronto goals. Chabot turned back 47 Ranger shots.

CANADIENS, 6; OTTAWA, 0

OTTAWA, Ont, Feb. 16.—(AP)—The Montreal Canadiens uncorked a dazzling attack to win their National Hockey league game with the Ottawa Senators tonight, 6 to 0.

The victory sent the Canadiens into fourth place in the Canadian section and dropped the Senators into the cellar. Aurel Joliat, veteran wing, was the hero of the Canadien triumph, scoring three goals. Art Giroux scored twice.

STAGG'S FAMED ELECTRIC CAR TO GO TO MUSEUM

A. A. Stagg's famed electric automobile, a perambulating landmark of the Midway for more than a decade, will achieve immortality as an example of an era of locomotion, it was learned yesterday. The venerable vehicle, still in active service, will be turned over to the museum of science and industry in Jackson Park, at the request of museum officials, and will be on exhibit when the museum opens early this summer.

The present job, which has a graceful gondola and a liberal expanse of window, is not the original machine which "C" men bought for Stagg in 1919, when he was suffering with sciatica. Nevertheless, it has served on several occasions when recurrences of the disease were threatening, to trundle Mr. Stagg up and down the football practice field, as a rolling observation tower, and to ferry him home. The tradition of the original machine is preserved in that a number of its parts have been incorporated into the "new" one from time to time.

RECORD DASH BY METCALFE HELPS DEFEAT BADGERS

Madison, Wis., Feb. 16.—(AP)—Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette university's Olympic sprint star, set an annex record in the 40 yard dash here tonight as the Hilltop track team defeated Wisconsin, 48 to 38.

Metcalf ran the featured race in :04.3, clipping one-tenth of a second off the record set by A. Tormey in 1912 and duplicated by Harry McAndrews in 1925.

WHAT! NO PARK? CUBS, SOX HIT BY MIXUP ON COAST

San Bernardino Games Must Be Shifted.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 16.—There was much scurrying about in baseball circles here today, just one week before the arrival of the first squads of the Chicago Cubs and New York Giants. The exhibition schedules of the Cubs, Giants, Pirates, and the Chicago White Sox have been upset by the withdrawal of San Bernardino from the spring circuit the official boys had organized out here.

Eight games involving major league outfits, five of them featuring Chicago teams, had been scheduled at San Bernardino. They may not be played at all, but this had not been decided this afternoon. If the dates can be filled, a new schedule will be announced within a day or two, it was said.

Here Are Games Affected.

March 12—Sox vs. Los Angeles.
March 25 and 26—Cubs vs. Los Angeles.
April 1 and 2—Sox vs. Los Angeles.

San Bernardino was to have been the training camp of the Los Angeles Angels, ousted from their own premises by the Giants. The Angels, now without a camp, today announced that they would do some preliminary work at Sawtelle, on the outskirts of Los Angeles, then move in on the Cubs' plant at Catalina.

Early in the winter there had been some bidding between San Bernadino and Riverside, Cal., as to which would be host to the four major league teams in a calendar of eight games. When the San Bernardino fellows offered to build a new grandstand and clubhouse, they won the battle.

The Cubs and Giants are due to arrive one week from today. Los Angeles officials realized that it was about time for the promised structures to be finished. They journeyed over into the valley this morning to see that the last few shingles tacked on the grandstand, and they found that, alas, there hadn't been even a cornerstone ceremony.

Important in Training Program.

Then came the business of racing back to Los Angeles. The committee on arrangements did some balloting and it was announced that the games scheduled in San Bernardino will be played almost any place except San Bernardino.

Four of the five games involving Cubs and Sox had been arranged for dates late in the training program at a time when both teams will be bearing down. The Cubs were to have played the Angels on March 25 and 26 and the Sox were to have topped off their California stay with contests, also against the Angels, on April 1 and 2. Both series were week-end affairs, which increased the hope of filling the dates elsewhere on the coast.

Otherwise the baseball situation out here seems calm enough, considering the great excitement is so imminent. Folks don't talk so much about the last world series, being nice friendly people. There is great gurgling about George Stainback, rookie outfielder recently purchased by the Cubs for 1934 delivery, for a reported $75,000 and three ball players.

GRIMM MEETS VEECK

Plans for the getaway on Monday of the first party of Cubs for the spring training camp at Catalina island were completed yesterday by Manager Charley Grimm and President William Veeck at a conference in the office of the latter.

Veeck announced that another outfielder has been signed. He is Paul McCarren, who was retained by the Cubs when they sold the Albany International league club franchise. McCarren was one of the leading hitters on the club until he was forced out with an attack of influenza.

Veeck said the following players would be in the first squad leaving for Avalon: Gabby Hartnett, Woody English, Guy Bush, Pat Malone, Zack Taylor, Beryl Richmond, Leroy Herrmann, Roy Henshaw, Buck Newsom.

THERE'S MIGHT IN THAT RIGHT!

Bachman New Grid Coach at Michigan State

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Charles W. Bachman, up until the completion of the 1932 season head football coach at the University of Florida, was named today by the state board of agriculture as head coach at Michigan State college. He succeeds James H. Crowley, who left this week for Fordham university, New York, where he has accepted a three year contract.

The appointment of Bachman, like Crowley, a former Notre Dame star, to direct the football destinies of the Spartans was not unexpected. It had been conceded on the campus for more than a week that he would be the successful aspirant to the position. There was a hint, however, of a hitch in the anticipated procedure, judging by the long delay before the announcement was made by the board.

At one time during the five hour session it was declared that there would be no appointment before morning. Later, however, Ralph Young, director of athletics, was called into the session, and the announcement was soon forthcoming.

The selection of Bachman probably means, it was conceded, that Miles W. [Mike] Casteel, assistant back field coach and chief scout under Crowley and a veteran of the State coaching staff, will accept a position on the Fordham staff.

Harry Gill, Illinois Track Coach, to Take Long Leave

Corbett Amazes Friends; Leaves Bed for a Stroll

New York, Feb. 16.—(AP)—Only a shadow of the man who knocked out John L. Sullivan, but still a champion in courage, James J. Corbett today roused himself from a semi-coma in which he had lain for several hours and walked about his home.

Corbett, in his 67th year, has been seriously ill with a heart ailment since Jan. 31. Yesterday morning his condition became so alarming his physician resorted to stimulants to prolong his life and he had lain since in a half stupor, from which it had been difficult to arouse him to take food.

This afternoon, with friends momentarily expecting word of his death, Corbett awoke, climbed out of bed, and walked through the house. He was prevailed on to lie down again, but appeared none the worse for his unusual activity.

"You just can't predict what he will do," said his old friend and constant bedside companion, John Kellher. "You get ready to say 'Good bye Jim' and he says 'Hello John.'

"I never expected to see him rally from this heart attack. He was so still and white, hardly moving or talking. Then he seemed to wake up. He walked into Mrs. Corbett's room, spoke to her, walked around the house and finally went back to bed. He is lying there now, resting, cheerful."

Friends who have visited Corbett in the last few days report that his illness has taken heavy toll of his strength and weight. He now weighs about 140 pounds.

Elmhurst College Five Defeats Wheaton, 45-41

Elmhurst college basketball team defeated Wheaton college last night, 45 to 41. Elmhurst led at the half, 18 to 14. Wheaton came from behind during the second half to tie the score at 41 with only two minutes left to play, but Elmhurst scored twice in the closing minute of play.

Waves to a Pal, Discovers Mistake After Eight Count

BY ARCH WARD.

Stanley Willert, 126 pound novice with a Herb Pennock windup and a Notre Dame shift, provided the comedy in the opening round of the far south side Golden Glove trials at the Roseland State theater last night. Willert is a southpaw, and he swings from the floor after fancy foot maneuvers. He was getting along fairly well with his opponent, Jack Kramer, until he paused momentarily in the second round to wave to a pal in the front row. He arose at the count of eight, but the knockdown was the deciding factor in Kramer's victory.

Among the 135 pound novice winners was James Allan, who was born in Scotland. Last night was his first public appearance as a boxer. The brilliant lights and the big crowd made him turn pale as he crawled through the ropes, but he wasn't long becoming acclimated. He stopped a hard puncher from Trafton's gymnasium named Alfred Oskilaneo in the second round. Referee Joe McNamara halted the contest when Oskilaneo received a cut over his right eye.

There will be approximately 35 bouts on tonight's card at the State theater in Roseland. The program opens at 7 o'clock and the admission is 60 cents.

Jerry Mulcahy, who whipped Walter Bukowski to reach the feather weight novice semi-finals, has been captain of the Tilden High school boxing team for two years.

Leo Rodak, captain of the 1932 Golden Gloves team, qualified for the Tournament of Champions without lifting a glove. He was entered in the 126 pound open division and was the only featherweight who showed up to fight.

Walter Palm of the Swedish-American A. C. and Otto Fischel of St. Patrick of South Chicago qualified for the Tournament of Champions at Chicago Stadium without fighting in the far south side trials. They were the only middleweights in the open division who passed the physical examination.

LOYOLA BEATEN, 30-20, BY MICHIGAN NORMAL QUINTET

Michigan Normal college defeated the Loyola university basketball team at the Loyola gymnasium last night, 30 to 20. It was Normal's second victory of the season over the Ramblers.

Loyola staged an uphill fight in the first half, but was held to a single goal in the second period by a stubborn man to man defense. Cavanaugh's free throw and Silvestri's field goal in the first five minutes gave Loyola its only lead of the game. Normal swept into the lead a minute later by scoring four goals in rapid order and was never headed thereafter.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Golden Gloves boxers fought last night in Roseland for the first time in the six years the tournament has been conducted in Chicago. One hundred and ten boys reported for the qualifying trials. Tonight at the State theater, 110th place and Michigan avenue two boys in each weight class and in both the open and novice division will qualify for the Tournament of Champions.

The ring was pitched on the theater stage. The main floor and balcony were comfortably filled.

70 Per Cent Report.

The heaviest percentage of contestants in the history of Golden Gloves contests reported for the first of two nights' competition. Nearly 70 per cent of the young men who registered appeared in fighting togs.

The bouts were received as enthusiastically as they were on the west side of the city. Most of the competition was in the novice division.

One of the best matches of the evening was the scrap between Ray Vackern, St. Christina, and Jule Sandraco, South End Chamber of Commerce. The boys are welterweights and in the open division. Ray had the best of the fighting in the first round but Sandraco came back strongly in the second. Both countered accurately and with force. In the final minute of the third round Vackern scored the winning points when his opponent tired.

Novices Whale Away.

There were plenty of good fights. Some were decided by the margin of a point. For the most part the novice boxers flailed at each other, missing more times than not. The number of knockouts, many of them technical, was due to the referees stopping the matches whenever they appeared one-sided. Frequently the boys wished to continue. All boxers, as usual, were examined before they went into the ring for their second round fights.

Boys from South Chicago, who formerly have fought at White City, competed in Roseland. S. S. Peter and Paul sent its team to the far south section. The South End Chamber of Commerce, Johnny Kopp's gym, and All Saints parish alumni had numerous entries.

Admission tonight again is 60 cents. No seats are reserved and those who buy their tickets at 6 o'clock will have their choice of front balcony or front row downstairs.

North Side Next.

Although many of the officials already had handled three nights of west side Golden Gloves bouts, they were on the job last night. From 4 o'clock, when the first boys reported, until the last fight more than six hours later, the work of examination, classification, and other details went on without a break.

The Golden Gloves program next Monday night switches to Loyola university, where 624 boys are entered. Two rings will be used for three nights. On Wednesday, while the qualifying finals at Loyola are being held, the south section will start at White City. There will be three nights

O'BRIEN POUNDS JONES TO DEFEAT IN TEN ROUNDS

Saltis Outslugs Moran; Dukelsky Wins.

Frankie O'Brien, Hartford, Conn. middleweight, beat Tom Jones of Chicago in a ten round bout at White City last night. O'Brien won the unanimous decision of the referee and two judges by taking the offensive from the fifth round and landing punches to Jones' head and body continuously.

Interest in the bout was kept alive by the Chicago Negro's periodic spurts. O'Brien hurt Jones with a series of blows in the sixth round. Jones came out for the seventh round with serious intent, but before the round had gone far O'Brien dropped him for no count. The colored fighter rallied in the eighth round and slowed up O'Brien with several hard rights. However, he was out on his feet when the bell ended the bout.

The crowd of less than 1,000 appeared to like best the six rounder between Jack Moran and Bud Saltis, Chicago middleweights. They slugged throughout and when Saltis was awarded the decision the fans booed.

Solly Dukelsky, west side middleweight, beat Dick Sisk of Brighton Park in five rounds. Other results were:

Joey Cohen beat Bill Reardon [4].
Johnny Terry beat Meyer Frager [4].
Al Bisignano and Steve Selcrat drew.

Ray Tramblie, Rockford, Ill., middleweight, and Young Stuhley of Kewanee, Ill., will meet in a six round bout tonight at the Cicero Stadium, 19th street and 52d avenue. The contest will be their second, Stuhley winning a 10 round decision over Ray on the south side last fall.

Kid Irish, Benld, Ill., featherweight, faces Joey Bozak of Blue Island in the six round semi-final. Irish will be seeking his fourth straight victory. Walter Jerz, stablemate of Irish, will make his first professional start against Tommy Kluth of the north side in a four rounder. Four other matches complete the program.

Johnny Coulon, former bantamweight champion, will present a professional card tonight at the Rainbo Fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue. Jackie Parker and Kid Pancho will clash in the six round windup. Other matches are: Art Mitchell vs. Sammy Morales [5], Johnny Fitzpatrick vs. Buddy Kernes [4] and Red Chinski vs. Paddy Walther [4].

Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois athletic commission, will be officially replaced by Joe Triner on March 1. At that time Gen. Clinnin will take office as a minority appointee on the state civil service commission.

The 24th Ward club will offer an amateur boxing show tonight at its clubrooms, 3242 Roosevelt road.

Two of the most unusual figures in sports will be seen in action on the wrestling card at the Rainbo Fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue, Monday night. In one of the double windup bouts will appear the huge Leon [Arms] Pinetzki, 6 foot 8 inch 282 pound Polish grappler, with a reach of 96 inches, and in another bout will be Sol Slagel, who weighs 257 pounds, yet who is only 5 feet 8 inches tall. Slagel of Hays, Kas., is a new comer to Chicago.

Slagel will clash with Cowboy Jack Ray, Chicago wrestler, who stands 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighs 230 pounds.

The Jim Londos-Joe Stecher heavyweight championship wrestling match announced tentatively on Tuesday is definitely on, Doc Krone, promoter, announced yesterday. The match will be held at the Chicago Stadium on March 3.

Along with his acceptance of the bout, Londos agreed to the hour and a half limit set by the Illinois athletic commission. Their previous match here was limited to one hour.

Steve Savage and Victor Soldat will meet in the third bout on the wrestling program Tuesday night at Kid Howard's gymnasium, 116 West Madison street. The card will be topped by a finish match between Johann Leskinovich and Bob Jackson of New York.

DE PAUL U. FIVE OUT FOR VICTORY NO. 10 TONIGHT

De Paul university basketball team will seek its tenth victory of the season tonight in a game with St. Viator at De Paul gymnasium. St. Viator was defeated by De Paul in an early meeting.

De Paul team has lost only one game and that by a point. Despite the loss of Capt. Tony Lauritis and Bill Shay by ineligibility last week, De Paul still has a strong team.

George Nichols Wins by Knockout in 2d Round

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 16.—(AP) George Nichols of Buffalo knocked out George Forrester of Elizabeth after two minutes and five seconds of fighting in the second round of a boxing match here tonight. Nichols weighed 167 and Forrester 168.

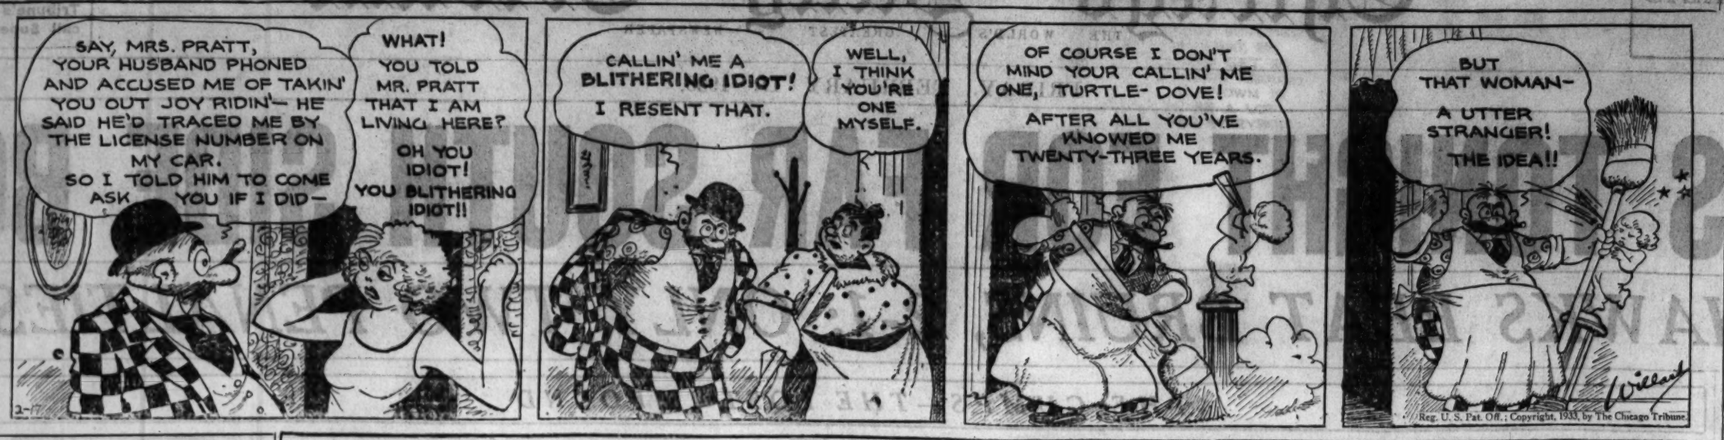
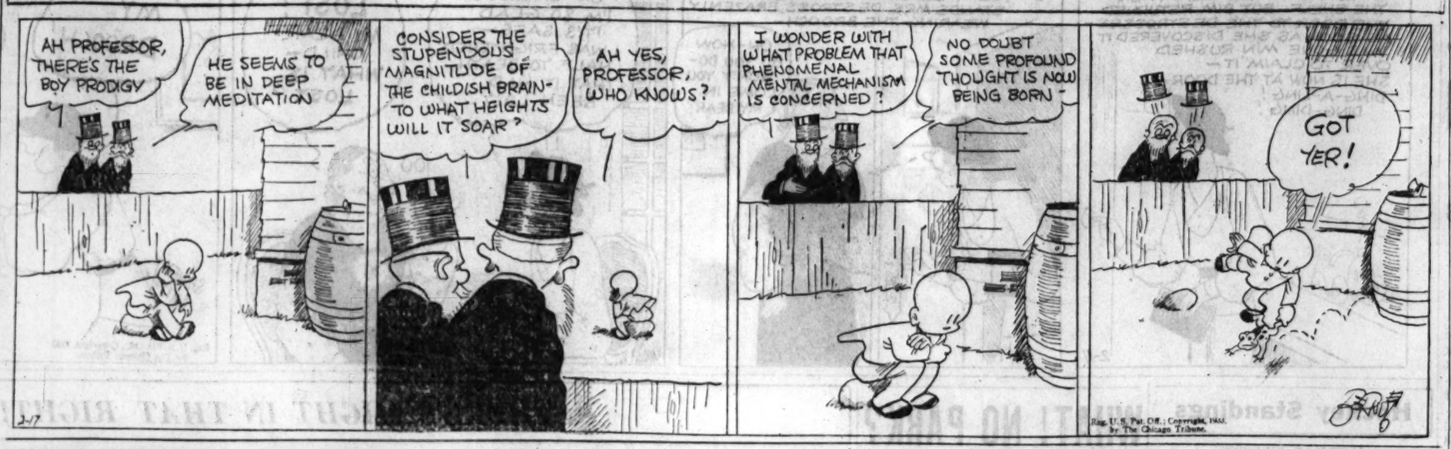
MOON MULLINS—GETTING A BIT FAMILIAR



SMITTY—THE MASTER MIND



GARDEN GOES ON WITH FIGHT PLANS DESPITE ATTACKS

New York, Feb. 16. — [Special.] — While a pall of sadness lay over the little town of Wrentham, Mass., where lay the body of Ernie Schaaf, heavyweight boxer who died Tuesday following a knockout by Primo Carnera, huge Italian, at Madison Square Garden Friday night, boxing in New York rallied today to defend itself against a series of attacks resulting from the fatal ending of the bout.

At Albany no fewer than three proposals to investigate and control the sport were under consideration by the lawmakers, while in New York City Madison Square Garden officials were going ahead with their plans for a heavyweight championship bout next June between Carnera and Jack Sharkey, despite the ban announced by the New York state athletic commission.

Wear to Replace Farley.

He is to fill the vacancy left on the state athletic commission when James A. Farley, chairman of that body, resigns on March 1 to become postmaster general.

Wear will assume the virtual dictatorship that big Jim Farley has enjoyed for the last several years. Wear is an executive who understands the business and, tempered by William Muldoon, should capably handle the reins that Farley laid down, it is said.

Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan will be chairman, but he has been amenable to the suggestions of the other members of the board, and it is believed will string along with Wear.

Formerly on License Committee.

The two are well acquainted, both having been members of the license committee, which was absorbed by the state shortly after it had backed up Farley by refusing to license Jack Dempsey seven years ago. Farley championed Ol' Har' Wills even to the extent of deflecting the first and $1,800,000 Dempsey-Tunney battle to Philadelphia.

February Not as Bad Outside as It's Painted

BY BOB BECKER.

The month of February frequently goes on the books as a month which brings zero weather here in the central states. But that is not the only way in which February manages to get a zero rating. To sportsmen this month is zero or even minus zero because of the comparatively few opportunities offered for outdoor diversion.

Seasons on game birds and animals have come and gone. It is still in a long haul until the opening of the trout season and mild weather. Some fishermen can go south to use their rods and lines and others can varnish their fishing rods and tie flies.

But outside of fishing through the ice, there isn't much that the angler can do to speed the days toward the spring fishing season.

It Has Its Good Points.

However, as barren as the month of February may seem to the average outdoor fan, it nevertheless does offer a few interesting diversions to the fellow who doesn't mind a little snow and cold winds. For example, here is just a partial list of things which the outdoorsman can do this month when he leaves the city and goes into the fields and woods of Chicagoland.

1. As long as there is snow, the game of tracks and tracking can prove of interest to any cross country hiker. In woods, fields, and along marshes one can play Sherlock Holmes and record a large number of birds and animals by their tracks in the snow. We have raccoons, weasels, foxes, mink, and other interesting small animals in Chicagoland which one may never see from year to year. But if there is snow we can at least see where these animals have been hunting food.

2. Making bird lists in February also is interesting. Any bird fan who doesn't know the starling will have an easier time identifying this species now than later on, when our summer birds arrive. One can look out for starlings, titmice, cardinals, juncos, jays, and other winter residents.

Ice Fishing Is an Idea.

3. Ice fishing is a possibility, dependent on weather. Illinois permits this sport for pickerel, crappies, perch, etc.

4. Regular trap and skeet shooting for the shotgun fans. Trap shooting clubs continue their fun right through the winter so shooters need not put up their guns.

ENGLAND BEATS AUSTRALIA FOR CRICKET HONORS

The victory was England's third in the five game series. Australia won only one match. Harold Larwood and Herbert Sutcliffe were the outstanding players for the English team, while Don Bradman starred for Australia. Bradman scored a century in the second test. ASSERTS SLUMP IS "BEST THING IN THIRTY YEARS"

Pioneer, Married 64 Yrs., Praises Simple Life.

The depression is the best thing that has happened to the country in more than 30 years, in the opinion of J. P. Lantz, 86 years old, of Oswego. Celebrating his 64th wedding anniversary yesterday with his wife, who is 83, Mr. Lantz smoked his pipe and talked of old times.

"I reckon folks were happier 65 or 70 years ago when I was a youngster," he said: "The farms were smaller, self-sustaining, and everybody was more independent. The taxes were about half what they are now and folks lived simply."

The Lantzes still make their own way by working in their small truck farm on the outskirts of Oswego, six miles south of Aurora. They look with suspicion on a great many new methods, make their own soap from waste fat and lye, smoke their own meat, and a trip to town once a month serves their needs.

Recalled from School to Plow.

"The roads are better and I sort of like the radio," Mr. Lantz said of modern life, "and I guess the kids need more schooling. I ran away from home to go to school when I was 9. Pa brought me back and gave me a plow. He said if I was old enough to go to school, I was old enough to work. I went off and on, though, until I was 19. The teacher asked me that year if it was my graduation year and I told her I allowed it was. I never did get to high school.

"We're getting back to the old days, though," he said. "The depression is teaching folks independence.

"Forty years ago I sold my corn for 16 cents, and it's 18 now. Wheat brought 62 cents then and its down to 45 right now."

Drives Oxen to Naperville.

Mr. Lantz said that his father used oxen in the farm work on the first Lantz farm near Wheatland. He recalled a trip to Naperville from Wheatland, a distance of 12 miles, several days before his wedding.

"It took me most of the day and night," he said. "Mud kept getting in the wagon spokes, and I was in a hurry to get home with my new cook stove."

He explained a two days' growth of beard with the remark that his son "hadn't been up to shave him." "But, pshaw," he added, "in the old days I used to let it grow all winter to keep me warm."

Mr. Lantz said that he believed that children nowadays are given to too much leisure, not taught to work, and allowed to "become soft." He was asked if he thought the newly adopted habit of smoking among women was injurious to their health.

New York, Feb. 16.—Bond prices broke sharply today as banks and individual investors sold for a liquid position. The average was depressed approximately to the low level of 1933 as prices declined from 1 to 4 points.

The market relinquished much of the ground so laboriously gained during the last two months. In place of the optimism manifest on every hand just a week ago, all bondholders, institutional and individual, are exceedingly timorous about the new commitments.

Rail Issues Hard Hit.

Railroad bonds suffered the sharpest losses today, owing principally to the fact that buying for the turn has been most substantial in such issues. Some selling was inspired by reports that the Frisco railroad has given up hope of a voluntary reorganization unless a change is soon forthcoming in the bankruptcy law.

United States governments were sold in greater volume as one dealer in the street increased his buying rate on bankers' acceptances, in reflection of the reduction in member bank excess reserves as a result of the withdrawal of deposits by interior banks. There was little evidence today of federal reserve buying of treasury note issues.

Foreign Issues Lower.

All domestic and foreign bond groups were under pressure. New York City traction bonds dropped heavily. In the foreign list Japanese obligations again were lower, despite reopening of the Tokio exchanges, while German bonds sold off after a period of liquidation on the London exchange.

Foremost losses in speculative rail bonds were in such issues as Chesapeake corporation 5s, Rock Island refunding 4s, Erie refunding 5s, New York Central refunding 5s, issues of Pennsylvania railroad, Southern Pacific, and others.

Prime rail issues to drop included Atchison general 4s, Long Island refunding 4s, Union Pacific 4s, and others.

The municipal bond market was subjected to the same liquidation as high grade corporation issues. Bonds of state of Michigan municipalities were relatively lower than other municipals.

Washington Gas Light.

I have been offered bonds of Washington Gas Light company. These are called refunding mortgage bonds, 5 per cent series, due 1958. Will you please tell me if they are suitable for a $2,000 investment?—Mrs. P. M. L.

Washington Gas Light company supplies gas to a population of 550,000 in the District of Columbia and neighboring vicinities in Maryland and Virginia. Volume of gas sold has increased every year for the 10 years through 1931. Sales for the 12 months to Sept. 30, 1932, indicate a continuation of the trend. Gross revenues increased with volume of sales through 1931. A slight decline in gross for the 12 months to Sept. 30, 1932, as compared with the previous 12 months, was evident, due to temporary discounts effective Aug. 1, 1932.

The small percentage of industrial business, in comparison to commercial and household business, has enabled the company to maintain a favorable volume of business in contrast to the general trend of other gas companies.

Gross revenues for the 12 months of Sept. 30, 1932, were $6,454,000 and net operating income available for interest and depreciation was $2,230,000. This was 2.70 times annual interest requirements of $825,000. Gross for the preceding 12 months was $6,492,000 and net operating income was $2,120,000.

Gross for 1931 was $5,971,000, against $5,660,000 for 1930, $5,536,000 for 1929, and $5,532,000 for 1928. Fixed charges were earned 2.41 times in 1931, 2.01 times in 1930, 2.06 times in 1929, 1.97 times in 1928, and 1.90 times in 1927.

Giving effect to the issuance of $8,500,000 5s, due 1958, in January, 1933, current assets on Sept. 30, 1932, were $2,866,000 and current liabilities were $1,824,000. Funded debt was $16,199,000.

The 5s, due 1958, are secured by a mortgage on all properties and on substantially all stocks and bonds of subsidiaries, subject to $7,699,000 prior liens and underlying bonds.

The bonds are considered sound.

Wardman Realty and Construction.

I hold a $500 bond of Wardman Realty and Construction company [6½ per cent] which defaulted. I deposited my bond. The plan now is to exchange it for five shares of common stock. This I do not want to do if there is any other way of realizing on the bond. What can I do?—Miss B. R. A.

The underwriter of the issue informed us that it is too late for you to withdraw from the reorganization plan. Your bond, together with bonds of other depositors, has already been tendered to the court as payment for the property pursuant to the reorganization plan. There is nothing you can do except to accept the common shares.

FARMER NEARS LOAN AID, BUT RAILROAD CAN'T

Plan to Help Frisco Feared Beaten.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Like so many of the farmers whose lands abut its tracks, the St. Louis-San Francisco railroad has been striving valiantly to win a moratorium on its heavy debts; but, unlike many of the farmers, the "Frisco" does not seem to be making headway.

Little hope is entertained in informed quarters that the plan for adjusting the capital structure of the Frisco can be consummated unless congress makes some revision in the bankruptcy laws facilitating voluntary corporate reorganization, it was learned yesterday.

The moratorium plan proposed last fall has not yet been officially abandoned, but it is believed that with lack of support for the plan by large institutional holders there is not much likelihood that sufficient assent will be received to insure its success. Chief among these big bondholders are several important eastern banks and insurance companies.

Foreclosure to Be Asked.

Meanwhile in St. Louis yesterday attorneys for trustees under a prior lien bond issue of the Frisco filed notice in the federal court of their intention to seek foreclosure on the property.

The Frisco was placed in receivership Nov. 1, 1932. At the same time a plan of financial readjustment was declared operative. The idea back of this plan was that current income of the railroad was abnormally low and represented the minimum level and that income could be expected to rise to a normal level within ten years.

The readjustment plan provides for deferring cash interest payments for five years from July 1, 1932, on the prior lien and consolidated mortgage bonds. In lieu of cash payments interest certificates would be issued, part fixed and part contingent.

Other provisions include a capital stock revision with a stock bonus to bondholders to compensate for interest concessions.

The reorganization committee is still accepting deposits and some 70 per cent of the affected security holders are reported to have indicated assent to the proposed readjustment. The time for deposit has been extended from Feb. 15 to March 31.

Doubt Success of Plan.

In banking circles, however, it is believed that a voluntary reorganization plan of this kind can hardly be consummated under existing laws unless about 85 per cent of the affected security holders consent to its terms. Under the present circumstances there is little likelihood that an additional 15 per cent of deposited bonds can be obtained.

From New York comes word that a group of institutional holders of Frisco bonds have not only ignored the proposed voluntary readjustment plan but in certain cases have advised their clients against depositing. This group is reported to include New York Life Insurance company, First National Bank of New York, Mutual Life Insurance company, and Equitable Life Assurance society.

Of this group the First National Bank of New York is understood to have exhibited the greatest opposition to the moratorium plan proposed by the road. From the beginning, it is said, the bank has predicted that the plan could not be consummated and has, accordingly, favored more drastic procedure.

Opposition to the institutional holders is said to be based on their belief that income of the road over the five year period would not reach the amount estimated by proponents of the plan.

Charge Mortgage Defaulted.

The notice filed in federal court in St. Louis yesterday by the attorneys for trustees stated that under the prior lien mortgage there are outstanding $182,445,500 in bonds, of which $17,851,000 will mature in 1936 and the remainder in 1950. The notice stated that the railroad defaulted under the mortgage when James A. Kurn, former president of the Frisco, and John G. Lonsdale, St. Louis banker, were appointed receivers a few months ago and that the bondholders desire to enforce their rights.

The trustees are Central Hanover Bank and Trust company, New York, and Daniel K. Catlin of St. Louis.

Receivers did on Dec. 1, 1932, fail to pay interest due on the company's series B consolidated 6s and a month later prior lien series A and B bonds were in default. The Frisco up to Dec. 1 had borrowed a total of about nine millions from the Reconstruction Finance corporation and the Railroad Credit corporation.

Reading Company Earns More in 1932 than in 1931

New York, Feb. 16.—(AP)- The Reading company, operating the railroad of the same name, had net income of $4,228,789 last year, equal to $1.02 a common share, compared with $3,214,928, or 37 cents a share, in 1931.

Most Money in People's Hands in U.S. History

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—Foreign gold withdrawals and an increase in money in circulation, which broke through to a new all time record, forced the federal reserve banks last week to continue their repurchase of government securities.

For the second week in succession the reserve banks bought bonds in the open market in an effort to fight off the effect of gold and money movements on the reserves of member banks, but despite the banks' efforts the reserves dropped $183,000,000 last week, the federal reserve board announced.

The $25,000,000 worth of government securities which the reserve banks bought last week forced their total holdings back up to $1,809,000,000. American gold stocks, suffering a loss of $24,000,000 during the week, dropped to $4,511,000,000.

Gold reserves of the reserve system fell $46,966,000 in the week covered by the report or about $23,000,000 more than the monetary gold stocks of the country declined. The larger drop in the system's gold reserves was interpreted as an indication that there had been an increased domestic demand for gold during the week.

Money in Circulation Rises.

Activated by bank disturbances as well as by the normal seasonal trend, total money in circulation set the highest record in history last week, according to the federal reserve board. It advanced $149,000,000 during the week and reached $5,854,000,000. The previous all time high was $5,775,000,000, established in the week ended July 6, 1932.

Of the $149,000,000 rise in circulation, $117,953,000 was met by a rise of federal reserve notes in use. Deposit liabilities of the reserve banks fell $123,907,000, reflecting the drop in member bank reserve balances. The ratio of the system's reserves to its note and deposit liabilities combined went down to 64.3 per cent against 65.3 per cent last week.

Both the gold shipped abroad and the additional money demanded for circulation had to come largely out of the reserves of the member banks. Pledged to a policy of keeping the reserves up, the reserve banks are attempting to nullify the gold and money movements.

On Jan. 4, after carrying $1,851,000,000 worth of governments, the largest amount in their history since Aug. 10, the reserve banks began selling the securities. For three weeks the selling continued and amounted to $88,000,000 before the gold and money trends forced first a cessation and then a reversal of the selling.

Detroit Situation Has Effect.

The statements of the Federal Reserve bank of New York and of local reporting member banks reflected strikingly the repercussions of the Detroit situation. The net demand deposits of New York City reporting member banks were drawn down $172,000,000, their deposits from out of town banks being reduced $119,000,000. Reflecting the transfer out of town of these funds and of the currency sent to commercial customers in Detroit, the gold reserves of the Federal Reserve bank were reduced $126,205,000. The transfer of funds out of town was reflected in the New York Reserve bank's gold holdings because such shifts are settled through the gold settlement fund in Washington.

In connection with the withdrawal of deposits by out of town banks and commercial customers the reporting member banks in New York City sustained a fall of $149,000,000 in their reserve balances, leaving the excess of reserves over requirements only $29,000,000 against $155,000,000 last week and over $350,000,000 several weeks ago.

Despite the demands made upon them, the local reporting member banks showed a net rise of $5,000,000 in their total loans and investments, loans being up $67,000,000 and investments down $62,000,000.

Loans to brokers and dealers held by New York federal reserve member banks for the week ending Feb. 15 were announced by the federal reserve board as $427,000,000, an increase of $5,000,000 from the preceding week.

CARDINAL HELPS MUNDELEIN BANK TO REORGANIZE

Through the efforts of George Cardinal Mundelein a reorganization of the Mundelein (Ill.) State bank, until recently controlled by Samuel Insull, has been effected, it was revealed yesterday.

John Wirtz, cashier of the bank in the new management, said that 367 shares of the bank's 500 shares of capital stock, formerly held by Insull, have been sold to residents of Mundelein. The shares owned by Mr. Insull were given by him to Cardinal Mundelein, Mr. Wirtz said. Mr. Insull received nothing for the shares and the money realized on their sale represents new capital for the bank.

WALL ST. GETS JITTERS AGAIN; STOCKS RELAPSE

Selling Rules Until Belated Rally.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 16.—Further selling came into the stock market today. Net losses of from a fraction to about two points resulted. Word that plans were in the making for lifting Michigan out of the enforced bank closing mire had a somewhat reassuring effect.

The fact that prices opened lower today made it look like the market had been artificially supported yesterday and this was not reassuring to sentiment. Selling went on rather steadily in every department of the list and until late in the afternoon, when an effort to start a rally brought about mild recoveries, price trends were persistently downward. Volume was substantially heavier at nearly 1,100,000 shares.

Railroad shares bore the brunt of the selling in the earlier hours of trading and the group as a whole registered about the sharpest dip of any department.

Doubt Over Rail Payments.

Uncertainty over some nearby maturities, including those of Frisco and at least one other road of importance, was the particular sore spot in the rail situation.

Various individual weak spots attracted attention. Texas Gulf Sulphur dropped some 5 points on the surprise announcement of its dividend halving —from $2 to $1—to a new low for the year. Selling in the issue was particularly heavy in the early dealings.

Corn Products was under fire from the bear side, due supposedly to the corporation's large holdings of railroad securities.

Preferred Issues Weak.

Preferred shares made a poor showing generally, those of Brooklyn-Manhattan, Bamberger, Firestone, Colgate-Palmolive, and Engineers' Public Service giving up anywhere from 2 to 6 points.

Farm shares were heavy despite the firmness in wheat and the afternoon recovery of cotton.

Overnight news of the Willys-Overland receivership had an unsettling effect on the motor shares in the forenoon, but the group braced up in encouraging fashion toward the last.

There was evidence of considerable support for such leaders as United States Steel, American Telephone, General Motors, and the like.

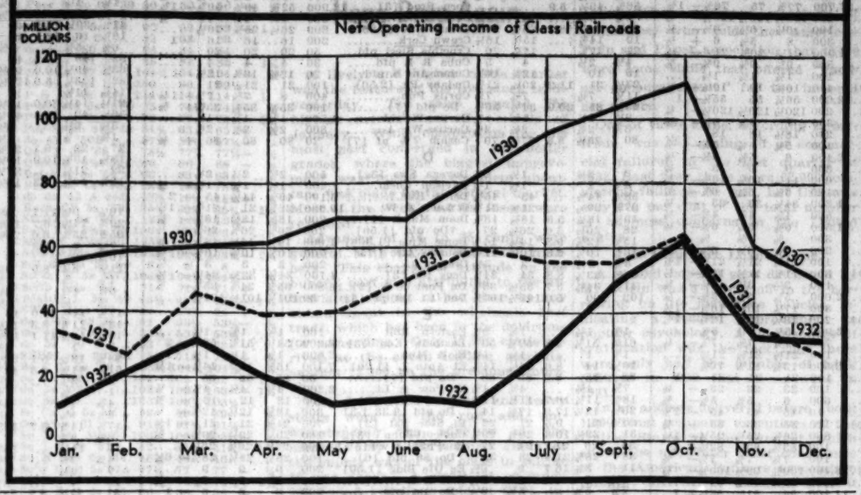
Net Operating Income of Railroads for Three Years Compared



Reveal Insull Firm Dividend Over Earnings

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 16.—[Special.]—Public Service Trust—an Insull company controlled jointly by Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and Corporation Securities company, both of which are in receivership, gave notes in lieu of cash for dividends declared in 1930 and these notes were unpaid when the parent companies went bankrupt, the federal trade commission was told today at its examination of defunct Insull companies.

Carl Depue, examiner for the commission, testified that various items were erroneously included by the company as income and the disallowance of these items would show earnings to be less than dividends paid.

Reported as Income.

Assets of the Public Service Trust, at receivership of its parent companies in April, 1932, were estimated by the auditors for the receivers at $4,500,000 less than the liabilities, approximating $5,500,000, he said.

The examiner asserted that the market value of stock dividends and the entire proceeds from sales of stock rights received in connection with securities owned were reported as income, although the Supreme court has held that stock dividends do not constitute income to the recipient, and only the profit derived from the sale of rights is income.

Dividends Exceed True Surplus.

Disallowing the inclusions of these items, the examiner testified, the income of Public Service Trust, from Jan. 1, 1930, to date of receivership, was overstated by $638,332, representing items erroneously included as income.

Mr. Depue told the commission that the company's true earned surplus was insufficient to cover the dividends paid by it with cash or notes during 1930, and he showed that in this year the true surplus was $438,403, while dividends paid aggregated $466,015.

He testified that the company gave notes for dividends declared in 1930 to the amount of $347,765 and that these notes were given Insull Utility Investments, Inc., in lieu of cash and were unpaid at date of receivership.

Amounts owed included $1,790,000 to the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, $1,250,000 to the Peabody Coal company, and $1,522,856 to Insull Utilities Investments, Inc.

Loans advanced to individuals and others, he said, totaled $1,286,909, plus interest of $44,904. All but one of these loans were covered by notes, the exception being an advance of $3,527 to Middle West Utilities company carried as an open account against Ida T. Jorgenson.

Unsecured notes totaled $409,823 Mr. Depue stated, and included $123,000 to Chicago Civic Opera company, $255,000 to the Lake County Land association, and $25,746 to the Wilkinson Process Rubber Sales corporation.

There were also loans to K. L. Ames Jr. aggregating $500,000, which were secured by notes and the stock of the Chicago Post Publishing corporation.

FORD, 'FORCED TO CUT PAY,' STILL BELIEVES IN HIGH WAGE SCALE

New York, Feb. 16.—Henry Ford still believes in high wages and that they must be raised swiftly when business volume picks up, he says in an interview with the editor of the Business Week.

Mr. Ford talked of labor and motor cars, chiefly of wages as the ultimate measure of the consumer market.

"Where else can you sell cars—or anything else—except to wage earners?" he asked. "There aren't enough people of any other kind to support any industry."

He said that he had been forced to lower wages in his own plants, but he was emphatic that the cuts are temporary.

"I've never changed my ideas about wages in the least," he said. "Of course in these times with everything so paralyzed, we finally did have to do something about it, but all we did was make an adjustment that recognized in part the increased value of the dollar. . . . I believe in efficient, well paid men, not in a lot of poorly paid men."

He said he didn't think highly of the spread work idea, that it won't work and "you just have everybody poor under that plan." He believes industry must decentralize further, scatter from huge factories to small units in towns and villages where workers can have a bit of ground and "assurance of sustenence."

He doesn't believe efforts to unionize the automotive industry will succeed and considers that "unions aren't organized by the men, but by groups that want to use the men."

Int. Harvester, Other Firms Cut Dividends

Directors of the International Harvester company yesterday declared a dividend of 15 cents a share on the common stock. Three months ago the company paid 30 cents a share. A total of $1.82½ cents was paid on the stock last year. The old $3.50 annual rate was abandoned in the first quarter of last year. The current dividend will be distributed April 15 to stockholders of record March 20.

Other dividend reductions were announced yesterday by corporations in various lines of industry.

The Southern Colorado Power company placed its preferred stock on a $5 annual basis by the declaration of a quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share, compared with the regular rate of $7.

The American Laundry Machine company voted to pay a 10 cents dividend on its common stock, compared with its previous rate of 30 cents.

The rate on the capital stock of Texas Gulf Sulphur company was halved by directors. A dividend of 25 cents a share, payable March 15 to stock of record March 1, was declared. Stockholders received 50 cents in the last quarter.

The usual quarterly dividends on the $5 preferred and the $6 preferred shares of Electric Bond and Share company were authorized by directors to be paid May 1 to stock of record April 6.

Reserve Acts to Insure Banks Plenty of Cash

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 16.—A threatened money market squeeze, growing out of the repercussions of the Detroit banking situation, was warded off today by the prompt action of the New York federal reserve bank in pumping federal funds into the market through purchasing United States government securities and reducing its buying rate on bankers' acceptances to about the current market level at one-half of 1 per cent.

The cut in the reserve bank's bill buying rate, which came just in time to avert a general advance in open market discounts, was the first change since June 24, when a buying rate of 1 per cent was established. It meant that for the first time in many months member banks and bill dealers were given assurance that, in a pinch, they could "melt down" their bills at the federal reserve without taking a loss on them. The current open market bill rates are one-half of 1 per cent bid, three-eighths of 1 per cent asked.

Excess Reserves Decline.

The hardening of the money market under the influence of withdrawals of out of town bank and commercial deposits was indicated chiefly in the market for federal reserve funds, that is, balances at the reserve bank available for use as member bank reserves. For some time local member banks have had large excess reserves, but in the last few weeks they have been whittled down. On Wednesday they amounted to only $29,000,000 and by today they would have disappeared entirely but for the action of the reserve bank.

Banks with large excess reserves frequently "sell" a part of their balances to other member banks which are under in their reserves, making a charge for the service.

Until lately what little business was being done in federal funds was at the rate of one-eighth of 1 per cent, but earlier in the week the rate firmed up to one-quarter and three-eighths of 1 per cent. Today it advanced to three-quarters of 1 per cent, and several large banks, which have had a large "overage" until recently.

Reserve Action Averts Rise.

In the bill market large offerings of acceptances have been encountered. The discount rate, which had been at the record low of three-eighths of 1 per cent bid, one-quarter of 1 per cent asked, in the latter part of January and early this month, was raised one-eighth of 1 per cent above this level a week ago when dealers began to meet with increased offerings. Today one or two dealers advanced rates another one-eighth of 1 per cent, but a general rise was averted by the action of the reserve bank.

CHICAGO RATES RAISED.

Rates on bankers' acceptances were increased one-eighth of 1 per cent by Chicago banks yesterday. The increase affects all maturities.

CHARGES RAILS PUT IN CHAINS BY POLITICIANS

Traffic Chief Cites "Silly Laws."

America is suffering "from the poison of the professional politician," asserted E. A. Jack, general traffic manager of the Aluminum Company of America as he sought to diagnose the nation's troubles. Mr. Jack spoke before the Traffic club at the Palmer house yesterday.

"For years," Mr. Jack said, "we have been yielding ourselves to an insidious poison. We have no leadership because we are developing rapidly into a nation of nonthinking, slogan swallowing, ease loving selfcentered peoples. One wonders if our national anthem should not be changed to 'Please Go Way and Let Me Sleep' or 'How Dry I Am.'"

Concerning the railroads, Mr. Jack said:

"Everyone knows that the motor truck is not as economically efficient as the railroad but it is thriving on the rates the railroads have been forced to charge because of the tape worms we have foisted on them through silly legislation. But so completely are we hypnotized by the professional politician that the only remedy we can think of is to pass more 'damfool' laws."

Rails in Straight Jackets.

Mr. Jack said that the country passes laws which create an interstate commerce commission which "digs in, builds up its machine, substitutes its largely empirical ipse dixits for economies and puts the railroads in straight jackets." In addition the country accepts other political expedients which, together with the interstate commerce commission "run up the cost of operating the railroads to such a degree that their economic efficiency is destroyed, and the very modes of transportation which the railroads superseded are now coming back."

Saying that bureaucracy is the champion thought killer and leadership extermination, Mr. Jack said the crying need in the transportation field today is leadership.

Some traffic men, recognizing the fact that it is the bureaucracy made rates that are at the root of truck competition, are trying to meet the situation in a logical way by making

4¾% Revenue Bills

Due December 14, 1933

These Revenue Bills represent a direct and unconditional obligation of the City of New York. They are being issued to finance the current requirements of the City in anticipation of the collection of taxes. Real estate taxes for the first half of each fiscal year become payable to the City in May, while taxes for the second half year are collectible in November.

Exempt from all Federal Income Taxes

Tax Free in the State of New York

The Government of the City of New York has instituted a program of economy which has not only ensured a substantial reduction in 1933 tax bills, but has, moreover, greatly strengthened the fiscal position of the City. These important achievements already stand to the credit of the City Government:

1. The budget for 1932 authorized expenditures of $631,366,297. The revised budget for 1933 has been cut down to $518,427,972; a reduction of $112,938,325, or 17.9%.
2. In 1932, the basic tax rate on each $100 of assessed valuation was $2.59. The Department of Taxes and Assessments has estimated that the basic rate for 1933 will be approximately $2.40 per $100, indicating a reduction of 7.33%, notwithstanding the fact that the assessed valuation of real property has been reduced from $19,616,934,929 for 1932 to $18,463,010,858 for 1933, a reduction of $1,153,924,071, or 5.88%.

The fiscal policy evidenced by these budget and assessment figures for 1933 has received immediate and impressive recognition in the response made by leading institutions and private investors to this offering of Revenue Bills.

WHEAT RALLIES AT CLOSE AFTER STEADY SESSION

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat market showed a decided disposition to break away from the action of the stock market yesterday. At no time were prices more than a fraction below the finish of the previous day, and it took but relatively little buying to bring about a rally of ⅛ to ⅝ cents from the inside figures and make the close at the top. Net gains were ⅛ to ⅜ cents for the day, which the trade regarded as an excellent showing in view of the depressing news. May closed at 47⅝ to 47¾ cents; July, 48⅜ to 48⅝ cents, and September, 49⅛ cents.

What surprised the trade was the manner in which the persistent selling of May wheat, generally attributed to either the farm board or hedging sales against cash grain turned over to mills by the Red Cross, was absorbed.

Winnipeg Leads Advance.

Strength in Winnipeg had considerable influence on local sentiment. Near exhaustion of native supplies of wheat in Europe was indicated in cables, and this view received partial confirmation during the day in the way of an aggressive foreign demand for Canadian cash wheat. Sales were estimated at 1,250,000 to 1,500,000 bushels, largely via Vancouver, and included a full cargo to the orient. In the last few days it is estimated around 4,000,000 bushels have been sold in all positions. Removal of hedges against the sales abroad strengthened Winnipeg, and it closed 2⅝ cents higher in Canadian funds.

Mills were again after cash wheat at Chicago, and shipping sales aggregated 133,000 bushels, hedges being removed against the bulk of the business in the last few minutes of trading. Mills were credited with having bought.

Corn Futures Lower.

September corn equaled to the lowest level of the season yesterday, and the nearby futures dropped to within ⅛ cent of the previous low due to scattered selling. The country again showed a disposition to sell to arrive despite the low price, with local handlers booking 110,000 bushels for deferred shipment. Futures finished ⅛ to ¼ cents lower, with May at 25⅜ cents after selling at 25⅛ cents. July sold at 27 cents, and September 28⅝ cents at the last.

Oats were ⅛ cent lower for the day with May closing at 16⅜ cents. The latter was the only future traded in. Rye was unchanged to ⅜ cents higher, with May closing at 34¼ cents, while July was 33⅜ cents. May barley was nominally unchanged at 27½ cents.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Milder weather led to a belief that production of eggs and butter would be increased. Offerings of eggs were large and prices ¼@⅝c lower. Receipts, 14,271 cases. Butter was ½@¾c lower, with receipts 7,699 tubs. Potatoes weaker. Receipts, 90 cars, with 122 cars on track. Live hens declined ½@1c, with receipts 1 car and 31 trucks.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was firmer today, prices advancing 2 points for spot and 4 points for forward positions. Trading was not large, due to a lack of offerings. Refiners late yesterday paid 2.75 cents for 15,000 bags of Puerto Rican due next Monday and showed further interest at that price. Sales were 18,000 bags of Philippines for March-April shipment at 2.78 cents and 90,000 bags for February-May at 2.80 cents, to operators. March contracts, after opening at 2.80 cent, sold up to .84 cent, while September advanced from .94 to .98 cent, new highs for the movement and representing gains of 19 to 20 points from the season's lows. [Continued from page 25, column 2.] the railroad rates and service conform to the rates and services of their competitors, he continued.

Errors in Rate Making.

Mr. Jack said another group, known as the commodity rate revision committee, is "wasting its time and that of others in the perfectly absurd attempt to relate commodity rates to the purely empirical first class rate, losing sight entirely of the fact that it is just such technocratic rate making which has produced truck competition."

The speaker criticized some railroad officials for attempting to impose "the technocratic regulation" on their competitors which has brought the roads their present plight. He also said it was foolish to spend millions on new forms of transportation, such as water ways, when they would not increase the volume of commerce. He said if the St. Lawrence waterway is built it will not add one ton of commerce to the country, but will add greatly to our tax burden.

Politics Farmers' Burden.

Mr. Jack said the plight of the farmer is almost entirely due to his dependence on professional political office holders, or "political sirens" as he called them.

If this nation is to end its difficulties, he continued, it must stop leaning on a parasite ridden, paternalistic government to solve its problems. Instead it must return to the rugged strength of our forefathers which would develop leadership through patriotic interest and service.

"Bureaucratic government does not and cannot develop leaders," he concluded. "It develops dictators or autocrats who enslave but do not lead and who eventually bring rebellion. Professional politicians do not often develop into true statesmen."

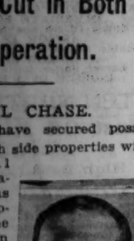
REFINANCING OF TWO PROPERTIES IS ANNOUNCED

Expenses Cut in Both by Co-Operation.

BY AL CHASE.

Bondholders have secured possession of two south side properties without the usual heavy reorganization expenses, as a result of cooperation of the equity owner in one instance and through a 100 per cent deposit by the security owners in the other, according to announcements made yesterday.



JOHN P. HOOKER. [Walinger Photo.]

Conveyance of title to the one story store building at the northeast corner of Manistee avenue and 83d street, by Herbert F. Philipsborn to the Manistee Building corporation by quitclaim deed for an indicated $21,500 completes the reorganization of the property without the expense of a protective committee.

Bonds to Be Canceled.

The building, containing six stores, was erected in 1928 and financed with a $25,000 bond issue which was defaulted in August, 1932. H. F. Philipsborn & Co. state that they negotiated a settlement whereby the property was conveyed to a trustee for benefit of all the bondholders with the understanding that the bonds be canceled and the borrower released from his personal obligations.

"This has been accomplished," states Robert M. Hepner of H. F. Philipsborn & Co., "and the property is now owned solely by the first mortgage bondholders in strict proportion to their investment." Inasmuch as a majority of these bondholders were customers of this office, the entire transaction was handled without any expense for our services."

All Bondholders Deposit.

In the other south side reorganization, that of the Tremont apartments at 709-15 West Garfield boulevard, 100 per cent deposit by the bondholders enabled the bondholders' committee to announce that it will dismiss foreclosure proceedings, thus avoiding master's fees and commissions and also making it unnecessary to pay off nondepositing bondholders, which usually requires a new loan.

The bondholders' protective committee, consisting of Walter M. Heymann, John P. Hooker, Samuel Kleinman, Morris Kurtzon, and William G. Dooley, has obtained the equitable interest and junior encumbrances, so that the property can now be conveyed in trust for the benefit of the bondholders. The liquidating trust method will be used in reorganizing the property, which will be operated by three trust managers.

"This is a splendid example of what can be done if all bondholders cooperate," said Charles Kahn, secretary of the bondholders' protective committee. This was a Liberty Trust and Savings bank issue of $66,000.
